

Fibrary of the Theological Seminary,

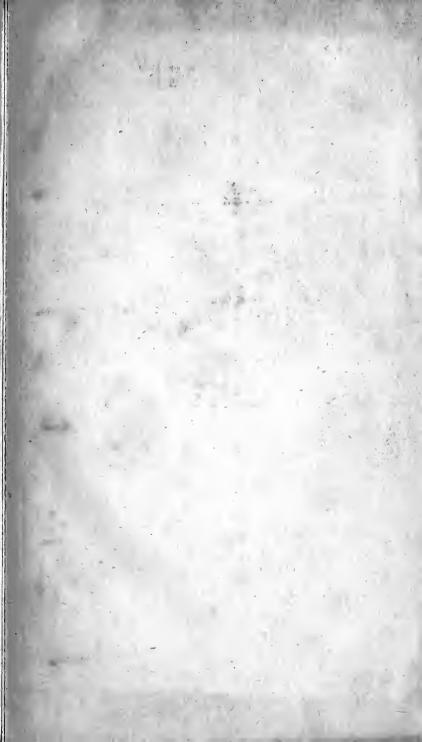

Presented by Mr. Samuel Agnew of Philadelphia, Pa.

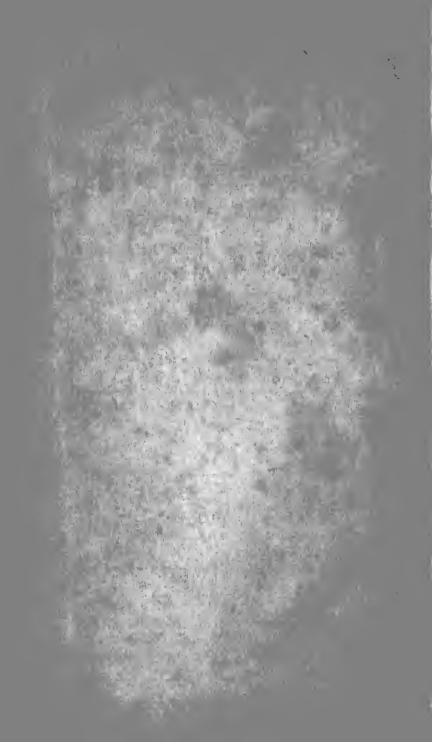

Agnero Coll. on Baptism, No.

SCC 8124

Phylics

SERMONS

On feveral

Important Subjects

OF

RELIGION and MORALITY.

To Which are added

TWO TRACTS:

I. A SUMMARY VIEW of the Doctrine of JUSTIFICATION,

II. An ENQUIRY concerning the ANTI-QUITY of the PRACTICE of INFANT-COM-MUNION, as founded on the Notion of it's STRICT NECESSITY.

In Two Volumes.

By Daniel Waterland, D. D.

Late Arch-Deacon of Middlesex, Master of Magdalen-College in Cambridge, &c. and Chap-Lain in Ordinary to His Majesty.

Publish'd from His Original MSS.

With A PREFACE,

By Joseph Clarke, M. A. Fellow of Magdalen-College in Cambridge.

Vol. II.

LONDON: Printed for W. INNYS, at the West-End of St. Paul's; and R. MANBY, at the Prince's Arms on Ludgate-Hill. M DCCXLII.

CONTENTS.

VOL. II.

SERMON I.

ST. PA U L's Wish, 'Ανάθεμα είναι ἀπὸ τἒ Χρις ε, explained and illustrated.

Rом. ix. 3.

—I could wish that My Self were accursed from Christ, for my Brethren, my Kinsmen according to the Flesh.

P. 1.

SERMON II.

A Sinless Perfection and Security of Salvation, no Prerogative of a Regenerate State.

1 Јони ііі. 9, 10.

Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit Sin, for his Seed remaineth in Him; and He cannot sin, because He is born of God. In This the Children of God are manifest, and the Children of the Devil: Whosoever doeth not Righteousness, is not of God, neither He that loveth not his Brother.

P. 19.

SERMON III.

The Scripture-Doctrine of the Unprofitableness of Man's best Performances, an Argument against Spiritual Pride; yet no Excuse for Slackness in good Works and Christian Obedience.

LUKE XVII. 10.

So likewife Ye, when Ye shall have done all those Things which are commanded You, say, We are unprofitable Servants: We have done That which was our Duty to do.

P. 39.

SERMON-IV.

The Care required in Chusing our Religious Principles, and the Steddiness in retaining them when so chosen, stated and cleared.

I THESS. V. 21.

Prove all Things: Hold fast That which is good. P. 59.

SERMON V.

The precise Nature and Force of Christ's Argument founded on Exod. iii. 6. against the Sadducees.

LUKE XX. 37, 38.

Now, that the Dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the Bush, when He calleth the Lord, the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob: For, He is not a God of the Dead, but of the Living; for All live to Him.

P. 85.

SERMON

SERMON VI.

A good Life the furest Title to a good Confcience.

1 JOHN iii. 21, 22.

Beloved, if our Heart condemn Us not, then have We Confidence towards God: And what soever We ask, We receive of Him, because We keep his Commandments, and do those Things which are pleasing in his Sight.

P. 103.

SERMON VII.

The Nature and Manner in which the Holy Spirit may be supposed to operate upon Us: And the Marks and Tokens of such Operation.

Rom. viii. 14.

As many as are led by the Spirit of God, They are the Sons of God. P. 123.

SERMON VIII.

The Springs and Motives of false Pretences to the Holy Spirit; with the Rules and Marks of trying and detecting them.

I JOHN iv. I.

Beloved, believe not every Spirit, but try the Spirits whether They are of God. P. 141.

SERMON IX.

The precise Nature of the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost.

MATTH.

Wherefore I say unto You, all Manner of Sin and Blasphemy shall be forgiven unto Men:
But the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost

Shall not be forgiven unto Men.

And Whosoever speaketh a Word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven Him: But Whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven Him, neither in this World, neither in the World to come. P. 163.

SERMON X.

The Case of Deceivers, and Deceived, considered.

EPHES. iv. 14.

That We henceforth be no more Children, toffed to and fro, and carried about with every Wind of Doctrine, by the Slight of Men, and cunning Craftiness, whereby They lie in Wait to deceive.

P. 185.

SERMON XI.

The Case of St. PAUL, in persecuting the Church.

Аст в іх. 4, 5.

And He fell to the Earth, and heard a Voice, faying unto Him; SAUL, SAUL, why perfe-cutest Thou Me?

And He said, Who art Thou, Lord? And the Lord said, I am Jesus whom Thou persecutest: It is hard for Thee to kick against the Pricks.

P. 205.

SERMON

SERMON XII.

CHRIST's Sacrifice of Himfelf explained; and Man's Duty to offer Spiritual Sacrifice inferred, and recommended.

EPHES. V. 1, 2.

Be Ye therefore Followers of God, as dear Children; and walk in Love, as Christ also hath loved Us, and hath given Himself for Us, an Offering and a Sacrifice to God for a sweet-smelling Savour.

P. 225.

SERMON XIII.

The History and Character of BALAAM.

Numb. xxii. 10, 11, 12.

And BALAAM faid unto God, BALAK the Son of ZIPPOR, King of Moab, hath fent unto Me saying,

Behold, there is a People come out of Egypt, which covereth the Face of the Earth: Come now, curse Me Them; peradventure I shall be able to overcome Them, and drive Them out.

And God said unto BALAAM, Thou shalt not go with Them, Thou shalt not curse the People: For They are blessed.

P. 245.

SERMON XIV.

The Appearance of SAMUEL, to SAUL at En-dor.

I SAM.

viii The CONTENTS.

1 SAM. XXVIII. 15, 16.

And Samuel said to Saul, Why hast Thou disquieted Me, to bring Me up? And Saul answered, I am sore distressed; and the Philistines make War against Me, and God is departed from Me, and answereth Me no more, neither by Prophets, nor by Dreams: Therefore I have called Thee, that Thou mayest make known unto Me what I shall do.

Then said SAMUEL, wherefore then dost Thou ask of Me, seeing the Lord is departed from Thee, and is become thine Enemy? P. 267.

- I. A Summary View of the Doctrine of JUS-TIFICATION.
- II. An Enquiry concerning the ANTIQUITY of the PRACTICE of INFANT-COM-MUNION, as founded on the Notion of its STRICT NECESSITY.

SERMON

St. PAUL's Wish, 'Ανάθεμα είναι ἀπὸ τ8 Xp158, explained and illustrated.

Rom. 1x. 3.

- I could wish that My Self were accursed from CHRIST, for my Brethren, my Kinsmen according to the Flesh.

HE Occasion, and general Meaning of these Words of the Apostle, are obvious enough: For St. PAUL having, in the foregoing Chapters, taught fome Doctrines which He knew would be extremely grating and offensive to the Yews, thought it the more necessary to profess how warm an Affection He had for Them all the while, in order to con-Vol. II. vince vince Them, that his telling Them unwelcome Truths, proceeded not from any Aversion or Resentment He bore towards Them, but from the Love and Tenderness He had for Them, as well as from a just Regard to the Honour of Almighty God. In the Words therefore of the Text, He expresses his fincere and great Affection for Them, declaring how much He was concerned at the Spirit of Slumber fallen upon Them, and how contentedly He could fuffer any Thing (that could be reasonable for Him to fuffer) if He might but be any Way instrumental in rescuing Them from the sad Circumstances They were in, and might procure for Them Pardon and Salvation. I could wish that My Self were accursed from CHRIST for my Brethren, &c. Very affectionate Words, strong and pathetick, the Language, doubtless, of a most generous Love, and a most exalted Charity. But while We acknowledge the Warmth and Ardency of his Affection, take We care to understand it in such a Sense, that it may be rational too; that it may be worthy of a wife and a great Man, yea of a great Apostle, and Him conducted in what He wrote, by the Holy Spirit of God. What then could He mean by wishing Himself accursed from CHRIST? Is this a Sober or a Christian Wish, as it founds at first hearing, and as express'd in these broad Terms? Some Divines of the mystick Way, have thought it reasonable for a Man to submit Himself even to everlasting Misery, to serve the Ends of God's Glory, and the general Good of Mankind: But the Thought is shocking, and the Thing impracticable: No Man can do it; neither is it rational, or pious, either to suppose, that God could admit of fo abfurd a Thing, or be pleas'd with a Wish so wild and extravagant. The more judicious Divines therefore, being fenfible of this, while they have understood St. PAUL's Words of the Curfe everlasting, yet have had recourse to Figure in the other Parts, and call'd it, upon the whole, a strong Hyperbolical Expression, such as ought not to be rigouroully interpreted up to the Letter.

But still there may be a third Way thought on, better than Either of the Former; which is to examine strictly into the Original Greek, whether it may not justly bear a milder and less exceptionable Rendring. It is observable, that the Words, 'Avadema eival, which We render by accursed, often signify no more than being devoted to temporal Death, or being made a Sacrifice of: And the Words and to the Words and the Words and signify after Yol. II.

A 2 Christ,

CHRIST, that is, after the Example of CHRIST. Let the whole Sentence then run thus: I could be content, nay I should rejoyce, to be made a Sacrifice My Self, after CHRIST (or as CHRIST has been before me) for my Brethren, my Kinsmen according to the Flesh. The Greek Words [and τω Χριςω will fignify after CHRIST, as well as the like Phrase [ano wpoyivwv,] elsewhere used by St. PAUL, fignifies after my Forefathers, or as my Forefathers have before Me. I thank my God whom I serve from my Forefathers, or as my Forefathers have done before Me. So then, the true, and the literal Sense of the Apostle in the Text is neither more nor less than This, that He wish'd to be devoted even to Death, for the eternal Salvation of his Brethren the Yews, in like Manner as CHRIST, his High Leader, had been devoted before Him. For as He taught his Doctrine, fo He was defirous also to follow the Example of his Sufferings, as far as He might be capable of fo doing.

The Rendring of the Text being thus corrected, and the Sense cleared, what I have more to say upon it, may be easy and plain. In the Text, as now construed, Two Things are offered to our serious and devout Meditation.

St. PAUL's Wish explained.

I. The exceeding great Love of Christ, in fubmitting Himself to Death, to be made a Sacrifice for the Salvation of Mankind.

II. The good Apostle's ardent Zeal and Desire, to die in like Manner, after Christ's Example, for the Salvation of his Brethren. Of these two Articles I shall distinctly treat in their Order.

I.

Let us duly weigh and confider the exceeding great Love of our Saviour Christ, shewn in submitting Himself to Death, to be made a Sacrifice, for the Salvation of Mankind. The Height and Depth of his Love towards Mankind will best appear from a Confideration of the Circumstances of that so generous, and so adorable an Act of Loving-kindness. Consider Who it was that did it, What He did, for Whom, and for what Ends. All these Circumstances have their Weight, and very much enhance the Value of the Thing done, as well as heighten the Obligation.

1. The Person who submitted to suffer for us, was a very great and extraordinary Person; not a meer Man, not an Angel, or an Archangel, but infinitely higher still, even the Eternal Son of God; Who took Flesh upon Him, that He might be capable of suffering, bleeding, and dying for Us. Here lies the particular Stress and Emphasis of the Thing, according to the Scripture-Account of it; that God fent so great, so dear, and so divine a Person to die for us. For God so loved the World, that he gave his only-begotten Son a. In This was manifested the Love of God towards Us, because, that God fent his only-begotten Son into the World, &c.b The Majesty and Greatness of the Person sent, heightens the Favour, and indears it to Us; as it is the greater Condescension in Him, and does the greater Honour to Us. St. PAUL expresses the whole Thing in very strong and lively Terms, thus: Who being in the Form of God, thought it not Robbery to be equal with God; but, nevertheless, made Himself of no Reputation, and took upon Him the Form of a Servant, and so onc. See what an Emphasis is here laid upon the Dignity of the Person doing it. He was one that had the Form, the Majesty of God, and had a Right to be revered, honoured, and adored as God; and yet He submitted to become a Servant, by taking upon Him the Nature of Man, and in that Nature He died. Wonderful Condescension, and most disinterested Love, such as no inferior Person could have shown towards Us! Had the highest Angel gel or Archangel, had the brightest Cherub or Seraph done it, the Kindness had been Nothing in Comparison; because They are All Creatures of God, infinitely short of the Dignity of the Son of God: And however great They are, They are yet capable of being made greater, and of receiving fresh Honour and Dignity as a Reward for Well-doing; so that Their ferying Us, would have been at the fame Time ferving Themselves. But the Eternal Son of God was fo High and fo Divine in Himfelf, that He was above being promoted higher: He could have no Interest of his Own to serve, no Ambition of his Own to gratify, in What He did: It was all done purely for Our Benefit; was perfectly free and generous, fuch as No Creature whatever could have shown towards Us. In a word, his Kindness excelled all that ever was done by created Beings, as much as the Dignity of his Person excelled Theirs; and that is infinitely.

 \mathbf{A}_{2}

³ John iii. 16. ⁵ 1 John iv. 9. ^c Phil. ii. 6, 7.

2. Next, let us consider What He did, as well as Who did it, to give Us the more lively and affecting Idea of his Love towards Us. He made Himself of no Reputation, says the Apostle, took upon him the Form of a Servant, and was made in the Likeness of Men: That is to say, He veil'd his Glories, He drew a Curtain (as it were) over his high and adorable Godhead, condescending to take Part with frail Mortality, and to converse with Dust and Ashes. But This was not all: For the Apostle goes on; Being found in Fashion as a Man, He humbled Himself, yet farther, and became obedient to Death, to the most painful and ignominious Death, even the Death of the Crossa. This was descending, as it were, from the highest Pinnacle of Glory, to the lowest Circumstances of Difgrace, For Crucifixion was a Punishment inflicted by the Romans upon Slaves only and Fugitives, and was look'd upon as the most shameful of all their Ways of dispatching Criminals. Besides which, It is to be confidered, that, according to the Maxim of the Yewish Law, He that is hanged is accursed of Godb, which is the Text that St. PAUL refers to, where He fays, CHRIST hath redeemed Us from the Curse of the Law, being made a Curse for Us; For it is written, Curfed is Every One that hangeth on a Tree c. He was made a Curse for Us, in the same Sense as He was made Sin for Usd. and as St. PETER expresses it, bare our Sins in bis own Body on the Tree. That is to say, He stood in the Place of Sinners, and was contented to fuffer

A 4

² Phil ii. 7, 8.

b Deut. xxi 23.

e Gal. ili. 13.

d 2 Cor. v. 21.

c 1 Pet. ii. 24.

fuffer in their Stead, and to be treated in fuch Manner as They ought to have been treated, or as their Sins had deferved. This was an Instance of exceeding great Love and Condescension, submitting to appear as a Criminal, and to take upon Him all the Shame, and Odium, and Ignominy that belong to Sinners, tho' He had no Sins of his Own. He was content to be accurfed, in a certain Sense, that is to be devoted to Death, and to bear the Punishment of Sin, which Sin had the Curse of God attending it; a Curfe, which CHRIST alone was able to take off. The Sins of the whole World were laid upon Him: He bare them, and took them upon Himself, suffering and dying for them; fo great was his Condescension, fo wonderful his Love towards Mankind. And this reminds Us.

3. Of another Circumstance in this Affair, the Persons for Whom He died; not for the Well-deserving, or Innocent, but for Sinners, and Sinners against Himself. St. Paul takes particular Notice of this Circumstance also, making Use of it as a proper Consideration for the magnifying and illustrating the Love of Christ. Scarcely for a righteous (or just) Man will One die: yet peradventure for a good Man Some would even dare to die: But God commendets eth his Love towards Us, in that While We were yet Sinners, CHRIST died for Us 2. As much as to fay, that It is a very rare Thing, that Any One should die for the sake of an honest, or just Man; and not very common to do it. even for a kind and most obliging Friend: But to be content to die for Those Who were neither kind, nor just, but the contrary; to die for Sinners and Rebels, This is a Height of Generofity beyond the common Measures, is without Precedent, and above all Comparison. Such was the Love of CHRIST towards Mankind, Who had deferved no fuch Favour at his Hands, having rebelled against Him, and acted in Opposition to Him! Greater Love hath No Manthan This, that a Man lay down his Life for his Friendb. But our Lord's Love was vastly greater, that He laid down his Life even for his Enemies. -When We were Enemies. We were reconciled to God by the Death of his Son c. The Just suffered for the Unjust, as St. PETER observesd; which is such an Instance of generous Love, as no History can parallel, nor any human Thought or Imagination reach up to.

4. But there is a further Confideration, which enhances the Value of it, and still more abundantly endears it to Us; which is, the End and Design

^{*} Rom. v. 7, 8. b John xv. 13. c Rcm. v. 10. d 1 Pet. iii. 18.

Design of it, and the happy Consequences which it is directed to, and aims at. It is not barely to rescue Mankind from Punishment, and from eternal Misery, but It is to exalt Them to the highest and most desirable Privileges; and to confer upon Them everlasting Life, Glory, and Happiness. In This was manifested the Love of God towards Us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the World, that We might live through Him a. But in another Place, St. John is yet more expressive and emphatical, in these Words: God so loved the World, that He gave his only begotten Son, that Whosoever believeth in Him, should not perish, but have everlasting Life b. So then every Way, and in every Light, the Love of CHRIST towards Us is very apparent, and is beyond all Parallel. The eternal Son of God, equal with God, vouchsafed to humble Himself, to suffer, bleed and die, for Sinners, in Order to purchase for Them, not Pardon only, but Rewards, great and everlasting Rewards in the highest Heavens. Having thus endeavoured, however imperfectly, to fet forth the exceeding great Love of CHRIST in dying for Us, I now pass on to the Second Article contained also in the Text;

II.

The good Apostle's ardent Zeal, and Defire, to die in like Manner, and after CHRIST'S. Example, for the Salvation of his Brethren. I could wish that My Self were accursed from (or, after) CHRIST; that is, as CHRIST was before Me, for my Brethren, &c. We are not to suppose, that the Apostle had a Thought of coming up, in any perfect Measure, to the great Example fet by our Blessed Lord: But He was willing and defirous to copy after Him, in fuch Meafure and Degree as He was capable of, and to follow his Pattern as far as He was able, by an humble and awful Imitation of Him. very well knew, that one great Use among others, of our Lord's Sufferings, was, to instruct and stir us up to follow the Example. This is the Use which St. PAUL points to, where He fays, Let this Mind be in You, which was alfo in Christ Iesus; Who being in the Form of God, and fo on a. St. John, the beloved Difciple, is very express and particular, in setting forth the Love of CHRIST, as an Example and Pattern for our Imitation. Hereby perceive We the Love of God, because He laid down his Life for Us: And We (in Conformity) ought to lay down Our Lives for the Brethren b. Observe, It is not here said, for Enemies, for Persecutors, but for the Brethren, ^{*} Phil ii. 5, 6. b 1 John iii. 16.

Brethren. I know not whether St. PAUL'S Example, in the Text, did not go beyond What St. JOHN here mentions as the bounden Duty of Every common Christian. It should seem by the emphatical Manner of Expression, which St. PAUL made Use of, that He himself thought it no ordinary Degree of Affection, no common Protestation, I could wish that My Self were accurfed, and fo on. And indeed the very Nature of the Thing shews, that it was not. For the Persons for whose sake He was so very willing to die the Death, were not his particular Friends, no nor fo much as Christian Brethren: His Brethren They had been, and They were now harden'd and obstinate Yews, Whom He had deferted, and Whom God had abandoned, and Who were St.PAUL's bitterest Enemies, and as great Enemies to the Gospel; yet fuch was his Affection even for Them, fuch his friendly Disposition towards Them, that He could have been content, yea glad, to have been made a Curse, that is, to have suffered any the most painful and ignominious Death, to do Them Service; to avert their Mifery, and to promote their true Happiness. This was noble and generous, as well as charitable; was an Instance of Heroick Love, much refembling our Bleffed Saviour's, being almost above above human, and coming as near to divine, as Flesh and Blood was capable of doing. There is one more Instance of like Kind in holy Scripture, and but one, that belong'd to meer Man: It was of a very great Prophet, Lawgiver, and Saint; I mean Moses, the meekest Man then upon Earth. When the Israelites had grievously affronted Him, and offended God as much, by making the Golden Calf, yet then (as it were forgiving and forgetting all their Rudeness towards Him) He begged to be Himself blotted out of the Book of Life, rather than the People should suffer Extremities. Yet now, if thou wilt (fays He in his Prayer to God), forgive their Sin; or if not, blot Me, I pray Thee, out of thy Book which Thou bast written 2. Blotting out of God's Book is of the fame Importance with blotting out one's Name from under Heaven b. Which is an Expression signifying temporal Death and Destruction. Accordingly, Moses defired to die, or to be destroyed Himself, from off the Land of the Living, rather than live to fee his Nation perish, his People suffer, however justly They had deserved it. That Instance of Mo-SES, though very like This of St. PAUL, yet does not fully come up to it; because Moses was more nearly related to the Ifraelites of that Time, and had a closer Interest and Concern with Them, than St. PAUL could have with the Yews of his Time, whose Religion and Party He had left for the Christian Church. However, both those Instances are very admirable, and come the nearest to the Divine Pattern set by our Lord, of any We shall meet with. The Use which We are to make of all these Instances, or Examples, is to learn to put on Tenderness and Compassion towards All Men; and even towards Those Who are not of our Society, Profession, Religion, or Party; those who have no Respect for Us, or are even prejudiced against Us. There is a Degree of Pity and Regard due even to very ill Men, to Ungodly, and Sinners: Not to be shown by careffing Them, and fmiling upon Them, but by earnest and ardent Endeavours to reclaim Them. It is afflicting to a good Man to observe how Sinners run headlong on to their own Ruin: And though it may be faid, that They deferve the less Pity because it is their own Fault, and They choose to do so; yet there is something really pitiable in that Depravity of Will, and Blindness of Heart, which drives Them on to make fuch ill Choices. There is not a more forlorn and miserable Wretch under Heaven, than than an over-grown Sinner, become mad, desperate, and incurable in his Sins. For, though fuch Persons regard neither God nor Man, nor have any Mercy or Tenderness for Friend or Brother, but would go any Lengths in Mifchief, and fet the World on Fire (if it lay in their Power); yet We very well know, all the while, that They are weak and impotent, are under Bridle and Restraint, and must wait for God's Leave before They can do any Thing. The utmost They can do, is only to afflict and torment good Men for a Time here, while They Themselves lie exposed to eternal Vengeance, to Torments everlasting hereafter. This Confideration may fometimes move a good Man's Pity and tender Compassion, as was St. PAUL's Case in the Text, while He lamented over the hardened Jews, his Adversaries and Persecutors, and would have wished even Himself to die a thousand Deaths for Them. fo He might but reform and fave Them. This affectionate Temper of Mind, this benevolent Disposition towards All Men, is What the Text recommends to Us in two Examples, One of our Bleffed Lord himfelf, and the Other of our Lord's Apostle. Learn We from Both to be kind, friendly, and compassionate One towards Another, and to have a true Value and Concern Concern both for the Bodies and the Souls of Men. We shall find Matter enough for our Exercise and Improvement in this heavenly Disposition, and shall have Occasions, more than One would wish, to excite Us to it; for Sin and Wickedness abound daily. Evil Men and Seducers wax worse and worse, deceiving and being deceived a. But let it be Our Care, in the first Place, to continue stedfast in the Things that We have learned, knowing of Whom We have learned them: And in the next Place, to do our best to convince, and reclaim Sinners from their evil Ways, to fave their Souls from Death, and thereby to bring Glory to Almighty God, and to make Joy in Heaven over Eye= ry Sinner fo repenting.

was

2 7 Tim. iii. 13.

SERMON II.

A Sinless Perfection and Security of Salvation, no Prerogative of a Regenerate State.

1 John iii. 9, 10.

Whosoever is born of God, doth not commit Sin, for his Seed remaineth in Him; and He cannot sin, because He is born of God. In this the Children of God are manifest, and the Children of the Devil: Whosoever doeth not Righteousness, is not of God, neither He that loveth not his Brother.

OR the right understanding of these Words, it will be proper to note something of the Occasion and Design of them, so far as may be probably learned from

Church-History. The Apostle had said but Vol. II. B 2 two

20 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative

two Verses before, Little Children, let no Man deceive you: He that doth Righteousness is righteous, even as He [that is, CHRIST] is righteous. It feems, there were fome at that Time of Day, who prefumed to think Themselves righteous, and born of God, without the Practice of Holiness; and They had endeavoured to seduce Others into that strange and absurd, or rather wicked, Perswasion. Therefore said the Apoftle, to his own Converts, or Followers, Little Children, let no Man deceive you; that is to fay, by fair Speeches, plaufible Infinuations, or false Colourings. Those Deceivers, probably, were some Disciples of SIMON MAGUS: For That Impostor had taught, that Men are faved by Grace only, without any Regard to good Works 2. As if Gospel-Righteousness were no necessary Condition for the enjoying Gospel-Privileges; or as if Men might be born of God, and become Heirs of Salvation, independent of Christian Holiness, though Scripture is express, that without Holiness no Man shall see the Lord b. In Opposition to fuch dangerous Principles, the good Apostle afferts, and strongly inculcates, the Necessity of a pure Heart, and Life, to denominate any Person good, and to entitle entitle Him to the Privileges of Christian Son-ship. Whosever is born of God, doth not commit Sin: And a little after, Whosever doeth not Righteousness, is not of God. He fixes the Point both Ways, to inforce it the more strongly: If a Person is of God, He will of course abstain from the Practice of Sin: Or, if He does not, besides, practise Righteousness, performing his bounden Duty, He is not of God, but is a Child of the Devil. Words so full, and so express, as to bear no Dispute, nor to admit of Evasion. In discoursing farther, I shall endeavour to state and clear the Particulars here following:

² Iren. l. 1. c. 20. Theodorit. Hæret. Fab. l. t. c. 1. Grabe Annot. ad Ball. Harm. Apost. p. 13, 33. Exam. cen. p. 5. ^b Heb. xii. 14.

I. To shew, negatively, what the Text does not mean.

II. To shew, positively, what its true and full Meaning is.

III. To point out the Practical Use and Improvement of the whole.

T.

I shall endeavour to shew, negatively, what the Text does not mean, in Order to prevent Scruples, and to obviate Misconstructions.

I. The Text most undoubtedly concerns Grown Persons, and does not directly concern Infants. Infants are not capable of doing Righteousness, though capable of being born of Gad in Baptism: They preserve that regenerate State, once entered into, 'till They become guilty of actual, and grievous Sin. Of This there can be no Dispute: They are justified at the same Time that They are regenerated, and are therefore righteous in God's fight; and accordingly They are interpretatively included in St. John's Rule, though not specially considered by Him. The Gain-Sayers, whom He opposed, pretended that even Grown Persons, not practifing Righteousness, but living under the Dominion of Sin, were in a State of Salvation notwithstanding. That was the Doctrine which the Apostle here laboured to correct: Infants were no Way concerned in it, and fo there was no need to make an Exception for Their Cafe.

B 3

22 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative

2. I must further observe, that the Text does not mean to exclude any Persons from Salvation, who are really Penitent, or whose Hearts are really changed, or renewed, and only want Time to bring forth the Fruit of good Works; Such, for instance, as the Penitent Thief upon the Cross. Indeed, Good Works are justly interpreted to mean either inward, or outward Works. There are the inward Works of sincere Faith, humble Contrition, Detestation of Sin, Trust in the divine Mercy, firm Reliance on the Merits of Christ, together with with cordial Resolutions of a thorough Amendment: Works of this Kind transacted within, if fuch a Person should be suddenly taken off, will be interpreted as Works of Righteousness. by God who knows the Heart. Therefore This also is a Case which falls within the Equity, or even the Letter of the Apostle's Rule, 'O Ποιων τίω Δικαιωσύνω, He that doeth Righteoufness, or He that makes Righteousness, be it outwardly or inwardly, He is righteous. False Teachers, Whom the Apostle here oppofed, required neither outward nor inward Righteousness, but promised Salvation to their deluded Hearers, without Regard to Either, independent of Both alike. Therefore St. John's Rule may reasonably be understood with a tacite Exception to the Case of inward Righteoufnefs, which had Nothing to do with the main Question then in Hand: For, the Queflion was not about dying Penitents, but about Persons living in Impenitency, and under the Dominion of Sin.

3. I must add, thirdly, that the Text does not mean to exclude All that are in any Degree Sinners, from a State of Salvation; for in some Sense All Men are Sinners; and the same Apostle, in the same Epistle, says, If We say that We have no Sin, We deceive Our Selves, and the Truth is not in Usa. And if We fay, that We have not sinned, We make CHRIST a Liar, and his Word is not in Usb. St. John does not fay, that God's Children have no Sin, but that They do not commit Sin. The Phrases are somewhat alike, but they are not the same; neither do they bear the same Signification, but widely differ-To have no Sin means to be altogether Sinless, from first to last; which No mere Man ever was, or will be: But not to commit Sin, or not to make Sin, not to be a Sin-Maker, in this Place means only, the forbearing to fin with an high Hand, or abstaining from the grievous and presumptuous Kind of Sins. The Children of God, as fuch, are not altogether Sinle/s; but if They have formerly finned in any grievous Manner, They are truly Penitent, and They do so no more; and the Sins which They remain yet subject to, are Sins of Infirmity, fuch as All are in some Degree liable to, and fuch as are not imputed under a Covenant of Grace. This Distinction of Sins, into Sins of Presumption, and Sins of Infirmity, (otherwise called Sins of Daily Incursion) is an old Distinction in the Church, and is abundantly warranted by many Scripture-Texts, which I need not here mention. It is sufficient to have observed, that the Apostle is here to be explained by that Distinction; for it is certain and manifest, that He did not mean to teach that the Children of God, as fuch, are, or can be, altogether without Sin, like as our Blessed Lord Himself was. There is No mere Man that finneth not 2. There is not a perfectly just Man upon Earth, that doeth good, and sinneth not b. For, in many Things We offend All c. Which is chiefly to be understood of our many Omissions and Failures of Duty, through unavoidable Ignorance, or Infirmity, either forgetting and overlooking fome Articles of Duty, or not performing them with all that Care and Exactness which might have been used by Us. But I proceed.

24 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative

ed,

is

ĮĬ.

Having observed to you, negatively, what the Doctrine of the Text does not mean, I am next to shew, positively, what it does mean. The true and full Meaning is, That the Children of God, considered as Such, do, by the Assistance of God's Grace present with Them, lead a good Life, discharging every Duty incumbent upon Them, with a conscientious Care to the utmost of their Ability, and abstaining from presumptuous and damning Transgressions. Such were Zacharias and Elisabeth, of Whom It

vi. 36. Lings viii. 46. 2 Chron. Ecclef. vii. 20. James iii. 2.

26 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative

is recorded by St. LUKE, that They were Both righteous before God, walking in all the Commandments and Ordinances of the Lord, blameless 2. That is to fay, They lived in fo holy, and fo exemplary a Manner, as to be both acceptable to God, and approved of Men, in St. PAUL's Phrase, on another Occasion b; or having always a Conscience void of offence toward God and toward Men: These are such as our Lord speaks of, under the Name of just Persons, needing no Repentanced; and righteous Persons, whom He came not to call to Repentancee, that is, to an entire Change, but to Improvement and Increase in Godliness: Not but that Repentance belongs to All Men, in the same Sense as All Men are Sinners: But as Repentance, in a stricter Sense, means an entire Change of Heart and Life towards God; if a Man's Heart was before fet right, He will not want to be so changed in the main, but to be carried on in the same good Way He was in, to higher Perfection. Now, to return to the Words of the Text: The Apostle here supposes that the Children of God are righteous, just, and blameless in such a Sense as-I have mention'd, walking in the Ways of God, confcientiously keeping God's Holy Will and

² Luke i. 6.

b Rom. xiv. 18.

c Acts xxiv. 16.

d Lüke xv. 7.

c Luke v. 32.

and Commandments, and not living under the Dominion of Sin, or the Power of evil Habits. In this Sense, He declares that They do not commit Sin, subjoining this Reason, that God's Seed remaineth in Them, therefore They do not fin. And He further adds, which is yet a stronger Expression, that They cannot sin, because They are born of God. How cannot? May not Regenerate Persons fall into Sin, or fall from Grace, yea and fall finally? Yes, certainly They may: All the Scripture-Exhortations to Perseverance or Stedfastness manifestly suppose it; and some Scripture-Texts directly teach it; and even St. PAUL, That Chosen Veffel, did as good as intimate, that He might Himself be in Danger of falling off, when He faid; I keep under my Body, and bring it into Subjection; lest that by any means, when I have preached to Others, I My Self should be a Castaway 2. How then must We understand that the Regenerate cannot fin, cannot fall away? We may best understand the Words in a qualified Sense, not so as to mean that They absolutely cannot, but that They cannot without great Force and Violence to their regenerate Nature, to their renewed Frame and Disposition of Mind, and to that Principle of Grace with-

28 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative

in Them, which powerfully restrains Them from it. So We commonly fay of a good-natured Man, that He cannot do an hard Thing; or of a well-bred Man, that He cannot do an ungenteel thing: It would be a Force upon his Nature, and a Contradiction to the Principle upon which He commonly acts and conducts Himfelf. In like Manner, but in a higher Degree, a true Child of God, or a fincere Disciple of CHRIST. cannot allow Himself in finful Courses: His own Heart will reproach Him warmly if He does; and the Principle of Grace within Him will warn him back very strongly, only not irrefifiably: For, the Holy Spirit of God does not fo move or over-rule our Wills, as to render us mere Machines. Such a qualified Sense of the Words, can and cannot, is very common in ordinary Discourse, and in all Writings, and particularly in the Sacred Writings. I shall take Notice but of one remarkable Instance. namely of Joseph, when tempted to commit Sin: How can I, says He, do this great Wickedness, and sin against God ?? thereby intimating, that He could not do it: He had more Sense, He had more Grace, than to do a vile Thing. He had God before his Eyes: He had a prevailing Principle of Religion within; He had an honest and an upright Heart; and while He had, He could not act wickedly. In short, a good Man may by degrees grow carelessand negligent, secure and thoughtless, and so his Conscience may be laid afleep; the HOLY SPIRIT may thereupon defert Him, and SATAN may enter in: But as foon as this comes to be the Case. He is no longer the good Man He was, no longer a Child of God, in St. John's Sense of the Name. Therefore the Apostle's Meaning in the Text is no more than This, That a good Man, as fuch, cannot do a wicked Thing: He must first lose That Principle of Goodness, That Seed of God fown in his Heart; He must lose it, I fay, by fome very blameable Negligence of his own, before he can confent to fin with a high Hand against God. God has no where promifed, that his Spirit shall abide with any Man, any longer than while he watches and prays. Therefore our Lord fays, Watch and pray, that ye enter not into Temptation a: And again; What I say unto You, I say unto All, But here, perhaps, Some may be bold to object or argue: How can a Child of God, Who, as Such, is the Temple of the HOLY Spirit, how can He grow careless, or negligent? Will not That Same Spirit, dwelling in Him, keep

^{*} Matt. xxvi, 41.

Mark xin. 37.

30 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative

keep Him awake and attentive, exciting, instructing, and affisting Him both to watch and to pray? For, is it not faid, That the Spirit helpeth our Infirmities? Are We not told, That We know not what We should pray for, as We ought, unless the Spirit it self assist us in it a? It is fo faid, and all that is faid is ftrictly true: But it is no where faid, that the Spirit does every Thing, and We Nothing at all; for then the Act would not be in any Sense Ours, or however not Ours in fuch a Sense as to render it Virtue in Us, or to make Us capable of what is properly called Reward. The Spirit does excite, He does not compel: He instructs and affifts, He inclines and moves; but by foft Calls and gentle Whispers, such as may be refisted, and often are resisted; otherwise, how come We to hear of grieving the Holy Spirit of Godb, and of quenching the Spirit ? And if the Spirit were to do all, and Man himself Nothing, how comes it that St. PAUL exhorts TI-MOTHY to stirup the Gift of God which is in Himd? An Eloquent FATHER of the Ancient Church illustrates the whole Case by an apt and familiar Comparison: "As Fire must have Fewel laid on, " from Time to Time, that it may have Some-" thing to work upon, and may not go out; fo " the

² Rom. viii. 26.

b Eph. iv. 30.

^{6 1} Theff. v. 19.

d 2 Tim. i. 6.

" the Grace of God must find Submission and " Compliance, Alacrity and Readiness of Mind " on our Part, for it to thrive upon, and to " keep up the Holy Flame of the Spirit." To fum up this Matter in few Words: This is certain, that in the Works of Grace, the HOLY SPIRIT bears a principal Part, and Man a subordinate one, and Both concur to the same good Act; so that while the Act is Ours, the Glory of it is entirely God's. But it is not for Us, to determine precifely the exact Boundaries of the Divine Operations, fo as to be able to fay, fo much and no more is the Spirit's Share in the Act, and so much Ours. It is sufficient, that all our good Works are fome Way or other, in some Proportion or other, the Result of Grace and of Free-will together: And if Any Man falls from That Grace, and fo falls into Sin; the true Account of it is, that while the Spirit does all that divine Wisdom saw proper in that Case, the Man was wanting with Respect to His Part, refusing to be led, or taking no Care to watch and pray with that Fervour and Diligence, which was reasonably expected of Him. Thus the Children of God may, by their own Sloth and Supineness, cease to be such, for the Time being, 'till they repent and recover; or for ever, if They repent not at all: But in the mean while, St. John's Doctrine stands firm and unshaken; that God's Children, as such, or so abiding, do not commit Sins of a grievous Kind: It is a Contradiction to the very Principle which They are supposed to be governed by, to say that They do. They may lose That Principle, and thereupon lose their Sonship also: But while They keep it alive and awake, They can no more act against it, than a Man can act in any other Case against his prevailing or predominant Principle, whatsoever it be. If You could suppose Him to act against it, It could not then be called, in That Instance, his prevailing or ruling Principle: For, if it were, it must have prevailed and ruled.

32 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative

III.

Having now done with my first two Heads, intended to state and clear St. John's Doctrine in the Text, It remains now only, to point out the Practical Use and Improvement of it, in some sew pertinent Considerations built upon it.

From hence We may competently perceive, upon what Terms we stand with Almighty God, and what Title We have to be upon the List of his domestick Servants, his real and faithful Children. True Faith and Obedience are the Tenure by which We must hold; and there there is no other Ground whereon We can fafely stand. Many Expedients have been thought on whereby to shift off Duty, and to fecure, if it were possible, the Reward. The Prize of our High-calling is great, noble, and infinitely defirable: But the Burden of Duty, the Restraints of Obedience, are found to bear hard upon Flesh and Blood: And how have Mens Wits been at Work, now for 1700 Years together, to find out fome one Expedient or other, for the reconciling a bad Life with true Peace of Mind, and with Expectations of Heaven! It would be tedious, perhaps impossible, to recount the feveral Ways that have been made use of for that Purpose. I shall content My Self with naming one or two, fuch as whole Seets have taken into, paffing by innumerable others which private Perfons have contrived for Themselves. A naked Faith was an old Device: It is particularly confuted by St. JAMES; and more need not be faid of it. Some have pleased Themselves with the Thoughts of being among the Elect, and thereupon fecure of Salvation: But their Misfortune is, that They can never be certain of Their being in the Number of the Elect, in their Sense of the Word, but by living a good VOL. II.

34 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative

good Life, and persevering in it, all their Days. St. PAUL understood perfectly how this Matter is; and He fays, We are made Partakers of Christ, if We hold the Beginning of our Confidence stedfast unto the Enda. If We hold fast the Confidence and the Rejoicing of the Hope firm unto the Endb. Some perhaps may prefume to fay, We can hold fast our Considence, our strong Assurance of our own Salvation to the End. But St. PAUL did not mean vain Confidence, or groundless Assurance, but a rational and well-grounded Hope, built upon the Merits of CHRIST, and the Consciousness of living an Holy Life. Therefore in another Chapter, lower down, He varies his Phrase, and says, We defire that Every One of You do shew the same Diligence to the full Assurance of Hope unto the End: That Ye be not flothful, but Followers of Them, Who through Faith and Patience inherit the Promises. Considence will not anfwer, without Something very folid and fubstantial to build such Confidence upon.

Many have flattered Themselves, that They have had the revealing Evidence of the Spirit, the Voice of the Spirit of God, bearing inward Testimony to their Spirits: For, St. PAUL

- favs,

^a Heb. iii. 14. ^b Heb. iii. 6. ^c Heb. vi. 11, 12.

fays, The Spirit it felf beareth Witness with Our Spirit, that We are the Children of Goda. But St. PAUL also says, in the same Chapter, that there is no Condemnation to Them- Who walk after the Spirit, and Who are led by the Spirit of Godb. So that, at length, this Testimony of the Spirit resolves entirely into the Certainty We have of our bringing forth the Fruits of the Spirit. Strong Assurance will fignify little; for That may be groundless: Fulness of Yoy will avail as little, because it may be a False Joy, or a Golden Dream. Besides that, when St. PAUL told the Philippians, that it was God that worked in Them both to will and to do, of his good Pleasure, He did not therefore bid Them be confident of their Salvation, or full of Assurance on that Score: But He bad Them work out their own Salvation with Fear and Trembling c. As much as if He had faid, God is your Helper, therefore do not despond: But then again, because God is your Helper, and works with You, therefore behave as becomes You, before the tremendous Majesty, with humble Reverence, with anxious Care and Dread, with the utmost Diligence and ready Compliance, left, if You should work under C 2 Vol. II. fuch fuch a Guide, in a negligent and careless Manner, altogether unworthy of so Divine a Master, He should at length desert You, and leave You to go on by Your Selves.

² Rom. viii, 16. 6 Rom. viii. 1, 14. 6 Philip. ii. 12, 13.

36 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative

Indeed, Divine Wisdom knows Human Frame too well, to give Any of Us infallible Affurances of our Reward, before We have done our Work; lest those very Assurances should make Us secure and negligent, and render Us altogether uncapable of being received into those pure and bright Mansions Above. God has told Us plainly, upon what Terms He will accept Us, through the Merits of CHRIST; and He leaves Us to discover the rest, as far as We reasonably and honestly may, by comparing Our Own Lives with those Gospel-Terms. This is all, and This is fufficient for a State of Probation: Only, the farther to check vain Presumption, whatever present Advances We may have made, We are still left in the Dark as to our future Behaviour, and All depends upon our persevering unto the End. St. PAUL, as I before hinted, above Twenty Years after his Conversion, still spake so humbly of Himself, as almost to fear, lest He might become a Cast-away. Five Years after That, He began to discover some Degrees of Assurance, but still supposing Himself not very far from his End. At the very last, which was Five Years later, when He had fought his good Fight, kept the Faith, and finished his Course, and was preparing to die a Martyr, Then, and not 'till Then, He thought it became Him (and He had the Revelation of God to warrant Him) to express the strongest Assurances of his High Reward in Heaven. Let Christians of a much lower Class, learn from thence, to think and speak modestly of their own Case. If They wait for their full and compleat Assurance, 'till They are on the other Side the Grave; They will, probably, be the furer to find it there, for their speaking and thinking fo bumbly and modestly of Themselves here. Comfortable Hopes, along with a Life fuitable, are fufficient Encouragement for a good Christian to proceed with: More than That might be burtful to Us, as rather obstructing, than furthering the great Work of Salvation: Not but that God may fometimes, in Cases extraordinary, fill pious Minds, especially if very near their Departure, and when fuch Indulgence can do no Harm, with joyous Raptures, and fuper-abundant Affurances: But I speak of what may ordinarily be expected in our Christian Warfare. To conclude— As our Acceptance hereafter depends entirely upon our careful and conscientious Conduct here; so let Every Man take Care to walk warily and circumspectly, and to rise in Assurance in Proportion to his so doing, growing in Grace, and increasing in all virtuous and godly Living, and so at length making his Calling and Election sure.

38 Sinless Perfection no Prerogative, &c.

SERMON

SERMON III.

The Scripture-Doctrine of the Unprofitableness of Man's best Performances, an Argument against Spiritual Pride; yet no Excuse for Slackness in good Works and Christian Obedience.

LUKE XVII.

So likewise Ye, when Ye shall have done all those Things which are commanded You, say, We are unprofitable Servants: We have done That which was our Duty to do.

HESE Words are the Conclusion of a Parable, a Kind of Moral fubjoined to it, to fignify the Use and Application of it. Our Bleffed Lord had put the Cafe of a labouring Servant coming Home from the Field,

Field, to wait upon his Master at the Table, performing that additional Service after his other Labours of the Day; providing a Supper for his Master, in the first Place, and attending Him patiently all the Time, and after That, content to provide for Himfelf. After our Lord had thus represented the Case, He makes his Reflections upon it, in these Words: Doth He (that is, the Master) thank that Servant, because He did the Things that were commanded kim? I trow not: I suppose not. So likewise Ye, with regard to your Heavenly Master, when Ye skall have done all those Things which are commanded you, it will become, it will behove You to fay; We are unprofitable Servants; We have only done That which it was our bounden Duty Therefore We deserve no Thanks from Him, nor have any strict Claim to a Reward from Him: But it is sufficient if our Service is but accepted; for to have neglected it where it was due, would have deserved Stripes. This I take to be the general Sense and Purport of the Text: And the main Defign of it was, to curb and keep down all Spiritual Pride and Selfassumings, with respect to God, and to teach Men Modesty and true Humility. Presume not to article strictly with Him, or to make any proud Demands upon Him. Boast not before Him

Argument against Spiritual Pride. 41

Him of any, even your best Services, and reckon not at all upon your own Deservings. Do as He has commanded You to do, to the utmost of your Power, affisted by his Spirit (For, without That, you are not fit to be called his Servants at all, but rather to be discarded as none of his): But after You have done all, and all reasonably well, still remember how insignificant You are in Comparison, and how high God is; and therefore make no unbecoming Claims upon Him, because of your Services (poor enough at the best); but chuse rather to refer all to his Favour and Goodness, than to your own Deservings. In discoursing farther, I shall endeavour,

- I. To explain What the Phrase or Title of unprofitable Servants here strictly means.
- II. To shew how much it concerns such Servants, to make their Humble Acknowledgments before God, of the Worthlesness of all their Services.
- III. To observe, that such Acknowledgments must not however be made an Excuse or Colour for any culpable Slackness in our bounden Duties, or for pleading any Exemption or Discharge from using all possible ble Diligence in our Christian Calling, to perform all that is commanded Us.

I.

I propose to explain What the Phrase or Title of unprofitable Servants here strictly means. There is the more Need of explaining it, because it is used but twice besides in the New Testament, and in a Sense which perhaps will not fo conveniently fuit the Place which We are now upon. We first find it in St. MATTHEW, where our Lord fays, after delivering the Parable of the Talents, Cast the unprofitable Servant into outer Darkness; there skall be weeping and gnashing of Teetha. Here, unprofitable Servant means the same with a wicked or profligate Servant; which is too bard a Sense for our Lord to have intended in the present Text, where He applies it to his own true and fincere Disciples. In the Epistle to the Romans, in a Quotation there taken from the fourteenth Pfalm, we read, They are all gone out of the Way, They are together become unprofitable; there is None doth good, no not One b. This appears to be a Description of very ill Men, of abandon'd Libertines: Accordingly, in the Pfalm it felf, in the Old Translation, the Stile runs, They are corrupt and become abominable; and according cording to the New Translation, They are all gone aside, They are all together become filthy a. The Words, abominable and filthy, are there made to answer what in Romans is rendred unprofitable. And That, again, is too hard a Sense to put upon the Word unprofitable in the Text We are now upon: Therefore We must look out for some softer and milder Construction, in this single Place, to make the Context answer.

Argument against Spiritual Pride. 43

It may be consider'd, that No Man can, by any Services of His, be profitable to God, Who is All-sufficient, and is above needing any Benefit, or receiving any real Advantage b. But then it may be faid that neither Man, nor Angel, nor Archangel, nor any Creature whatever can indeed be profitable to God: And what great Matter were it for lapsed Men to profess Themselves unprofitable Servants in such a Sense only, as All the Company of Heaven must for ever profess the same? This appears to be a Sense as much too bigh for the Phrase in the Text, as the Other was too bard and fevere. Let Us therefore pitch upon some middle Meaning, fuch as may neither be too degrading for a fincere Christian to own, nor yet too high or exalted for Man in a fallen 2941 xiv. 3. b Job xxii. 2, 3. xxxv. 7. Pfal. xvi. 2.

State. Had our First Parents preferved their Imposence entire to the last, yet They would have been but unprofitable Servants after all, as bringing no Profit to God. Lapfed Men are ambrofitable in a more disparaging Sense than That, being All of them Sinners. Some may whink that the Text it felf explains the Meaning of the Title, by the Words, When Ye shall have done all Those Things, which are commanded For and again, We have done That which was our Duty to do. But what Man is there that facueth not? or, what Man ever perform'd (CHRIST only excepted) all that his Duty required of Him? The Text neither fays, mor supposes, that Any Man has, or ever will, do all that is commanded Him. It supposes only, that in some particular Cases Men may, and will, do all that is required of Them in those Cases or Instances, like as the Servant in the Parable is supposed to have done in providing his Master a Supper, and then waiting upon Him 'till the Supper was ended. Thus may good Men punctually perform all that was required of Them in some particular Affairs, while They fail in other Matters, more or less, through human Frailties. Had our First Parents, through the Grace of the Spirit (for They could not without) continued upright, right, They could not indeed have profited the Divine Majesty, nor have claimed a Researd as of Debt: But This They could have demanded (because it would but have been doing Them Justice) to be pronounced innocess; and They might have claim'd Impunity, because a righteous Judge cannot condemn the Guiltles. Now, lapsed Man cannot demand even so far, being that He is guilty, and therefore liable to Blame, liable also to Penalty: So that, upon the Whole, when Any, even the Best of fallen Men, profess Themselves to be unprofitable Servants of God, They may reasonably be supposed to mean, that They are Creationes Who can make no beneficial Returns, no proper Requitals to their Creator; that They are Creatures of a low Order, comparatively; human, mortal Creatures, Who can neither will, nor do, any Thing without the Aids of Divine Grace; and further, that They are also Sixners, Who, instead of meriting a Reward, or claiming it as a Debt, cannot fo much as claim Impunity, or Glory in God's Sight, but must be content to fue to Him in the humble petitionary Form for Reward, for Grace, and even for Impunity, referring all to God's Mercy and Goodness, and That also purchased for Them by the alone Merits of CHRIST JESUS.

I proceed now, Secondly, to confider how much it concerns, and how fitly it becomes, fuch unprofitable Servants to make their humble Acknowledgments before God, of the Worthlesness of all Their Services; worthless, I mean, with respect to God, not otherwise: For, they are not worthless with respect to Angels, or to other Men; more especially not to our own Souls, but That, by the Way, only to prevent Mistakes.

Now, to understand the more clearly, how much it concerns Us, and how indifpenfably necessary it is to make such Humble Acknowledgments; We are to consider the infinite Holiness and Purity of that tremendous Deity with Whom We have to do; that He is of purer Eyes than to behold Evil, or to look favourably upon Iniquity 2; that his Angels He hath charged with Follyb; and that even the Heavens are not clean in his Sight c. What is Man then, that He should be clean? and He Who is born of a Woman, that He should be righteous d? Now, tho' God's Goodness disposes Him always to be as merciful to Sinners, as

the

³ Habbak. i. 13. b Job iv. 18.

c ___ xv. 15. xxv. 5.

d Job xv. 14. 1 Kings viii. 46. Prov. xx. 9. Ecclef. vii. 20. 1 Joh. i. 8.

the Reasons of Government, or the Nature of Things permits, yet the Honour and Dignity of his unspotted Holiness and Purity must be kept up, in the Sight both of Men and Angels. Therefore when God was so kind to his own People of Israel, He took particular Care to have it often inculcated, that it was not for their Righteousness that He so highly favoured Them a, but upon other Accounts; and particularly, for his own Name's Sake b.

One Thing We know, that if our First Parents had remained finless, God could, confistently with the Honour of his Purity, have admitted Them, as righteous in Themselves, to Life Eternal. But fince the Fall, the Rule has been (according to the Divine Counfels, founded on unerring Truth) that No Man living is in Himfelf righteous, nor can be received as righteous, but in and through the Merits of a Divine Mediator, his only Son, and our only Redeemer, CHRIST JESUS our Lord. So stands the Case: And God will have it acknowledged by the Best of Us, for the Honour of his high Name, that We are, as to Our Selves, unprofitable Servants, and Sinners, and can no otherwise be justified in his Sight, or permitted

² Deut. ix. 6! b Isa, xliii, 25, xlviii. 9. Ezek. xx. 9, 14, 22, 44.

permitted to appear before Him, but in the Lustre which We borrow from his beloved Son, in Whom only He is well pleased. With this Key, You may very eafily understand all that St. PAUL meant (in two of his Epistles especially, viz. to the Romans, and Galatians) by infifting fo strongly upon Justification by Faith. There were at that Time Pagans, in great Numbers, Who valued Themfelves much upon their Exalted Virtues (for fo their Pride perswaded Them) and upon their good moral Lives; conceiving that They had no Need of CHRIST, and fo They would not embrace the Gospel. There were also Multitudes of Yews (Pharifees especially) Who were even prouder in that Point than the Pagans, strongly conceited of their spiritual Improvements and Privileges, as if They had known no Sin, nor had any Need of Pardon. Against both those Kinds of Men the Apostle difputed with great Strength and Clearness, in Order to beat down their Vanity, and to convince Them of the absolute Necessity of looking out for some better Righteousness than their own, the Righteousness that rests in the meritorious Atonement made by CHRIST JESUS. That was to be received by Faith; that is to fay, by a fubmiffive and humble Acknowledgment ledgment of their Own Unprofitableness, and Infufficiency as to Salvation, and by repofing their Whole Trust and Confidence in the Gospel-Covenant of Grace, in What CHRIST had done and suffered for Them. This is The Justification by Faith, in the Stile of that great Apostle. For Faith in this Case, is a Virtual Acknowledgment of our own Sinfulness, and of God's unspotted Purity; and withal, a kind of Silent Prayer fent up to the Divine Majefty, befeeching Him to admit Us, not for any Pretensions of our own, not for our own Services (which at the best are too weak and imperfect to stand before Him, or abide His strict Scrutiny) but for the Sake of CHRIST Jesus only, and out of His own Free Grace and Mercy towards Us. Such Acknowledgment being made on our Part, and fuch Obedience also performed as is required by that Covenant of Grace, which We rest our Selves upon, then may the Divine Majesty, without any Impeachment of his Holiness, admit Us into Fayour, and own Us for his Servants. For, then it cannot be faid, that He receives Sinners as Sinners, but He receives Them as washed and purified in the Blood of the Lamb: Yea, as perfectly righteous; not in Themselves, but in CHRIST the righteous; who by His VOL. II. All-

All-prevailing Atonement hath merited This for All fincere and penitent Offenders, that They shall be treated as if They were perfectly Righteous, and shall be recompensed accordingly.

ABRAHAM, of ancient Time, to whom the Gospel was preached a, and who beforehand faw CHRIST's Day, and was gladb; He was justified by That Kind of Faith: And fo was DAVID, and the ancient Patriarchs and Prophets; and after Them, the Apostles, and all good Christians. This is a sober Truth, which ought deeply to be imprinted in every ones Mind, in Opposition to all proud Claims: And fo much the rather, because there are at this Day, even under This Gospel-Sunshine, Some that pretend to Merit, and Works of Super-errogation; as if They were not Sinners, or needed no Pardon; Some that prefume to think and fay, that God is obliged in Justice, or in Goodness, to accept of Them, without any Amendment, or, however, without Atonement; Some that Ascribe so much to Free-Will, as to exclude the Need, or Use of Divine Grace; Some conceive so Highly of Natural Religion, and of Virtues merely Moral, as to despise that Righteousness which the Gospel teaches: And some likewise there are, who who fear not to boast even of Sinless Perfection, and who, for that Reason, forbear to pray for Forgiveness of God. Now, St. PAUL's Doctrine concerning Justification by Faith, is a standing Evidence against all such proud Boasters, confuting their big Pretensions, and beating down their affuming Claims. It is fatal Overlight, for a Man not to confider well beforehand, what to rest His Salvation upon, or what chiefly to trust to, before the High Tribunal. Come We before God. in the Way of bumble Petition, or in the Way of firit Claim? Stand We upon our own Righteousness, or upon the Merits of CHRIST? Seek We to be judged by the Letter of the Law, or by indulgent Favour, and a Covenant of Grace? In a Word, Stand We upon our perfect Innocence, or upon the tender Mercy of the Judge? St. PAUL has directed Us how to move in this Case, how to form Our Plea, and what Course to take: Move by Faith and Trust in the Merits of CHRIST JESUS: Drop your Plea of Works, because there is a Flaw in it, and there is no abiding by it; for We have All finned, more or lefs, and God is of purer Eyes than to accept of any Thing in that Way, short of Perfection. But if you sue to the Throne of Grace by Faith in CHRIST's Blood. VOL. II.

Blood, that is the fame Thing with dropping all Plea from your own Defervings, and glorying in Nothing, fave only in the Crofs of our Lord Jesus Christa. That is the Method, the only true Method, whereby to escape Punishment, and to arrive at Heaven and Happiness. Make your humble Acknowledgments of the Need You have of a Saviour, and rest your Salvation upon Him; and then the Divine Majesty can, with a Salvo to His strict Justice and Holiness, have Mercy upon You, while it is by bis Interest, and upon bis Account, not upon your Own. So much for that Article.

III.

I proceed now, Thirdly and Lastly, to obferve, that such humble Acknowledgments as I have been here mentioning, must not however be so understood as to afford any Excuse or Colour for Slackness in our bounden Duties; or for pleading any Exemption or Discharge from true christian Obedience: For, what if
St. Paul directs Us to apply to God by Faith?
Doth not the same St. Paul tell us, that it must be a Faith which worketh by Love b? And what if He advises Us not to insist upon our Works

Works as perfect, nor to stand upon That Plea, in Opposition to a better; yet does He not alfo tell Us, that We are created in Christ Jesus unto good Works a? and that the End of the Commandment is Charity b? It is right, and our bounden Duty, to renounce all Claims, and strict Demands, while We stand before God, and to throw Our selves entirely upon a Covenant of Grace: But still that very Covenant of Grace has several Reserves and Exceptions in it, to exclude all impenitent Offenders, and carries its own Conditions along with it; which are many, but are all summ'd in these Two, an humble well-grounded Faith, and a sincere, though imperfect, Obedience.

There were some soolish Persons in the Days of the Apostles, who having heard, very probably, of St. Paul's Doctrine of Justification by Faith, and by Grace, laid hold of it as an Handle, or Colour for throwing off Good Works, and Christian Obedience. Any Handle will serve, where either the Judgment is exceeding weak, or corrupt Inclination exceeding strong: Otherwise, one might justly wonder, how so wild a Thought could have possessed any Man that should call Himself a Christian. However, St. James took Care, in few,

a Ephef. ii. 10. b 1 Tim. i. 5.

but very expressive Words, to obviate Those Loose Principles, thereby to prevent the Deception of the ignorant and undifcerning a. St. PAUL had before determined the general and previous Question, about the right Method of applying to God, and the Plea that would be fafest to stand upon, giving it on the Side of bumble Faith, against all proud Claims from our own Performances: And now St. JAMES determines a second Question, about the true and full Import of that Plea of Faith, evidently demonstrating that That very Plea of Faith is fo far from excluding Christian Obedience, that it necessarily takes it in, and cannot be understood without it. For, Faith without Obedience is but a dead Faith, or in Effect, no Faith at all. ABRAHAM's Faith was a lively and working Faith, exerting it felf, as Opportunities offered, in all Kinds of Virtues and Graces, in every good Word and Work. Such must every Man's Faith be, if He hopes to be justified by it here, or saved by it hereafter.

Perhaps, what I have hinted of the two feveral Questions, decided by the two Apostles, may be made a little plainer, by an easy and familiar Example. Imagine a Criminal going to be tried for his Life. It is proposed to Him, in that Case, whether to stand upon strict Law, and his own perfect Innocence, or to plead some AEt of Grace, some AEt of Indemnity. He deliberates upon it, as the first Question, and at length comes into the Plea of Grace, as his fafeft Plea: This is doing What St. PAUL advised in another Case.

After That, another Question comes on, very distinct from the former; viz. What are the Conditions of That very AEt of Grace which the Criminal had submitted to, and resolved to abide by? This the Lawyer's determine upon the Trial, and upon That depends the Final Issue of the Cause. In like Manner, after St. PAUL's Decision of the previous Question about Pleading the Act of Grace, St. JAMES comes in to shew what Conditions that Act contains.

Now, the practical Conclusion from all that has been here faid, is, to guard the more carefully against two very dangerous Extremes, which Some or Other have, in all Ages, unhappily fallen into, and to keep the middle Path, the plain and even Road, where You may be fafe, not turning aside, either to the Right Hand, or to the Left a.

> Tf D 4

If you come before God, full of Your Own Selves, reckoning upon your own Defervings, trusting in Your Own Holiness, or Righteousness, and not humbling Your Selves as Sinners, and unprositable Servants, or not resting your Salvation upon the rich Mercy of God, and the all-prevailing Atonement made by the Blood of Christ, then You are proud, knowing Nothing, or Nothing considerable; having no right Knowledge either of your own Frailties, Failings and Omissions, or of God's all-searching Eye, and his tremendous Justice, were He once to be extreme to mark whatever has been done amiss, and to exact it of Us.

If, on the other Hand, (considering how mean and worthless, in the Sight of God, even Our best Services are, and that all Our Hope and Comfort lie solely in his Mercy and Christ's Merits) You should thereupon neglect to cleanse your Hands, and purify your Hearts (as far as by God's Grace You may) or should grow flack and careless in Christian Duties, fainting by the Way, and not persevering to the End, but presuming upon God's Mercy to save You, though You live and die in your Sins; then You run into the other Extreme, not less pernicious than the former.

What then is the Way to take into, and purfue, fo as not to miscarry here, or there? The Way is to aspire to Righteousness and true Holiness, with all Your Might, and not to be proud of it, when You have done. Think it worthless in the Sight of God, and infinitely below his Acceptance, were it not for the Merits of CHRIST: But still remember, that it is as much worth to You as Heaven is worth, because without such Holiness, no Man shall see the LORD a.

To conclude: Be as ambitious of leading a good Life, as if You were fure even to merit by it: At the same Time be as bumble before God, as the Great St. PAUL was, Who besides keeping the Faith, after He had done perhaps more in the Way of Good Works than any mere Man had done before Him, yet fumm'd up his own Life and Character in a very few, and very humbling Words, that He was Nothing b. He remembred that God was All; in whom We live and move, and have our Beingc.

a Heb. xii. 14. b 2 Cor. xii. 11. c Acts xvii. 28.

e

SERMONIV.

The Care required in chusing our Religious Principles, and the Steddiness in retaining them when so chosen, stated and clear'd.

I THESS. V. 21.

Prove all Things: Hold fast That which is good.

HE Text contains two very weighty and important Precepts, which have a near Relation to each other; and which may well deferve both to be rightly understood, and carefully retain'd by All.

The first is, to prove, try, or examine all Things (proposed as of any Consequence to our Belief and Practice) that so We may discern what what is really good: The next is, to close in with it heartily as foon as found, and firmly to adhere to it. The Defign of which Precepts is to caution us against two pernicious Extremes, which many unthinking Persons are prone to run into: One is the taking Opinions upon Trust from Others, without ever examining or confidering What, or Why; the Other is, being too unsettled and irresolute even after Examination, not being able, after a wife Choice, to fix and abide by it. It is hard to fay which of the two Extremes is the most unreasonable: whether the being too credulous in receiving any Thing, or every Thing without Distinction; or the not receiving and retaining What upon due Examination well deserves it. Credulity on one Hand, or Unsteadiness on the other, are equally dangerous: Both contributing to multiply Miftakes, and to confound all Distinction of True and False, Good and Evil. The Way to prevent both is, first, to examine into any Opinion or Doctrine propounded to us, in order to direct or regulate our Choice; and then, after We have made a wife Choice, to hold to it resolutely and unalterably, in Order to reap the full Benefits of it. We must indeed be cautious in the Choice of our Principles, as in the Choice of our Friends, not admitting them as fuch 'till they they have been well approved: But when They have been once well chosen, We must be constant to them, and never lightly part with them. My Design then is, in my following Discourse, to recommend two Things to our more especial Notice;

- I. Care and Difcretion in chufing.— Prove all Things; and,
- II. Firmness and Steddiness in retaining.—
 Hold fast That which is good.

I.

To begin with the first, namely, the Precept to prove all Things. Here it will be proper to consider the Persons to whom This Precept belongs; The Rule whereby they are to proceed; and the Qualifications necessary to a right Personnance thereof.

1. The Persons. And here I must remark, that the Precept is not given to the Guides and Pastors only (though They may indeed be conceived principally concerned in it) but to Christians at large. It is to the Church of the Thessalonians, and so to every Church, and not to the Pastors only, that the Advice is directed: It is to as Many as are obliged to hold fast That which is good; therefore most certainly to All; both Clergy and People; only in fuch Proportion and Degree, as their feveral Stations, Capacities, Abilities, or Opportunities, respectively, may permit. To This agree Those other Precepts of like Kind, recommended in holy Scripture, to Christians at large; To try the Spirits whether they are of God a. To examine Themselves whether they be in the Faith, and to prove their Own Selves b. To be ready to give a Reason of the Hope that is in Them c, and the like. Accordingly the Bereans are commended for their ingenuous Freedom, in examining before They gave their Affent even to the Apostle's Doctrine: Searching the Scriptures, whether Those Things were so d. Vain therefore are the Pretences of the Romish Bigots, for confining the Precept to the Clergy only, excluding the Laity without Distinction from the Duty, or Privilege of examining and judging for Themselves. It is the Right and Duty of All Persons, to believe no farther than They have Reasons, and to look Themselves (as far as They are able) into the Strength and Force of those Reasons, before They give their Assent; or however before They fix and abide by it. Neither is This peculiar to Us as Christians; but it concerns Us as Men. It is one of the Natural Rights

^{* 1} John iv. 1. b 2 Cor. xiii. 5. 61 Pet. iii. 15. d Acts xvii. 11.

Rights of Mankind, founded in the very Nature of Things, and necessarily resulting from their being made rational Creatures. No Man can be bound to follow Others blindly, who has Faculties given Him to discern between True and False, between Good and Evil. His own Judgment and Conscience, and not Another's, is the immediate Guide of his Faith, and Practice; which He must give Account of at the great Day. It is therefore his Duty, and his Business to inform Himself, as carefully as He can: And then, and there only, to trust to Other Mens Eyes, where He cannot fee clearly with his own. And even in these Cases, He is still to judge for Himself, as reasonably as He can, Who or What Persons are to be taken for his Guides, or Instructors, upon the best and most impartial Judgment He is able to make of their Authority, Integrity, or Abilities. We are None of Us able to examine particularly into the whole Compass and Extent of Things: Something there must be of implicite Faith in Other Men's Labours. There are very few Persons but Who must, or Who will take fome Things upon Trust; wanting either Ability or Leifure to run thro' all the Parts of Enquiry, and to fearch every Thing to the Bottom. But so far as Any Man is qualified, and furnish'd with Leisure and Opportunity for it, fo far He ought to fearch for Himself: And as to the rest, He is still to judge, as He will answer it at the Great Day, whose Report, or whose Judgment, He may most fafely rely on, in Matters beyond his Reach or Capacity. Very able Divines will, in many Things, rely upon the Report or Judgment of profess'd Linguists, Criticks, or Grammarians: The Younger and less-furnish'd Divines will very much confide in the older and more Learned: The Common People will, in many Things, trust to their immediate and proper Guides: And, perhaps, the very Illiterate and Ignorant will much rely upon the Judgment of Any (be They Clergy or Laity) Whom They take to be wifer and more knowing than Themselves; or of whose Integrity or Friendship towards Them They have no Reafon to doubt. We see then, that in the very Nature of the Thing, a great Deal must, and will be taken upon Trust from Others; and That more or less, according to the great Variety there is of Mens Abilities, Opportunities, Qualifications, and Circumstances: So that the Precept, to prove all Things, comes at length to This; to examine into all Things, directly, fo far as We can do it; and where we cannot, there there to examine whose Learning, whose Integrity, and whose Judgment may be most safely trusted for the rest: For the Purpose. - The Bulk of common Christians must in a great Meafure depend upon the Integrity and Ability of Others, as to the Authority and Divinity of the Sacred Canon, the Uncorruptness of the Copies, the Faithfulness of the Translation, and the Construction of some of the more difficult Texts. These Things supposed, They may Themfelves competently judge, from Scripture it felf, of the most Important or Fundamental Points of Faith or Practice. In plain and common Cases, Ordinary Capacities may examine and judge for Themselves: And They ought to do fo, for the Reasons before hinted. They may judge for Themselves what Religion They ought to be of, and what Church to unite with, and what Doctrines of that Church They are to receive, or not to receive; only paying this reasonable and just Deference to the united Sense and Verdict of Synods or Councils, as not to oppose it, however not publickly, before it be understood; nor to fet up their own private Opinion against the publick Sense of the Church, before They have carefully examin'd the Case, and have well considered the Strength and Force of those Reasons upon which the publick VOL. II.

64 The Duty required in chusing,

lick Decisions were founded. Under these Restrictions and Limitations, a Liberty of private Judgment should be allow'd to All, as being the common and undoubted Right of all, whether consider'd as Christians, or as Men. I come now,

2. To confider the Rule by which They are to proceed in the Exercise of this Right or Duty, of proving all Things. The most General and Comprehensive Rule, in which all other Rules center and terminate, is the Rule of right Reason. Whatever, upon the best and last Enquiry, appears to be most reasonable, That We are to receive, and embrace: And What appears otherwife, We are to reject. This is a Rule fo certain, and fo indifputable (when rightly understood) that it is supposed in all Debates, and feems to be equally allow'd on all Hands, whether by arguing for, or against it. For What do Men mean by arguing at all either Way, but to make Reason Umpire in the Question, and, tacitely at least, to acknowledge, that the best Reasons ought ever to prevail in it. There are indeed two Kinds of Men, who seem to differ from Us in this Article: One advises to refign up our Reason to the Dictates of a pretended infallible Chair; the Other would obtrude their own Dreams. upon us for divine Oracles; refolving all into Iknow er;

I know not what fecret Dictates or Impulses of the Spirit. But the wild Inconfiftency of fuch Pretences is alone fufficient to destroy them: For, either They must give us Reafons for What They pretend, and then They plainly suppose the very Thing which They deny, making every Man a Judge for Himfelf of the Force and Strength of those Reasons; and how far He may, or may not refign Himfelf up to them: Or, if They give no Reasons, nor pretend any, there cannot be a furer Token of the Weakness of their Plea, and of their betraying the very Cause which They are labouring to defend. They are used to plead that Human Reason is weak, blind, and fallible; liable to fundry Mistakes; a very dangerous Guide in Matters of Religion; fruitful of Herefies, Schisms, and what not. Be it so: Yet how know They but that, in This very Argument whereby They would perfwade Us to lay afide Reason, Reason may be as blind, weak, and treacherous, as in any other? If, therefore, there be any Force in their Argument, it must necessarily destroy it self; proving the quite contrary to What it pretends, or proving Nothing. Let Reason be supposed ever so blind and fallible; yet, blind as it is, We must be content to submit to it, or to something blinder; namely, to Humour, or Fancy, or Pafsion, or the Prejudices of Education. But after all, there is no fuch Danger as some pretend from the Use of Reason in Matters of Religion, but very much rather in the Disuse of it. It is no Part of Religion to lay afide the Use of our Reason: For, besides the Inconsistency of it with a rational Nature, to pretend to unmake the Man, in order to make the Christian; there is this farther Absurdity in it, that to discard Reason in such a Sense, is to discard Faith too, which is ultimately built upon Reason: For We ought always to have a Reason for What We believe: And without This, it would not be true Faith, but Prefumption rather, or blind Credulity. Faith is it felf an AEt of Reason, as really and truly as any other Assent founded upon Natural Principles. For Example, We believe fuch a Doctrine, because We find it in the Scriptures; We believe the Scriptures, because They speak the Mind and Will of God; We believe They do fo, because They have been proved to carry with them all poffible Marks, outward and inward, of a Divine Authority, which a wife and good God would never fuffer to be fet to any Imposture, to lead Mankind into an inevitable Error; So that if God be true and just, that that is, if there be a God, our Faith is well grounded. And, now, why should not an Asfent, thus founded upon the Nature and Reason of Things, be look'd upon as an Act of Reason, as well as any Demonstration drawn from undoubted Axioms, or first Principles? Is there then no Difference, may Some ask, between Faith and Science? Yes, certainly there is; but They do not fo differ, as if One were the Work of Reason, and the Other not: Both are the Work of Reason, only with This Difference, that in Matters of Science, our Assent is founded on intrinfick Evidence, or the Nature of the Thing affented to; while in Matters of Faith, our Assent is founded on extrinsick Evidence, the Authority of the Revealer. It may be ask'd then, Are the Articles of Faith as certain, and as demonstrable, as Matters of Science? I anfwer, that thus far, Whatever God reveals is true, is as clear and self-evident a Principle as any Maxim in Science; and Whatever has a necessary Connexion with that Principle, or is deducible from it, is strictly and properly demonstrable. But whether We have that Certainty, that fuch a Proposition is revealed, and that We understand it rightly (Both which must be supposed in our Assent to it) is more disputable; and therefore it is, that Matters of Faith E 3 generally generally fall short of Scientifical Demonstration. But still our Assent, in either Case, is wrought out by Reason; by demonstrative Reasons, where the Case is demonstrable; by probable ones, where probable; and in Both, our Affent is an AEt of Reason. If it be said farther, that Faith is built upon Testimony, and therefore not upon Reason; it is to be observed, that Testimony, barely consider'd as such, is not the Ground of Faith, but rather the Means of conveying it: For the Reasons why We think the Testifier could not, or would not deceive Us, These are what We properly build our Faith upon: So that an Assent, founded upon Testimony, is as properly the Refult of Reason, if it has any just Ground at all, as any other Assent whatfoever. From This Account it may appear, how little Service can be done to Faith, by crying down Reason, rightly understood. For, whatever tends to weaken the Evidence of Reason, must so far tend to weaken Faith too. which is built upon it: And as it must necesfarily lead to Scepticism, in Natural Truths; fo must it also lead to Infidelity, in Religion. Reafon and Faith therefore are by no Means opposite, but are assistant to, and perfective of Each Other. It is the Strength and Glory of the best Religion, to have always the best Reasons to go along with it. Never Any Man revolted from the true Faith, but He revolted as much from right Reason, and abandon'd Both at the fame Time. He certainly either laid down false Principles, or form'd false Conclusions from true Ones, and was in Reality as weak a Reafiner as He was a Christian. True Religion loves to be examin'd by the nicest Reason, can abide the Trial, and invites All Persons to lay aside Prejudice, Pride, Lusts, Passions, and vile Affections, and to put the Matter upon a fair Hearing at the Bar of unbiass'd and impartial Reason. And This, give me leave to say, ever has been, and will be the Glory and Triumph of our excellent Religion, that Her Adversaries, with all their vain Pretences to Reason, have betrayed the greatest Want of it, and have never been able either to answer ber Arguments, or to defend their own. Let Reason then be our Rule for proving all Things; and let That be received as most Credible, which stands upon the strongest and clearest Reasons.

70. The Duty required in chusing,

The Use, and Application of This Rule, is of wide Compass and vast Extent, in Matters of Religion; and is either General or Special.

First, General, in directing Us how to find out, among the many Pretenders, which is the true and right Religion; whether Pagan,

72 The Duty required in chusing,

Jewish, Mahometan, or Christian; or, supposing the Christian to be (as it undoubtedly is) the best of the Four, then, among several Sects and Parties of Christians, which of them is preferable: Whether the Greek Church or the Roman, whether of England or Geneva, whether of Luther or of Calvin, and so on. Here our Reason has a large Field to move in, in Order to direct and guide Us, what Religion to be of, or what Church to join Our Selves to.

Secondly, The Use of Reason is more Special, in stating and clearing the particular Do-Etrines of Christianity. Christians of all Sorts, however divided in Opinions, yet plead the fame Scriptures commonly in Defence of them; Each abounding in their own Sense, and resolutely adhering to their own Construction, or Interpretation. And what can give Us any Light, or what can lead Us to the Truth among the contending Parties, but the laying together and confidering, with all Sincerity and Impartiality, the Reasons offered here, or there, respectively? This must be the Way to discover What is at length really Scriptural, and What not: And thus it is that We may be able to diftinguish the vain Fancies and Comments of Men, from the true Mind and Will of God. Here the Office of Reason is various and manifold, according as Scripture, or the Matters it treats of, are more or lefs clear and positive.

In fome Points, Scripture is very plain and clear, and the Reason of the Thing too: As in the moral Doctrines of Christianity. In such a Case, Reason proceeds upon double Evidence, extrinsick and intrinsick, either of which might stand single, and be a sufficient Proof of the Thing. But Both together make it the more indisputable; and our Assent rests fast and sirm upon a twofold Foundation.

Sometimes Scripture is very clear and express, but the Reason of the Thing dark and obscure; as in the venerable Mysteries of our Faith. Here Reason proceeds only upon extrinsick Evidence, the Authority of the Revealer, and the Proofs brought to shew that This is revealed, and This the Sense of it: Not pretending to say how, or why Those Things are, but that they really are, because God has declared them.

In other Points, Scripture may be obscure or silent, but the Reason of the Thing (taking in What Scripture has elsewhere plainly afferted) very clear and manifest, as in the Case of Infant-Baptism. The Use of Reason in This, and other the like Cases, is to shew What by Analogy, or Consequence, tho' not directly, Scrip-

74. The Duty required in chufing, ture either allows, commands, or condemns. There is yet a fourth Case where neither Scripture nor the Reason of the Thing are clear; Both together affording only dark Hints of What is, or is not: As in the Case of Heathens, or unbaptized Infants; What their Portion shall be in a World to come. In these, and the like Cases, there is Ground only for a probable Affent. It is, however, the Business of Reafon to lay Things carefully together, to make the best of its Materials, and to lean to the fafer, or more charitable Side, without being too positive, or dogmatical in Either. Thus We see how the Office of Reason runs through all the Parts of Religion, and is very ferviceable to it; directing Us how to form our Judgment, and fix our Faith, and next enabling Us to defend it. Thus are We to prove and examine all Things, fo far as our Abilities, Leifure, or other Circumstances, permit: But We must remove, as much as possible, every Impediment which may obstruct the free Exercise of our Reason; such as Love of Novelty, or a Superstitious Veneration for Antiquity; either too great Deference to Authority on one Hand, or too little on the other; either an over-weaning Regard to this or that Church, Sect, or Party; or a supercilious Contempt of, and invenom'd venom'd Hatred against Any. We are to remove all such Obstacles to free and ingenuous Enquiry, and, at the same Time, to take in all necessary Helps for the due Improvement and Advancement of our Understandings. When, by the careful Observance of those good and wholsom Rules, We have done our Parts in proving all Things; then are We to remember also the other Precept of the Text, which is,

II.

To hold fast That which is good.

After due Care in examining, naturally follow Wisdom in chusing, and Firmness in retaining; without which all We have before done becomes vain and fruitless. To be always feeking without finding the Thing we want; To be ever learning, and never able to come to the Knowledge of the Truth; To be, like Children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every Wind of Doctrine, is but a mean and a disparaging Character, neither becoming a Christian nor a Man. Care and Caution are proper in the Entrance to the Work of Faith: But Resolution and Steddiness must help it on, and carry it up to Perfection. It is the distinguishing Mark and Property, the Pride and Glory of every wife and good Man, not to be foon Shaken shaken in Mind; but to be stedfast and unmovable, after He has once well deliberated, and, made a wife Choice. But here it may be ask'd, Must We then unalterably resolve, after We have once settled our Opinions, and, as We are verily perswaded, upon good Reasons, never to recede the least Tittle from Them? Must, We turn the deaf Ear to all Reasons or Arguments offer'd to convince us of a prefumed Mistake, or to convert us from it? There is no Man of fo folid and correct a Judgment but He may fometimes err: Few fo careful in their Enquiries, but Who, at some Time or other, may take a Thing for Demonstration, which hath little or no Ground; or reject Another Thing as false, which may prove a certain Truth. And then it is notorious that Mens Judgments commonly ripen with their Years; and They may often see Reason to retract some Things which, upon the best Reafon They before had, They might think it neceffary to receive. It would be hard to preclude a Man, at any Age of his Life, from growing wifer; which feems to be the Cafe, if He is never to permit any Matter of his Faith to be brought in Question before Him, or to hear what may be fairly offer'd against it. What then must be done in This Case?

or bow far are we to carry our Resolution, and Stedfastness, in What We have once made the Subject of our Belief? To This I answer, that there is certainly a just Medium, a golden Mean, to be observed by every wife and good Man, whether in his religious, or fecular Concerns. It is no Reproach to any Man's Constancy, sometimes to alter his Judgment, or vary his Meafures, in Matters of Civil Prudence. And fo neither is it any Reproach upon Christian Stedfastness, sometimes to correct our former Judgments, or to alter them for the better. But then, as in secular Affairs to be ever unsteddy and irresolute, is a certain Mark of a very weak Man; fo in religious also, is it a certain Token of a very weak, or very diffolute Christian. And as in civil Matters, wife Men generally have fixed upon some certain Maxims, some prime and leading Principles of Action, which They will never alter, nor fo much as call in Question all their Lives after; So also in our religious Concernments, every wife and good Christian will fix upon fome plain and fundamental Articles of Faith, which He will never after recede from, nor fo much as think Himfelf obliged to hear debated and canvas'd a fecond Time. There are fome Things fo clear and evident upon the first Examining, that it will not be necessary to give them a new Hearing: All pretended Objections against them, may be reasonably rejected in the Lump, as not worth the Notice, nor deserving a wife Man's Care, after He is once fully enlighten'd with a clear Perception of the contrary Truth. -- For Example: After a Man has been but tolerably instructed in the Grounds of the Christian Religion, which carries fo much Force and Evidence in it, it will not be necessary to allow Paganism, Judaism, or Mahometanism, so much as a Hearing, except it be for the fake of Others only, Who may want to have Those Pretences exposed or confuted. The like may be said of Atheists or Deists: The Proofs of a God, and of the Christian Revelation, are so full, clear, and strong, that after a Man has once feen into them, He need not stay to deliberate, or wait 'till He has examined the contrary Pretences; well knowing beforehand, that They can have no real Weight or Solidity in Them. As to other Cases, This Procedure is justifiable more or less, in Proportion to the greater or smaller Evidence upon which any Doctrine is founded. And fome Allowance must be made for such Doctrines as have been often and fully debated by wife, great, and good Men, and conftantly determin'd the Same fame Way. There is a strong Presumption in their Favour, that they are most certainly true, or at least that there neither is, nor can be any fufficient Reason for rejecting them as false; and that therefore They may very fafely, and justly, be received as true, without more particular Examination; unless there should be some Appearance of new Light, and additional Evidence, fuch as our Predeceffors had been Strangers to. In a Word then, there may be Cases so plain and clear, either in Faith or Morality, that it may be sufficient to examine the Proofs upon which They stand, without attending to the Objections on the other Side, which may be known beforehand to be Nothing else but Cavil, and Trisling. And in these Cases, it may be our Duty to hold fast That which is good, without so much as giving the least Ear to any contrary Pretences. But then, as there are many other Cases of a more doubtful Nature, our Obligations to hold fast What we have once received, must admit of this Restriction or Limitation, that we be nevertheless ready and willing to submit the Cause to Debate, and to give it a new Hearing. In fuch a Cafe our Ears must be always open to Reason when offer'd in due Manner and Form, with Sobriety, and in the Fear of God :

God: And there We are to take Care to fuffer Our Selves to be influenced by Reasons, and Reasons only: Not by Humour, or Caprice, or Fickleness of Temper; like Some Who, for the fake of one pressing Difficulty, will give up What was founded on many plain, and convincing Reasons: Not by Vanity or Self-conceit; like Some Who are defirous of giving up old Truths, only because They have prevailed, to become the Leaders of a SeEt, and the Heads of a Party: Not by Ambition, Avarice, or vile Affections; like Many, Who make Shipwreck of their Faith, to serve a present Turn, or to gratify their Lusts and Passions: Not by Fear, or by Complaisance; like Those Who have no Principles of their own, but are blindly led, or overawed by Others; Who can flit from Church to Church, from Party to Party, as They are directed; prepared to be of This, or That, or of All Religions; and to be fincere and constant in None. In a Word, Nothing but Reasons, and good Reasons, will ever move an honest and a wise Man to change his Belief, or Perswasion. And then indeed to change is the truest Constancy; as the parting with an Error, is, in reality, the holding fast That which is good. Only This We may fay, that after a Man has once deliberately made his Choice, and formed his Persuasion, He ought then to lean to that Side, with some Degree of Affurance and Confidence, and not to be apt to take up Scruples, or to entertain Suspicions of it. Perfect Indifference may be the proper Temper of Mind to begin with, and to continue in, during the Time of the Examination; but no longer: Afterwards, it will be no Fault, but a Commendation rather, to lean to one Side more than to another; and to expect very clear and strong Reasons, before We are prevailed with to recede from it. As I before instanced in the Choice of Friends; great Caution, Diffidence, Suspicion, and Distrust, are very proper and necessary in the Choice: But when the Choice has been made, it would be very unreasonable to be still full of Scruple and Doubt, or not to confide with great Assurance in Those whom we had so cautiously and deliberately chosen. It would be great Injustice towards Them to be still prone to suspect Them, or not to be partial in some Measure, in their Favour, requiring very full and clear Reasons against Them, before We entertain any Doubts. of Them.

Such is the Case also in relation to Matters of Faith, or Principles of Religion once deli-Vol. II. E berately berately receiv'd. They ought, from that Time forwards, to be allowed all favourable Presumption, and Equity of Construction: And now all the Jealousy, Diffidence, and Distrust is to be thrown upon the other Side, 'till very plain and cogent Reasons can be brought to overturn, or over-rule That which we have espoused.

This appears to be the true and right Method of avoiding Both the Extremes; that of implicite and uncautious Credulity on one Hand, or of Fickleness and desultorious Levity on the other.

Now to apply very briefly What hath been here faid, to our own particular Case and Circumstances. As many of us as are here present may be presumed to have fixed our Choice, First, of the Christian Religion, in Opposition to Pagan, Jewish, or Makometan: And, Secondly, of a Reformed Religion, in Opposition to Popish Novelty and Superstition: And, Thirdly, of the Religion of the Church of England, in Opposition to all other Sects, Parties, or Denominations of reformed Christians. They who have examined into these three Things, know them to be good: And They who have not, ought to examine so far as they are able, that

They also may know: And then Nothing remains but to hold Them fast, and to make suitable Improvements of them in our Lives and Conversations. Let us, then, hold fast the Profession of our Faith without wavering (for He is faithful that promised): And let Us consider One Another to provoke unto Love, and to good Works.

2 Heb. x. 23, 24.

Vol. II. F 2 SERMON

Antights in a spirit with the

And the state of t

and the state of t

SERMON V.

The precise Nature and Force of Christ's Argument, founded on Exod. iii. 6. against the Sadducees.

LUKE XX. 37, 38.

Now, that the Dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the Bush, when He calleth the Lord, The God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob: For, He is not a God of the Dead, but of the Living: For All live to Him^a.

HESE Words are the concluding Part of our Lord's Reply to the SADDUCEES, a libertine Sect of the Jews, Who, (like the EPICUREANS before, and other Infidels fince) for the fake only of indulging their Lusts, and to remove the Dread of an After-reckoning, thought proper to reject the Belief of a Resurrection, and a Life to come. But yet, to fave Appearances, and to keep up an outward Shew of Religion among their Countrymen, They profess'd a great Regard to the fame common Scriptures, as the Oracles of God, and fought out Colours from those very Scriptures, whereby to countenance, or feemingly to authorize, their wanton and wicked Opinions. They came to our Bleffed Lord, and propounded a captious Question to Him, grounded upon MosBs's Law, artfully infinuating, as if Moses Himfelf must have been in their Sentiments; For, He had order'd that feveral Brothers in Succession should take the same surviving Wife: A Law which feem'd to preclude any future Refurrection; fince, upon That Supposition, there could be no adjusting the contradictory Claims. Whose Wife, faid They, is she in the Resurrection? Our Bleffed Lord, in Reply, corrected their fond Mistake in judging of a Life to come by the Life that now is, when Circumstances would be widely different. In this World, where Mankind go off and die daily, there is. a Necessity of a constant and regular Succession to supply the Decays of Mortality:

* Conf. Matt. xxii. 31. Mark xii. 26.

in a World to come, where None die any more, the Reason then ceases, inasmuch as there will be no Occasion for any further Supplies. Our Bleffed Lord, by thus diftinguishing upon the Case, deseated the Objection: But to shew farther, how ill the SADDUCEES had contrived, in appealing to Moses as a Favourer of their Sentiments, He reminds Them of a famous Passage in Moses's Law, which was directly contrary to their Principles, being indeed a full and clear Proof of a Resurrection, and future State. Now, that the Dead are raised, (or shall be raised) even Moses shewed at the Bush, when He calleth the Lord, The God of ABRAHAM, and the God of ISAAC, and the God of JACOB: For, He is not a God of the Dead, but of the Living; For all live to Him. In discoursing upon which Words, I propose more particularly to confider,

- I. What the distinguishing Principles of the ancient SADDUCEES really were.
- II. Why our Lord chose to confront Them with a Text out of Moses's Writings, rather than with any other out of the Old Testament.

III. Wherein precifely the Force of our Lord's Argument, built upon that Text, confifts.

As to the first Article; The distinguishing Principles of the SADDUCE Es are briefly fumm'd up by St. Luke in the twenty-third of the Acts, Thus: The SADDUCEES fay, that there is no Resurrection, neither Angel nor Spirit; but the PHARISEES confess Both 2. From whence We may observe, that the SADDUCEES did not only reject the Resurrection of the Body, but They denied a Future State; They did not allow that the Soul furvived the Body: They looked upon the Doctrines of a Resurrection and Future State to be fo nearly allied, or fo closely connected with each other, that they might reasonably be conceived to stand or fall together: Wherefore They denied Both; as, on the other Hand, the PHARISEES admitted Both. For if the Soul survived the Body, it was very natural to suppose, that some time or other the Body would be again raised up, and re-united, to make a whole Man: But if the Soul died with the Body, it was obvious to infer, there would be no Refurrection; fince That would would amount, in such a Case, to a new Creation, rather than a Resurrection properly so called, and the Parties so raised would not be the same Persons as before. This observable Connexion of the two several Doctrines seems to have made the Sadducees deny Both; And the Consideration thereof will be of Use to Us in explaining the Force of our Lord's Argument; as will be seen in the Sequel.

There is one noted Difficulty in St. LUKE's Account of the SADDUCEES, relating to their Denial of the Existence of Angels. Other Accounts of Jewish Writers are filent on that Head; and it might feem very needless for the SADDUCEES to clog their Caufe with it, fince it was sufficient for their Purpose, to reject only the separate Subsistence of Human Souls; and it is odd that They should run so flatly counter to the History of the Old Testament (which is full of What concerns Angels) when They had really no great Necessity for it, nor Temptation to it, fo far as appears. But, perhaps, They thought it the shortest and furest Way, to reject the whole Doctrine of Spirits, or, at least, of created Spirits, and so to settle in Materialism, after the Example of some Pagan Philosophers; and therefore they at once difcarded both Angels and separate Souls: And as to the Old Testament standing directly against Them, with respect to Angels; there are fo many various Ways of playing upon Words, especially in dead Writings, that Men, resolute to maintain a Point (whatever it be) can never be at a Loss for Evasions. This appears to be a fair Account of the whole Case, if it be certain that St. LUKE is to be understood of their denying Angels, properly fo called. Nevertheless, I apprehend, there may be some Reason to question whether He might not use the Word in a particular Sense, so as to mean no more by it than a Human Soul. It is certain, that the Pagan Writers, before his Time, had been used to give the Name of Angels to good Souls departed; and, that the IEws also fometimes did the fame, may appear from the Writings of PHILO the Jew, who lived in that Age. Poffibly, St. Luke, knowing that the Word Angel had been fo used, might mean only to fay, that the SADDUCEES rejected the Doctrine of the Resurrection, and the other Doctrine of feparate Souls, whether called Angels, as by Some, or Spirits only, as by Others. There is another Place in this Book of the AEts, where the Word Angel feems to have been used in the like improper Sense; when Some, speaking of PETER confidently reported to be at the Door, and the Thing was thought impossible, said, It is his Angel²; as much as to say, It is his Ghost: For they had Reason to believe, that He had been executed by that Time. I am aware, that Interpreters give quite another Gloss to that Passage: But 'tis obvious to observe withal, how much They are perplex'd with it, and how difficult it is to make tolerable Sense of the Place in their Way, or in any Way, excepting such as I have mention'd.

However, I would be understood to offer this other Interpretation, as Conjecture only, and as tending to clear up fome noted Difficulties in St. LUKE's Account of the SADDU-CEES, in the easiest Manner; while We do not want a Solution of them, if This should not fatisfy; for I have my felf given one before: But if this fecond Solution, which I have here offered, appears preferable to the other; We may then acquit the SADDUCEES of the Charge of discarding Angels, properly so called; and condemn Them only as rejecting a Resurrection, and a Future State. This Account will appear the better, when it is confidered that St. LUKE fays, the PHARISEES admitted Both. Both what? There had been Three Things mention'd.

92 CHRIST's Argument against

mention'd, if Angel makes a distinct Article: But if Angel there means no more than an Human Soul, then the Articles are reduced to Two only, and so it was very proper to say, Both; namely, both the Resurrection, and the separate State of the Soul.

However That be, (for I would not dwell long upon a By-point) This is certain, that the Captious Question put to our Lord, and his Answer to it, concern'd only the Case of Mankind, and had Nothing to do with Angels. The Point in Dispute was only This: Whether Men should live again after Death, and live in the Body; which tho' seemingly Two Points, yet in effect amounted but to One, as I before observed.

H.

I proceed now, Secondly, to inquire, why our Blessed Lord chose to confront the Sadducees with a Text out of Moses's Writings, rather than out of any other Part of the Old Testament. For it is thought, that there are several other Texts there, plainer and more express to the Purpose, than That which our Lord has cited, as perhaps there are; for I need not dispute that Point, or run out into Comparisons.

Some have given it in for a Reason of our Lord's Choice; that Moses's Books were the only ones which the SADDUCEES received as Canonical Scripture. But the Fact is disputable at least, if not certainly false. Others say, that our Lord chose to confute Them out of the Book of the Law, as being of prime Value, and of greatest Authority: And That indeed is a Confideration which is not without its Weight. But yet I humbly conceive, that We have no Occasion to look far for Reasons, when the Text it felf, with what goes along with it, fufficiently accounts for the whole Thing. The SADDUCEES had formed their Objection upon the Books of Moses, claiming Moses as a Voucher on their Side. In fuch a Cafe, it was extremely proper, and pertinent (if it could be done) to confute the Men from Moses Himfelf: It was vindicating Moses's Writings, at the fame Time that it was doing Justice to an important Truth: And fo it was answering two very considerable Ends, Both at once. Our Bleffed Lord therefore applied Himfelf entirely to the clearing up MosEs's Sentiments in that Article, and He effected it two Ways: First by observing, that what the SADDUCEES had cited from Him, did not prove what They wish'd for; and, Secondly, by shewing that what what He had taught elsewhere, fully and clearly disproved it. Our Lord perhaps might have found either in the Psalms, or in the Prophets, many other as clear, or clearer Texts to prove a Resurrection, or Future State: But all of them together would not so well have suited his Purpose, as one Text out of Moses; because They would not have been so well fitted to turn off the Edge of the Objection here brought. They might have ferved to ballance it, or over-rule it, and to break its Force; but the Way which our Lord took, disabled it at once, and threw it quite out, that it should rise up no more. So then, if We consider Him merely as maintaining a Position, He might perhaps have chosen some clearer or stronger Texts; but if We consider Him in Capacity of Respondent, and as defeating a fubtle and plaufible Objection, there could not have been a more effectual Way of doing it: And He very well knew, that fometimes the hitting off an Objection in a neat, clear, and strong Manner, has more Weight with the Generality, than the pouring in many Demonstrations on the other Side. Accordingly we find, by the Event, how well the Thing answered. The SADDUCEES were effectually put to Silence: So sensible were They of the Force of what He had faid. The SCRIBES, They highly applauded it, and complimented Him upon it, Master, Thou hast well said. And even the Common People readily understood the Strength of his Reasoning, and mightily admired it, and affented to it: For, St. MATTHEW tells us, that when the Multitude heard it, They were astonish'd at his Doctrine, on that Head b.

III.

Come We therefore, Thirdly, to confider the Force of our Lord's Argument, which was then fo clearly apprehended, at first Hearing, by Learned and Unlearned, by Friends and Adversaries, and admired by All. We may judge from thence, that it requires no long Train of Thought to comprehend it, no intense Application to be Master of it, if We happen to take it right. But It may be Reafon fufficient for rejecting any Interpretation, if It appears laboured and fubtle, and not well accommodated to ordinary Capacities. Let us fee then: The Words which the Argument is grounded upon, occur in the Sixth-Verse of the Third Chapter of Exodus. I am the God of ABRAHAM, and the God of ISAAC, and the God of JACOB. — I am, not, I was: God

Luke xx. 39. Matt. xxii. 33.

God was then God of those three Patriarchs, the Latest of which had been dead above 170 Years: still He continued to be their God. What could That mean? Is He a God of lifeles Clay, of moulder'd Carcases, of Dust and Rottenness? No fure: Besides, with what Propriety of Speech, could the Ashes of the Ground be yet called ABRAHAM, or ISAAC, or JACOB? Those Names are the Names of Persons, not of senseles Earth, and Person always goes where the Intelligence goes: Therefore ABRAHAM, ISAAC, and JACOB were still living and intelligent, fomewhere or other, when God declared, He was still their God; that is to fay, They were alive as to their better Part, their Souls; He is not a God of the Dead, but of the Living: Therefore the Soul furvives the Body: Therefore the SADDUCEES, who denied the separate Subsistence of Souls or Spirits, were confuted at once, and That by a very clear and plain Text, produced even from the Books of Moses.

But It will here be ask'd, How does This prove The Resurrection of the Body, which was the Point in Question? I answer, That was not the only Point, nor the main Point, though it follows This other, as I shall shew presently: But We may observe, in the mean while, that if The Argument really reach'd no farther than what I have mention'd, yet it was a very confiderable Point gain'd, and the rest was not worth disputing; or, however, the Sadducees would not dispute it. What They were afraid of, was a future Account: Now, whether it be, that Men shall give an Account in the Body. or without the Body, it would come much to the same; for still there would be an Account to be given, and there would remain the like dreadful Apprehension of a Judgment to come. Here lay the main Stress of the Dispute; and therefore when our Lord had undeniably proved a Future State, He had gone to the very Root of the Sadducean Principles; and if They once yielded thus far, They might readily grant the rest. Our Bleffed Lord knew the Men thoroughly, and took the shortest Way of confuting them, by striking at the very Heart of their Herefy. If He proved no more than the Soul's subsisting after Death, He proved enough to make the rest needless: For, as the Principles of the SADDUCEES hung all in a Chain, the breaking but one Link rendered the whole unferviceable. Admit but of a Future State, and then their fond Hopes were defeated, and their guilty Fears alarm'd; and VOL. II.

that

it was all to no Purpose for Them to contend. any farther upon that Head. This our Lord, being a Discerner of the Thoughts, perfectly knew; and fo by aiming his Darts aright, He at once filenc'd the Men, and quashed the Dispute. Such was his constant Way in all his Contests with his captious Adversaries: He instantly perceived where the whole Stress of the Cause lay, and there pointed his Replies with inimitable Force. But to proceed:

Though the Argument made Use of by our Lord, proved no more, directly, than What I have faid (and even That was enough) yet it might be easy to proceed upon it, 'till it would at length conclude in the Doctrine of a Refurrection, to make all compleat. For, if it be confidered, that Death was the Punishment of Sin, and that Every Person, remaining under that Sentence, and under the Dominion of Death, still carries about Him the Badges of the first Transgression, and the Marks of Divine Displeasure; I say, the Case being so, it cannot reasonably be supposed that the Souls of good Men, whom God has own'd for his, shall for ever remain in that inglorious State; but will fome Time or other be restored to their first Honours, or to What They were first ordain'd to in Paradise, before Sin entred. Wherefore, since God is pleased to acknowledge Himself still God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; it is highly reasonable to presume, that He will in due time restore Them to their original Privileges, removing from Them the Chains of Death, by re-uniting Soul and Body together in a happy and glorious Resurrection. Thus, the same Thread of Argument, which our Lord began with, and which directly proves the Immortality of the Soul, does also in Conclusion lead us on, by just and clear Consequences, to the Resurrection of the Body.

It may perhaps be objected, that the Argument thus explain'd, proves only that good Souls shall survive, and receive their Bodies new raised; not that the wicked shall; and Therefore The Sadducees were not intirely confuted. But, fince the main Principle of the SADDU-CEES was, that None at all do fo survive; They are abundantly confuted by proving that Some, at least, do; and every Man's common Sense will eafily supply the rest: For if good Men fubfift after Death, and are to be amply rewarded for their Obedience; Who can make any Question, but that the wicked also shall Vol. II. fub-G 2

100 CHRIST's Argument against

fubfist, to receive the Reward of their Dijobedience? Those two Points have so natural a Relation and Congruity together, that They imply, or inser each other; and the proving Either, is in effect proving Both. That the Sadduces well knew; and therefore in order to avoid One, They saw no other Way but to reject Both: Therefore, when our Blessed Lord had so plainly established one, He might be understood, by certain Inference and Implication; to have established the other also.

I have but one Thing more to observe upon the Text; namely, that Some Persons have prefumed to argue from the Words, For all live to Him, that Souls do not actually live in a separate State, but only, that dead Men shall be recalled to Life, and that for the present they live only in God's Decree, and in a metaphorical Sense: But This is a forced Construction of very plain Words, without Reason, or Foundation for it. To live to God, is a Phrase which is to be understood in Opposition to living in the Flesh, or living unto this World: And it is of the fame Import with What We meet with in Ecclesiastes, where it is said, The Spirit skall return unto God who gave it 2; or with with That of the Book of Wisdom— The Souls of the Righteous are in the Hands of God^a. This is what is meant by living to God: They are under his Eye, and within his Protection, in the invisible World, after having taken their Farewel of This: In short, when They have done with the Life that now is, They yet remain, and are alive unto God, enjoying his Presence, and rejoycing in his Favour and Protection.

The Sum then of what has been faid is, That the Soul of Man is of a Substance distinct from the Body; that it subsists in a separate State, after the animal Diffolution, and never dies; and lastly, that All Men shall one Day rise again with their Bodies, and shall give Account for their own Works. The practical Use of these Principles is obvious; that fince a future Judgment is certain and inevitable, and that disbelieving it (with the Sadducees of old, or with Others fince) can do a Man no Service, except it be to fwell the fad Account; and fince there is no possible Way of fencing against it, but by taking all due Care to be provided for it; fince these Things are so, The best, and indeed the only Expedient we have to trust to, is to lead a good Life, to endeavour after 102 CHRIST's Argument, &c.

G 3

after universal Righteousness, both of Faith and Manners: So may We be able (in and through the all-prevailing Merits of Christ) to abide the tremendous Judgment, and be received with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, into those blessed Mansions which God has prepared for as Many as sincerely love Him, and keep his Commandments.

SERMON

SERMON VI.

A good Life the furest Title to a good Conscience.

I Јон N iii. 21, 22.

Beloved, if our Heart condemn Us not, then have We Confidence towards God: And what soever We ask, We receive of Him, because We keep his Commandments, and do those Things that are pleasing in his Sight.

treat of the Nature and Quality of a good Conscience, and the Comforts of it. The Apostle had been before speaking of assuring our Hearts before God by the strongest Evidences possible, by a true and unseigned Love of the Brethren. Hereby, says He, We know, that We are of the Truth; and shall asfure our Hearts, that is, pacify our Consciences, before Him. Then He adds, for if our own Hearts condemn Us, God will much more condemn Us: inafmuch as God is greater than our Hearts, his Knowledge is of greater Extent than Ours, He knoweth all Things. But if our Hearts condemn Us not, after close and impartial Examination of our Conduct, then have We, with good Reason, Confidence towards God; not doubting but that He will freely grant What soever We may properly ask of Him, fo long as We keep his Commandments, doing those Things that are pleasing in his Sight. Such appears to be the Tour or Turn of the Apostle's Sentiments, collected from the Text and Context. In discoursing farther, it may be proper,

G 4 know,

104 A good Life the furest Title

- I. To state the Nature and Quality of a fure Conscience, or clear Conscience, or What We commonly call a good Conscience.
- II. To fet forth the Advantage and Comfort of it.

I.

The Nature of a fure or clear Conscience ought to be first justly stated, lest We should mistake Shadow for Substance, Appearances for Realities, Presumption and vain Considence, for Truth

Truth and Soberness. The Apostle points out the general Nature of a good Conscience by this Mark; that our Hearts condemn us not, and that We know that We are of the Truth; know it by fome certain Rule, namely by This, that We keep God's Commandments, doing That which is pleasing in his Sight. Here is a Rule given whereby We may first measure our Conduct; And if our Conduct be found, upon a just Examination, to square with That Rule, then our Consciences are clear, and We may look up with a becoming Confidence to God. This is a Matter of great Weight, and of the last Importance: And yet there is no where more Room for Self-Flattery, and Self-Deceit. It is extremely natural for a Person to bring in a Verdict in Favour of Himself, when He has made no Examination at all, or a very fuperficial one, or however not fo strict and fevere a Scrutiny as an Affair of fuch Delicacy, and withal of fuch Moment, deserves. A Man will often call it acting according to his Conscience, when He acts according to his present Perswasion, without ever examining how He came by that Perswasion; whether through wrong Education, Custom, or Example; or whether from some secret Lust, Pride, or Prejudice, rather than from the Rule of God's written written Word, or from a Principle of right Reason. This cannot be justly called keeping a good Conscience: For, We ought not take up false Perswasions at all Adventures, and then to make those Perswasions our Rule of Life, instead of that Rule which God hath given us to walk by.

It may perhaps be faid, that St. PAUL Himfelf has warranted that Way of speaking: For, though He had once very wrongfully and grievously, under rash and false Perswasion, perfecuted the Church of God, yet He scrupled not to fay, upon a certain Occasion, afterwards, Men and Brethren, I have lived in all good Conscience before God, until this Day 2. But as there is no Necessity of construing the Words in that large Sense; so there are good Reasons to perswade us, that St. PAUL had no such Meaning. How frequently does He charge Himself, in his Epistles, as having been a very grievous Sinner, yea chief of Sinners b, on Account of his having once persecuted the Church of God? How then could He modefly pretend, or with Truth fay, that He had lived in all good Conscience, all his Life, to that Day? At other Times, whenever the same Apostle speaks of his having a good Conscience,

He

He constantly understood it with a View only to What He had done as a Christian, in his converted State. Herein, fays He, do I exercise my self, to have always a Conscience void of Offence toward God, and toward Men 3. This was faid in the Way of Answer to the false Accusations of the Yews, like as the former, and occurs in the Chapter next following: And the Words plainly relate only to his Christian Conversation; not to his former Jewish one. He had lived in all good Conscience, with respect to what the Yews had accused Him of: For, neither against the Law of the Jews, neither against the Temple, neither yet against CE-SAR, had He offended any thing at all'b, from the Time of his Conversion to Christ. So. St. PAUL's Phrase of a good Conscience, did not mean merely the living up to one's Perswasion, of whatever Kind it were, but living up to a just and well-grounded Perswasion, of What is consonant to the Will of God. If a Person acts merely according to his prefent ill-grounded Perswasion, which He never feriously and impartially examin'd into, He cannot be properly faid to maintain a good Conscience; because if He has any Self-Reflection at all, his Confcience must smite Him, and his own Heart condema demn Him, for not taking more Care to inform Himself better. Every Person is in Duty bound to prove all Things, so far as, humanly speaking, in his Circumstances, He may; in Order both to admit and to hold fast that which is good. It is deceiving Our Selves to imagine that We have a good Conscience, when We have used no reasonable Care in examining whether it be a right Conscience, a well-grounded Person and the transport of the second services.

Acts xxiv. 16. b Acts xxv. 8:

108 A good Life the surest Title

fwasion that we proceed upon, or not.

There is another common Method of Selfdeceit, when a Person, Who well enough understands the Rule He is to go by, yet forgets to apply it to his own particular Case, and so speaks Peace to Himself, all the while that He transgresses it. It is irksome and painful to make Home Reflections: And it is a much eafier Way, to take it for granted, that We have done nothing amiss, than to be critical, and prying into our own Bosoms. King SAUL could fay confidently, even after the Prophet SAMUEL had reproved Him, that He had obeyed the Voice of the Lord, and had gone the Way which the Lord sent Himb. He had done it indeed in Part; And, under a Kind of Confusion of Thought (natural or artificial) He was disposed to pass that Part off, for the Whole, till his Mistake was pressed so close upon Him, that there was no Room for Evafion. A much better Man than He (I mean DAVID) after two very grievous Transgressions, appeared to be under the like Infensibility, and the like Self-Confidence (either blinded by the Height of his Station, or the Strength of his Passions) till the Prophet NATHAN, by an affecting Parable, shew'd Him his Mistake, and then charged the Matter home to Him, by faying, Thou art the Man 2. There is a Kind of Fascination in Self-Flattery, for the Time, which makes a Man blind to his own Failings; and prompts Him to speak Peace to Himself, when He has no Foundation for it, but a fond Prefumption, or an overweening Vanity.

But the Way to have folid and abiding Satiffaction, is first to examine Our Selves, strictly and impartially, by the Rule of God's Commandments; in Order to see clearly how far We have come up to it, or how far, and in what Instances we have transgressed it, or come short of it. If, after a strict Scrutiny, We can pronounce assuredly, that our Heart is right, and our Ways good (due Allowances only made for Sins of daily Incursion, or human Instrmities) We may then presume to think, that We

110 A good Life the furest Title

We have a clear Conscience in the main, and such as may embolden Us to look up with a good Degree of Confidence towards God, as One that will mercifully accept of our Prayers here, and of our Souls and Bodies hereafter.

I am aware of a Difficulty which may arise from some Words of St. PAUL, which at first hearing may appear to clash with the Doctrine of the Text, as I have been expounding it. St. PAUL fays, I judge not mine Own Self: For I know nothing by my felf: Yet am Inot hereby justified: But He that judgeth me, is the Lord. Therefore judge Nothing before the Time, until the Lord come &c2. Do not these Words sound, as if no certain Judgment could, or ought to be made by any Man of his own spiritual State to Godwards? And if fo, What becomes of the Comfort of a good Conscience? Or how can We have that Confidence towards God, which the Text speaks of? In Answer to the seeming Difficulty, I may observe, first, that it is certain St. PAUL could not mean to detract from the joyous Comfort of a good Conscience, fince He more than once declared expressly, that it was What He Himself enjoy'd, and He was fully affured of it: Besides that No Man ever expressed a more satisfactory Assurance of his own final Justification than He once did, in these Words: I have fought a good Fight, I have finished my Course, I have kept the Faith: Henceforth there is laid up for me a Crown of Righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that Day a. So far St. PAUL: How then could He say, judge nothing before the Time, until the Lord come, if That were his Meaning, that a Man might not judge of his own spiritual State beforehand, nor speak Peace to Himself upon the Strength of a clear Conscience? Those two Suppositions are evidently contradictory to each other, and can never stand together. Wherefore We must of Necessity look out for some other Meaning of What St. PAUL fays, concerning the Impropriety of judging any Thing of our felves before the final Day of Judgment. He was there speaking of the fulfilling the Work of the Ministry with the utmost Exactness; and He would have No Man presume to judge beforehand that He had so fulfilled it: For, tho' He should be able to espy Nothing in Himself wherein he had been to blame, had no Sin to charge Himfelf with on that Head; yet That would not fuffice to clear Him perfeetly, that is, to justify Him in the strictest Sense, because God might see Faults, either of Omissions.

112 A good Life the Surest Title

Omission or Commission, which the Man Himself might not be aware of: Therefore, fays the Apostle, judge Nothing as to your faithful fulfilling your Duty in every Point, before the Time: Presume not so far: God only can judge whether you have been altogether free from Blame in that Article. So the Meaning of the Apostle, in that Place, was only to check vain Presumption, and to prevent proud Boasting: And it comes almost to the same with what St. JAMES fays, In many Things we offend All 2: And what St. John says, If we say that we have no Sin, we deceive our selves, &cb: Or to what the Psalmist intimates by faying, Who can understand his Errors? Cleanse Thou me from my secret Faultse. Now, the Doctrine of a good Conscience, or of an humble Assurance of our being in a State of Grace, is very confistent with this other Doctrine, that the very Best of Men are Sinners in God's Sight, and may in fundry Instances be found worthy of Blame, more than They Themselves had been ever aware of. The Gospel-Remedy for those secret Sins, those which have beither escaped our Notice, or have flipp'd out of Memory, is a general Repentance, together with fuch Kind of Prayers as the Pfalmist put up to the Throne of Grace, when He faid, faid, Cleanse Thou me from my secret Faults. Such Kind of Sins of Ignorance or of Infirmity are no Bar to true Peace of Mind, or to the Comforts of a good Conscience, or to a modest Assurance of our being in a State of Grace and Favour; provided only, that, upon a ferious Examination of our own Hearts and Lives, We do find that We indulge no known Habits of Sin; but use our careful Endeavours, by the Help of God's Grace, to discharge our bounden Duty in that Station of Life whereunto God has called Us. So then, this Place of St. PAUL, rightly understood, interferes not at all with the Doctrine of the Text as before explain'd. And I may further hint, that there were fome Ministers of the Gospel of that Time, Who were too much puffed up, and affected to be thought more confiderable than St. PAUL Himself; and it was chiefly with a View to those Men that St. PAUL here spake fo exceeding modestly of Himself, in Order to teach Them Modesty in such a Way, as might give Them least Offence: Wherefore He says in Verse the 6th of the same Chapter, These Things, Brethren, I have in a Figure transferred to my Self and to APOLLOS, for your Sakes: That Ye might learn in Us, not to think of Men above That which is written, that No One of You VOL. II. be * A. Paul's usual METX OX MUXTIONS.

² Jam. iii. 2. b 1 John i. 8. c Pfal. xix. 12.

114 A Good Life the surest Title

be puffed up for One against Another. He was sensible that Some of the Church of CORINTH magnified Themselves too much, and were too much magnified by Others, in the Way of Emulation: But it was a very tender Point to speak plainly of, or even to touch upon, for Fear of widening the Breach, and heightening the Divisions: Therefore He chose that softest Way of Rebuke, not naming the Perfons Who were most to blame, but naming Himself in their Stead; and describing in his own Person, as a Minister of Christ, how bumbly and how modestly Every One ought to think of Himself, and behave in his Station.

But I return to the Business of a good Conficience, from which I have a little digressed, for the clearer reconciling of the several Texts, and for the removing Scruples. No Doubt but a serious considerate Man may know when He behaves as He ought to do, and may reap the Comfort of it: And though We are None of Us without Sin, of one Kind or other, but in many Things we offend All, yea more than We know of (but God knows) yet a good Life is easily distinguished from the Life of the Ungodly, and a State of Grace from a State of Sin: And so there is Room enough left for the Joy of a good Conscience, where Men live as becometh the Gospel of Christ, perfecting Holiness, to such a Degree as Man can be perfect, in the Fear of God.

eth

II.

Having thus stated the Nature, and clear'd the Meaning of a good Conscience, I now proceed to discourse of the Comforts of it. These are pointed out, in very expressive Words, by the Apostle in the Text: If our Hearts condemn us not, then have We Confidence towards God; and what soever we ask, we receive of Him. What greater Comfort can there be, than conscious Virtue, drawing after it the Favour, the Countenance, the Friendship of God, in Whom all Happiness centers, and upon Whom all Things entirely depend? If God be with Us, who can be against Us? What Friends can We want, while in Him We have All that are truly valuable? Or what Bleffings can We defire, but what He is both willing, and able -to show'r down upon Us, only leaving it to · Him to judge what is fafest and most convenient for Us. What soever a good Man asks in Faith, if it be for his Soul's Health, That He is fure to receive; as the Apostle in the Text informs Us. Will He ask Temporal Bleffings? He may, but with Referve and Caution; not forgetting to add these or the like Words: VOL. II. ·H 2 Yet .

116 A Good Life the furest Title

Yet not my Will, but Thine be done. Will He ask rather (as sure He will) Spiritual Blesfings, as Pardon and Grace, Holiness here, Happiness hereafter? Those He may ask earneftly, abfolutely, freely, and without Referve; and is fure to be heard in doing it, fo long as He keeps God's Commandments. There is no Pleasure in Life comparable to That which arises in a good Man's Breast, from the Sense of his keeping up a friendly Intercourse, a Kind of familiar Acquaintance with God. I do not mean an irreverent, a Kind of faucy Familiarity, fuch as hath been feen in some fawning Hypocrites, or wild Enthusiasts; and which is as different from the true filial Reverence, as the affected Cringings, or nauseous Freedoms of a Parafite, are from the open, decent, humble Deportment of a respectful Admirer. The Text expresses a good Man's Comfort, by his having Confidence towards God: And in the next Chapter, the fame Apostle says: Herein is our Love made perfect, that We may have Boldness in the Day of Judgment, or against the Day of Judgment: Because as He is, so are We in this World: That is to fay, We are in the same Interests with Him, are his Retainers, and Domesticks of his Family and Houshold. The Apostle adds; There

There is no Fear in Love; but perfect Love casteth out Fear: Because Fear hath Torment a.

I have cited these other Texts for the clearer apprehending of what the Confidence towards To make it still plainer, I may God means. add, that, like as a dutiful and obedient Child, conscious of a Parent's Love, and of the reciprocal Affection there is between Them, approacheth not with fearful Looks or down-cast Dread, but comes with Smiles in his Countenance, and Joy in every Gesture; so a truly good Man appears in God's Presence, under a joyous Sense of the divine Love towards Him, and has none of those dreadful Apprehensions which guilty Men have, or ought to have, as often as They come before Him. An awful Distance there ought indeed to be between the Creature and his Creator: But where an Union of Wills and Affections has made Us as it were One with CHRIST, Who is effentially One with God, then that awful Distance brings no Torment with it, but rather fills the Mind with inexpressible Joy and Admiration.

Tho' St. John has faid, that perfect Love casteth out Fear; yet St. Paul has said, Work out your own Salvation with Fear and Trembling. How shall we reconcile the seeming Difference? It may be reconciled thus: St. JOHN by Fear meant a tormenting Fear; for He obferved, that Fear, fuch as He spake of, bath Torment in it: But St. PAUL understood by Fear, that Kind of Filial Fear temper'd with Love, which has no fuch Torment in it. St. PAUL, in the same Place where He speaks of working out our Salvation with Fear and Trembling, immediately adds: For, it is God who worketh in you, both to will and to do of his good Pleasure2. Observe, how comfortable a Reason He assigns for Fear and Trembling, sufficient, One would think, to remove all melancholy Fears, Doubts, or Diffidence: And so it is. But Who can think of the immediate Prefence of the Tremendous Deity, without some Trembling Awe and Concern upon his Mind? Whenever God has been pleased to fignify his Approach by visible Symbols and sensible Appearances to frail Mortals, They have instantly been filled with Dread and Horrour. The Prophet DANIEL upon fuch Occasions, funk down into a Trance b; and even the Apostle JOHN fell down as dead for a Season c. So dreadful are the Approaches of the Divine Majesty, tho' coming in Love, when made in a fensible Way, in some dazling and glorious Form.

H 3 ence?

a 1 John iv. 17, 18. b Philip. ii. 12.

118 A Good Life the surest Title

[?] Philip. ii. 13. b Dan. viii. 17, 18. -x. 9. c Revel. i. 17.

Form. But when God comes to Us to make his Abode with usa, and to work within us (which He certainly does, because He has so promised) we feel no sensible Emotions: Because neither the Senses nor the Imagination is struck by any outward Appearances, but all is invisibly and spiritually performed; and there is Nothing but abstract Thought, and Christian Recollection that can give us any Notion of the Divine Presence, in such his silent and unfeen Approaches. However, a lively Faith in it, and an undoubted Experience of it, may be sufficient to affect a devout Mind with a Kind of trembling Awe of the Divine Majefly conceived to be present, and working in Us: And that Confideration may best account for St. PAUL's Meaning, where He fays: Work out your own Salvation with Fear and Trembling: For, it is God that worketh in You, and fo on. - There is Nothing in This Matter which takes off from the transporting Pleafure of a clear and good Conscience, grounded upon the stable Support of a well-spent Life, the only fure Anchor to rest upon, and That no otherwise than as it finally rests in the allfufficient Merits of CHRIST JESUS, which alone can supply the Defects of our own Righteousness,

H 4

120 A Good Life the surest Title

teousness, or render even our best Services accepted.

But the greater the Comfort of a good Conscience is, the more folicitous ought We to be, that We proceed upon fure Grounds, in the Judgment which We make of our Own Selves; and that We mistake not Presumption, or Self-Admiration, for true Peace of Mind. Many Marks might be mention'd, whereby to diftinguish One from the Other: But It may fusfice to point out One which is the surest of any; namely, Growth in Goodness, Growth in Grace. The Progress of the Christian Life is gradual; and our highest Attainments here are a still growing Perfection. Examine your Title to the Comforts of a good Conscience by this Rule; and you shall find It will not deceive You. If We are daily improving in Wifdom and Virtue, gaining Ground of our Vices or Passions more and more; If We find Our Selves more patient under Adversity, and less puffed up in the Day of Prosperity; If We perceive, that We can bear Affronts, or Injuries with more Calmness and Unconcernedness, and are more disposed than formerly to forget, and forgive; If We have greater Command over our Appetites, and can take Delight in Temperance, Soberness, and Chastity;

If,

If, instead of doing Wrong to Any Man, We find Our Selves more and more inclined to Kindness, Friendliness, and Charity; If, instead of hanging back, with Respect to Religious Duties, We find our Relish for them heighten'd, our Devotions raised, and our Ardors more inflamed; If our Attachments to the World grow weaker and weaker, and our Aspirations towards Heaven every Day stronger and stronger, the nearer We approach to the End of our Race; I fay, If We find Matters thus to stand (upon the strictest Enquiry We can make into our Hearts and Lives) then may We, upon fure Grounds, judge favourably of our present State and Circumstances, and may humbly prefume that God is in Us of a Truth, and that We are, by the Grace of God, thro' the Merits of CHRIST JESUS, in the High Road to Salvation.

The country of the second

A CONTRACTOR OF THE STATE OF TH

** **

SERMON VII.

The Nature and Manner in which the Holy Spirit may be supposed to operate upon Us: And the Marks and Tokens of such Operation.

Rom. viii. 14.

As many as are led by the Spirit of God, They are the Sons of God.

UR present High Festival a, which is of ancient Standing in the Church of Christ, is peculiarly dedicated to the Honour of the Holy Spirit, a Divine Person, Partner with the Father, and the Son, in the one eternal, all-glorious Godhead. Divine Wisdom has vouchsafed herein to apprize Us of the Relation We bear to each Person, and the Dependence We have upon Them

² Whitfunday.

Them All, that We also (among other Creatures) may pay our dutiful Homage, and Adoration accordingly.

All the Persons of the Godhead are reprefented, in Sacred Writ, as jointly concurring in our Creation and Preservation, and jointly contributing, in mysterious Order, to our Redemption, and final Salvation: But the present Occasion obliges Me to confine My Self chiefly to What concerns the Third Person, his Presence with Us, and his kind Offices towards Us.

He is fet forth, in the New Testament, as our Comforter abiding among usa, and as dwelling in usb: And that, not with respect to our Souls only, but even our Bodies also; these Tabernacles of Clay: For they likewise have the Honour to be confidered, as the facred Temple wherein He is pleas'd to reside c. They are thereby fanctified, for the present, and fealed also, for the Time to come: Sealed unto the Day of their Redemptiond; that is to fay, marked out, and infured for a happy and joyful Resurrection to Life eternal. For, as Many as are led by the Spirit of God, They are the Sons of God; and therefore (as foon after follows follows in the same Chapter) if Children, then Heirs, and Joynt-Heirs with CHRIST-that We may be glorified together a. In discoursing farther, it will be proper to shew,

² John xvi. 7. - xiv. 16. 6 1 Cor. iii. 16.

c 1 Cor. vi. 10. d Eph. iv. 30.

- I. What it is to be led by the Spirit; or What it is that the Holy Spirit does for the furthering our Salvation.
- II. How, and in what Manner He may be supposed to act, or operate.
- III. By what Marks or Tokens it may be feen, that He does operate upon Us, and that We are led by Him.
- IV. What is the Use and Improvement which We are concern'd to make of the Whole.

T.

As to the first Particular, which relates to the Spirit's leading Us in our Way to Salvation, it is observable, that our Blessed Lord, taking his folemn Leave of his Disciples, a little before his Paffion, confign'd Them, as it were, over to the Care and Guidance of the Holy Ghost, the Comforter, Who would guide Them into all Truthb, and would abide with Them, and with the Church after Them, for ever c. He repeated the same Promise to Them, ³ Rom. viii. 17. 6 John xvi. 13. 6 --- xiv. 16.

126 The Nature and Tokens

Them, a little before his Ascension into Heaven, as appears from the History of Aets i. 5.8.

This, however, is not to be fo understood, as if the Holy Ghost were now our sole Conducter, exclusive of the Other Two Divine Perfons: For our Bleffed Lord, in the very fame Place where He promises to fend the Comforter to abide with Us for ever, promises alfo, that the Father and Himfelf shall make the like Abode with good Christians. If any Man love Me, fays He, My Father will love Him, and We will come unto Him, and make our Abode with Him 2. Elsewhere He promises to his Disciples, his own spiritual Presence, to continue with Them, as long as the Church, or the World should last. Lo, I am with You alway, even unto the End of the World. Amen b. From all which it is plain, that God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Ghoft, are equally present to good Men, in all Ages of the Church; and that when our Lord fpake of his departing, and leaving the World, He meant it barely of his bodily Absence: And because, from the Time of his Ascension, He was to be present, only in a spiritual and invisible Way, as a Spirit, and together with the Holy Spirit; therefore He confider'd his Church from thence-forwards, as being peculiarly under the Guidance of the Holy Ghost; though strictly speaking, it is under the Spiritual Guidance of All the Three Persons. Hence it is, that fuch fpiritual Guidance (which often goes under the Name of Grace, in the New Testament) is sometimes ascribed to the Father, fometimes to the Son, and fometimes to the Holy Ghost, as it is the common Work of All; and may be indifferently, and promiscuously, attributed to Any of Them fingly, or to All of Them together. So We find Mention made, more than once, of the Grace of our Lord [ESUS CHRIST; and of the Grace of God, meaning God the FATHER: And yet the HOLY GHOST is emphatically and eminently styled The Spirit of Grace, as being, fome Way or other, more immediately concerned in the Work of Grace, and thereby uniting true Believers both with the Father and the Son.

Now, for the clearer Conception of What Grace means, in this emphatical Sense, and of What the Holy Spirit does in the Work of Grace, upon the Minds of the Faithful; We may distinctly consider it under its several Views, or Divisions.

1. There is a Kind of illuminating, or enlightening Grace given, as often as the Holy Spirit Spirit conveys and instills good Thoughts, wholefome Counsels, or salutary Instructions; opening the Understanding to receive and embrace them.
To This Head belongs what the Psalmist says:
Open thou mine Eyes, that I may behold wondrous Things out of thy Law a. And in the New Testament it is recorded, that The Lord opened the Heart of Lydia, that She attended unto The Things which were spoken of Paulb. It is the Spirit that gives us true Light, and likewise gives it Reception.

2. There is also a kind of sanctifying Grace, when the Holy Spirit of God rectifies the Heart, inclines the Will, and meliorates the Affections: For, it is God that worketh in Us both to will and to do, of his good Pleasure; as St. Paul testifies. This sanctifying Grace is commonly distinguish'd into three Parts or Branches, called preventing, assigning, perfecting; being considered, first, as laying the early Seeds of that spiritual Life; next, as contributing to its Growth and Progress; and lastly, as adding the simishing Hand to it.

3. There is one peculiar Work of the Spirit, which, tho' it may be reduced to One or Other of the three Heads of preventing, assisting, or perfecting Grace (as before mentioned) may yet

Pfal. cxix, 12. Acts xvi. 14. Philip. xi. 13.

yet deserve some special Notice here: And That is, The Grace of true Devotion, attended with deep Compunction of Heart. St. PAUL fpeaks of it in the Epistle to the Romans, in these Words: The Spirit also helpeth our Infirmities; for We know not What We should pray for as We ought: But the Spirit it self maketh Intercession for Us, with Groanings which cannot be uttered . That is to fay, The Holy Spirit of God, working within, fometimes strikes the Mind of good Men with fuch Ardency of Devotion, and fuch vehement Compunctions, that their Hearts are too full to utter What They think; and fo, for the prefent, They are not able to vent the pious Breathings of their Souls in any other Way, than That of Sighs and Groans. The Holy Spirit is the impulsive Cause of all such religious Ardors, such strong Convulsions of godly Remorfe, or godly Affection; it is the Work of God upon the humble Minds.

These few Hints may suffice to give You some general Idea of the Work of Grace, or of What the Holy Spirit does for the surthering the spiritual Life here, in order to our Salvation hereafter.

Vol. II. I The Rom. viii. 26,

The next Enquiry is, how, or in what Manner, He may be conceived to operate, and to effectuate what He does?

In this Enquiry We ought to proceed with all becoming Modesty and Reverence; fince We are not able perfectly to unfold the mysterious Workings of the tremendous Deity upon the Spirit of Man. But, one Thing We are certain of, in the general, that Whatever is ordinarily done of this Kind, is done in a gentle, moral, infinuating Way, and not by mechanical, irrefiftible Impulses, such as would take away Human Liberty, or reduce Men to a fort of intelligent Clockwork, or reasoning Machines: For, upon that Supposition, every good Work, Word, or Thought would be fo entirely Gods, that no Part of it would be Ours; and so all our Virtue would be mere Force upon Us (and therefore no Virtue of Ours at all) and there would be no Room left for the numberless Exhortations to Well-doing, which Scripture fo much abounds with, nor for any proper Title to future Rewards. It is manifest therefore that the Operations of God's Holy Spirit upon Us, only prepare Us for Godliness, or incite Us and enable Us thereto; the rest must come from Our selves. Accordingly, Scripture always supposes, that, notwithstanding any the strongest Interpositions of Grace, Men are still left capable of refisting the Holy Spirit a, and, Grieving the Holy Spirit b, and even quenching the Holy Spirit. For, the Holy Spirit moves and inclines only, and does not compel: He leads and conducts as Many as will be led and conducted by Him; but does not fo forcibly attract Them, as to over-rule all stubborn Resistance, or reluctant Perverseness. God has provided no Remedy for malicious Wickedness, and proud Obstinacy: But in such Cases, the Holy Spirit commonly retires and withdraws, leaving the Incorrigible and Incurable to Themfelves, and to their own certain Destruction.

If We may presume to be a little more particular upon so awful a Subject, it seems that the Holy Spirit of God works upon the Minds of Men by proper Applications to their Reason and Conscience, to their Hopes and Fears; suggesting to Them What is right and good, and laying before Them, in a strong Light, the Happiness which they may attain to by Obedience, and the Misery consequent upon Disobedience. And I may add, that one very considerable Article of Divine Wisdom and Good-Vol. II. I 2

Acts vii. 51. Ephef. iv. 30.

132 The Nature and Tokens

ness lies in the providential ordering all Human Affairs in fuch a Manner, as may most fitly ferve the Purpofes of Grace; not preferving good Men altogether from Temptations (for, How then should They improve in Virtue, without the Exercise proper for it?) but fo restraining, limiting, and governing the Temptations, that they shall not press harder, or continue longer, than may best answer the End and Defign of God's permitting them. Let This suffice, in the general, with respect to the ordinary Methods of Grace, and the Manner of the Spirit's operating. It confifts partly, in the outward Direction of all sublunary Affairs, and partly in inward and gentle Applications to the Minds of Men, fuited to the Times, Seafons, and Circumstances before provided.

There have been Instances of other Methods of Grace, which may be called extraordinary; as was once seen in the miraculous Conversion of 3000 Persons at once; and again more particularly, in the miraculous Conversion of St. Paul. Of such Cases it is observable, that, tho' the outward Means were miraculous, and certainly effectual with all who were fitly disposed; yet even there, the inward Grace was not absolutely irresistible. Paul was a religious well-disposed Man before his miraculous Conversion, and only wanted new Light and a better Direction. The outward Call, in that Case, was miraculous: But the inward Grace which went with it, was no Other than What might have been refifted, and would have been refisted, had it fallen upon a perverse Temper, and a stubborn Heart. St. PAUL Himself intimates as much, where, speaking of Himself, He says: Whereupon, O King AGRIPPA, I was not disobedient unto the Heavenly Vision a. He might have been disobedient; but He chose to obey, being, in the main, a Person of good natural Probity, and not under the Dominion of any malicious Wickedness, or stubborn Passions. We do not find that any Miracles could convert the hardned Pharisees, or Sadducees, or Simon Magus: And tho' ELYMAS the Sorcerer, was miraculoufly struck blind, yet it had no Saving Effect upon his Heart. There is a certain Degree of Obstinacy, which the Grace of God extends not to, or attempts not to conquer. My Spirit shall not always strive with Man, said God, with respect to the old World b. They were gone too far, to be curable by the ordinary Methods of Grace: And an All-wife God I 3 would

2 Acts xxvi. 19.

134 The Nature and Tokens

would not fend Them an irrefisible Grace (which had been improper) to convert Them; but He fent a Flood to destroy Them: So in the Case of Sodom and Gomorrhab, He attempted not, by any ordinary or extraordinary Grace, to reclaim Them; but rain'd down Fire and Brimstone from Heaven, to consume Them. The Reason of all which is, that Men, confidered as Free-agents, must be reformed by the gentler Measures, or none: If They will not be led by the Holy Spirit of God, They shall not be driven; because then their Virtue would have Nothing of Choice in it, and confequently would be no Virtue at all, in any proper Sense of the Word, nor meet for a Reward.—So much for my second general Head. I proceed now, thirdly,

III.

To enquire, by what Marks or Tokens We may discern when the Holy Spirit operates upon Us, and when We are led or conducted by Him.

The Marks or Tokens of the Spirit's operating appear chiefly, either in Checks of Conscience disfuading us from Evil, or in godly Motions inciting us to What is right and good. For, tho' what passes within us of that Kind is not distinguish-distinguishable, by the Manner of it, from the natural Workings of our own Minds; yet Revelation, in Conjunction with our enlightened Reason, does abundantly assure Us, that every good Thought, Counsel, and Desire cometh from above, and is the Work of super-natural Grace upon the Heart.

But before We draw fuch Conclusion, with respect to any particular Thought which passes within, special Care should be taken, that we proceed upon fure Grounds in the forming our Judgment of it: Otherwise, We may be apt to ascribe the Rovings of Fancy, or mere Dreams of our own, to the Holy Spirit of God.

Some very good Men, but of a melancholy Cast, have been observed to make it a Rule to Themselves, in Cases of Perplexity, to lean to that Side wherein They find most Ease to their own Minds; concluding, that the Peace which They experience, is it self a Symptom of Divine Direction. The Rule is a good general Rule; because, in most Cases, a Man's own Mind is his best Casuist, in judging of right and wrong, of good and evil. But yet sometimes it happens, that a Person may be under the Insluence of unperceived Prejudices, or Passions, which warp Him to a Side, and lay a Bias upon Him: And therefore there is no safe and certain Rule to go by, in fuch Cases, but a strict Examination into the Nature and Quality of the Action: And if, upon cool Reflexion, We find that What We are inwardly diffuaded from, is really evil, or What We are inwardly prompted to, is really good, then may We safely and justly ascribe such Motions to The Holy Spirit of God.

As to our judging of our whole Conduct, and whether, or how far, We are therein moved or conducted by the Holy Spirit, We have a fafe Rule to go by; namely, the Rule of God's Commandments. Whosever is born of God, doth not commit Sin 2; that is, doth not allow Himfelf in any known sinful Habit or Practice. He that keepeth God's Commandments (as St. John observes) dwelleth in God, and God in Himb. St. PAUL also to the same Purpose says; that, if We live in the Spirit, We shall walk in the Spirit c: And because such Walking is best feen by the Fruits, He enumerates the Fruits of the Spirit, in the same Place: The Fruit of the Spirit (fays He) is Love, Joy, Peace, Long-suffering, Gentleness, Goodness, Faith, Meekness, Temperance d. In short, the only sure Marks and Tokens of our being conducted by the Spirit of God, are a serious and stedfast Belief

^{2 1} John iii. 9. iii. 24.

c Gal. v. 25. d ---- v. 22, 23.

lief of what the fame Spirit hath taught Us, and a conscientious Obedience to all the Laws of the Gospel.

IV.

I pass on to the Fourth and last Particular, namely, The Use and Improvement to be made of the Whole.

I. One great Use is, to be ever mindful of the World of Spirits whereunto We belong; and particularly of that Blessed Spirit, Who presides over Us, and whose Temple We are, while We behave as becomes Us. We are used to look upon Our Selves as the very lowest Order of intelligent Beings, and perhaps very justly: But yet I know not what other Order of Creatures there is which can boast of higher Privileges than We; while God the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost vouchsafe to make their Abode with Us, and to accept even of our earthly Bodies (while clean and undefiled) as their common Temple to dwell in.

This Confideration, by the Way, may ferve to shew Us the Folly of All Those, Who have thought it below the Divine Majesty to take upon Him Flesh and Blood, and have made That their Pretext for disputing the Divinity of our Blessed Saviour. For, if it is not below the Majesty even of God the Father, to abide, in some Sense,

138 The Nature and Tokens

Sense, with Flesh and Blood; How can it be thought beneath the Dignity of God the Son, to take our Nature upon Him? Besides, true Essential Majesty can suffer no Detriment, can never be impaired by any gracious Condescensions: But the greater the Divine Condescension is, the brighter is the Glory: Therefore All the Three Persons of the eternal Godhead have condescended to dwell, in godlike Manner, even with mortal Man. Should not This Consideration move Us to set the less Value upon Things below, and to elevate our Affections to Things above?

2. Another Use to be made of the present Meditation, is, to be ever mindful of putting up our devout Prayers to the Throne of Grace, that the Spirit of God may alway dwell with Us, and never depart from Us: But then, to make our Prayers the more effectual, We should take Care to avoid all such evil Practices as may offend, or grieve the Holy Spirit of God, and move Him to desert Us, or to grow estranged from Us.

3. Thirdly, and lastly, since the Benefit of all depends, at length, upon our own willing Compliance, and hearty Endeavours, let Us make it our constant Resolution to attend the Motions, and to obey the Suggestions of God's Holy Spirit; and fo to work out our own Salvation, with Fear and Trembling a. While God works in Us, and for Us, We must also work for Our selves; or else his Grace is sent in vain. Therefore, tho' the Psalmist prays to God, to create in Him a clean Heart, and a new Spirit b; yet elsewhere God Himfelf, speaking to his People, fays, Cast away from You all your Transgressions, make You a new Heart, and a new Spirit c. So then a good Heart and a good Life are God's Work, and they are our Work also: They are a Mixture, or Compound of Both. God will never fail to perform his Part, provided only that We are not wanting in Ours. Use We therefore first, the appointed Means of Grace (appointed by God) fuch as Hearing, Reading, Praying, and receiving the Holy Communion; for Thefe are the ordinary Instruments of Grace, the Conduits or Channels, in and by which God conveys it. Take We Care to comply with, and obey the Grace of God once received, and to bring forth the Fruits of it in our Lives and Conversations.

² Philip. xi. 12. ^b Pfal. li. 10. ^c Ezek. xviii. 30, 31.

SERMON VIII.

The Springs and Motives of false Pretences to the Holy Spirit; with the Rúles and Marks of trying and detecting them.

I JOHN iv. I.

Beloved, believe not every Spirit, but try the Spirits whether they are of God.

UR present Festival a is the Memorial of the awful coming of God's Holy Spirit upon the Apostles, pursuant to our Lord's Promise; and is particularly dedicated to the Honour of that Divine Person, the Third Person of the adorable Godhead. Him We ought to honour in every Way that either Sacred Writ, or our own enlighten'd Reafon

2 Whitfunday.

Reason hath pointed out to Us: More particularly, in guarding with utmost Care, against all Abuses of that High Name; against imputing any fond Fancies, or Follies, or Frensies to the Bleffed Spirit of God. SIMON MA-Gus, disturbed in Head and corrupt in Heart, was ambitious of the Thing, for the Sake chiefly of the Name; affecting to give it out, that Himself was some Great One a; or some great Power of Godb. And when He could not obtain it, being altogether unworthy of it, He endeavoured (as We learn from Church-History) to make up with Fiction and Oftentation, what was wanting in Fact; pretending that at fome Times He had been the great Oracle or Representative of God the Father to the Samaritans, and at other Times of the Son to the Yews, and again of the Holy Ghost to the Gentiles. So industrious was He to magnify Himself under fair Pretences, thereby hoping to draw the World after Him; as He did some Part of it, gaining Profelytes among the Ignorant, Credulous, and Undifcerning. 'This Kind of Traffick for Fame was constantly carried on by Some or Other, under some Shape or other, during the first Ages of the Church; and it has been continued in various Ways and in different Forms, thro' all fucceeding Ages, down to this Day. It is one of the most refined Artifices of SATAN's Policy: And God has permitted it for the Trial of his Faithful Servants; that They may be proved and exercifed every Way, and may learn to be as much upon their Guard against any Surprize of their Understandings, as against any Seduction of their Wills. It is fufficient, that both the New Testament and Old have given strong, repeated Warnings against every Temptation of that Kind; and have not only commanded Us to stand upon our Guard, in such Cases, but have also laid down Marks and Rules, whereby to discover, and whereby to repel every Wile of SATAN, and every the fubtilest Engine amongst all his Devices.

in

As to this Particular, there are many Cautions against it inserted up and down in the Sacred Writings: And I have here made Choice of one which appears to be as expressive and affecting as any, deliver'd by St. John, the latest Apostle: Beloved, Believe not Every Spirit, but try the Spirits whether They are of God, and so on. Which Words very plainly pointed at the false Pretenders to the Spirit, appearing in those early Days: Men that vainly boasted of Their being filled with the Holy Ghost, instructed extraordinarily from above, illuminated from on high, and commission'd to teach and gather Converts, in Opposition to the truly authorized and regular Ministers. The Apostle does not exhort Us altogether to neglect or pass by every vain Pretender (for then how shall We know whether They are vain, or not?) but He bids us suspend our Faith, and withold our Assent from Them; and, in the mean while, to try and examine what their boasted Pretences amount to. In discoursing surther, my Design is:

144 The Trial of Spirits.

- I. To enquire fomewhat particularly, into the Springs or Motives from which those false Pretences to the Spirit generally proceed.
- II. To confider, by what Rules or Marks any Pretences of that Kind may be tried, and discovered to be false and vain.
- III. To observe, how much it concerns every pious and considerate Christian to make the Trial, and to be upon his Guard in such Cases.

I.

I am first to enquire, from what Springs or Motives the false Pretences to the Spirit generally rally proceed. I have before hinted that Vain-Glory, or a Thirst after Fame, is often the moving Spring, the most prevailing Motive. But to go a little deeper; Self-love, of some Kind or other, is the general Foundation, the Root of all. Many and various are the Illusions of Self-love; and they often prevail, not only with Hypocrites, and Men of double Hearts, but even with well-meaning Persons of honest Minds, but of weak or diftemper'd Heads. Were None but ill-defigning Men to make false Pretences to the Spirit, The Temptation would be but coarfly laid, and would be less apt to deceive. The Fineness of SATAN's Policy chiefly lies, in making use even of pious, honest, well-meaning, but unwary Persons to work with. God may pity and pardon the Men so made use of for the Trial of Others, if their Ignorance was unconquerable, or their Infirmities unavoidable: If Theywere naturally half-witted, or half-diffracted, God may make Them merciful Allowances: But He will make no Allowances for Persons of better Sense, or stronger Faculties, if They suffer Themselves to be misled by such infatuated Instruments. A warm Zeal for Religion may often go along with Want of Knowledge, or found Discretion: And Nothing is more common, than for un-VOL. II. thinking® thinking Men to mifreckon their own Talents, and to take false Measures very ignorantly of Themselves. Self-love is natural to all Men, and is the abiding Pulse of every One's Heart; Which, if it be not carefully watch'd and guarded, will fometimes grievously impose even upon Wife and Shrewd Men; but much more upon the Careless and Undiscerning. Who does not wish to be One of the Favourites of Heaven, and to be extraordinarily illuminated, or conducted by God's Holy Spirit? Let but a fond Self-Lover dwell often and long upon this deluding Thought, and He will be apt by Degrees, especially if otherwise full of Conceit, to fancy Himself so illuminated, and so conducted, as He defires to be: And then every warm Sally of Imagination, or every unufual Emotion in his Breast (coming perhaps from the Tempter, or from his own fond Dreams) will immediately be construed as a godly Feeling, and an infallible Mark of some Divine Impulse, some secret Contact of God's Holy Spirit. When the pleafing Delufion is once indulged thus far, the Man begins prefently to fancy Himfelf a Kind of Saint upon Earth, or perhaps an Apostle: Or, if the Distemper runs higher (as we have known feveral Instances) He may conceive Himself greater than any Prophet of the Old Testament, Testament, or Apostle of the New: All Self Illusion, and little short of down-right Frenzy!

It is not to be doubted but that Persons of this unhappy Complexion must have some Colours, fome Appearances, whereby to deceive their own Hearts. The Colours commonly are fome great corporal Mortifications and Austerities, long Watchings, long Fastings, and perhaps immense Pains taken in uncommanded Services, such as God has not required at their Hands. Their fubmitting to fuch painful Services, They look upon as infallible Proofs of their own Sincerity, and of some marvellous Grace of God: Wherein again, They often deceive their own Hearts, and are not aware of the fecret Workings and fond Delufions of their own Self-Love: For, after all, there is not half so much Self-Denial shewn in those voluntary Austerities, accompanied with Pride and Oftentation, as there is in a less-pretending Conduct, squared by the Rule of God's Commandments.

If Persons, suppose, in a green Age, by the Practice of those Austerities, can once come to think Themselves wiser, and greater, and every way more considerable as Teachers, than the oldest and wisest and best-studied Divines; what a Compendious Method is thereby laid of arriving suddenly to deep Learning without Study,

Vol. II. K 2 and

and to profound Wisdom without, the Pain of Thought! And who would not wish, at so cheap and easy a Rate, and in so short a Time, to come at the Top of their Profession? Especially if neither their natural Talents, nor acquired Furniture, could afford Them any reafonable Prospect of ever becoming considerable at all in the common and ordinary Methods. A forward Ambition, joined with as much Sloth, and Impatience, may eafily prompt a Man to flatter Himself in such a Way: And certainly the Self-Denial which He exercises in some religious Austerities, is not worth the mentioning, in comparison to the prodigious Self-Indulgence which, upon the whole, is manifestly feen in it. It is compounding for Fame, Reputation, and Authority, by a few short voluntary Penances, and by making very familiar with the Holy Spirit of God; at the same time faving all the Weariness of the Flesh felt in bard Studies, all the irksome Labour of Languages, History, and Critical Enquiries, which are ordinarily requifite to form a judicious Interpreter of God's Word, and a faithful Guide of Souls. While Others are content to wait for Wisdom 'till an advanced Age, and to go on, the mean while, in the flow Methods of Labour and Industry which God has appointed;

ed; These Pretenders to the Spirit affect to be wife at once, and wife in a most eminent Degree, wife by Inspiration. Who sees not, that Laziness, and Love of Ease, and Self-Flattery, and Eagerness for an early Pre-eminence, may naturally tempt weak Men to fuch Self-Delufions? I do not fay that They themselves are commonly aware of the fecret Springs by which They are fo moved, not being used to cool Reflection, or fober Thought. There are no Charms more delusive than the Charms of Self-Love; and the simpler Men are, the less do they perceive them, and the more liable are They to be misled by them. Even Children often discover a great deal of Cunning which their Self-Love teaches Them, and which They never reflect upon; neither do They fo much as perceive by what Springs They are actuated; tho' a judicious Stander-by will eafily look through it, and as eafily account for it: Such may be, fuch probably is the Cafe with every well-meaning false Pretender to the Spirit. As to fubtile and defigning Hypocrites, I meddle not with their Case: The finest Hypocrify may soon be discovered, and so is the less apt to deceive much, or long: But the well-meaning Pretenders to the Spirit, who through a fecret Self-Flattery, and a Cast of Melancholy, first deceive K 3' ceive Themselves, are, of all Men, the best fitted to deceive Other Persons. Their artless Simplicity, together with their bearty and affectionate Professions, are very apt to win upon the best-natured and best-disposed Christians, which the Tempter knows full well; and He never exercises a deeper Policy, or gains a greater Triumph, than when He can thus decoy Some of the most religious of God's Servants, deluding Them in a pious way, and, as it were, foiling Them with their own Weapons. let every considerate Christian, in such Cases, call to mind the good Advice of the Text; first, to try and examine the Spirits pretended, whether they are of God. We are not commanded to examine, whether the Pretenders are Sincere Men, or Hypocrites: That may often be doubtful, and it may be hard to pass any certain Judgment upon the Cafe: Besides, that it does not fo much concern Us. For, our Fault will not be the less, whether We are misled by a designing Hypocrite, or a blind Zealot, or a raving Enthusiast. Care must be taken, not to be misled by Any; neither by the cunning Craftiness of One, nor by the Simpleness of Another, nor by the Madness of a Third. But we must try and examine the Pretences of Each, and guard guard equally against All. I proceed therefore to my fecond Head of Discourse, namely,

II.

To confider by what Rules or Marks any Pretences of that kind may be tried, and detected to be false and vain.

1. Boasting and Ostentation are a flat Contradiction to the very supposal of the ordinary Graces boasted of; because Humility and Modesty are the very chief Graces, upon which all the rest hang. If a Man thinks Himself endowed with the Graces of the Spirit, let Him shew it in his meek Deportment, and by his good Works: But let Him not trumpet the Fame of it through the World, left his very doing it should be taken for a Demonstration that He has not the Spirit of God; but that some Spirit of Delufion has crept in, in his Stead. For, as a Man, by boasting of his good Breeding, does, in that very Act or Instance, prove Himself ill-bred; and, in boasting of his Wisdom, shews his Want of it; so a Man, who presumes to boast of the Grace of the Spirit, betrays his Want of Grace in that very Instance. Our Blessed Lord rebuked the Pharisees for sounding a Trumpet before Them in the Synagogues, and in the Streets. that They might have Glory of Men, when They K 4 did did their Alms2: But What would He have faid to Men, who should be noising it abroad, how full They are, not of one Virtue only, but of all Virtues, and of all Graces? For That must be meant by being full of the Spirit, if it means any Thing. This Way of founding the Trumpet before Them, to draw the Eyes and Attention of the World after Them (without Miracles to prove their Miffion) is much more indecent, and immodest, than what the Pharifees did; besides the additional Profaneness of making a very irreverent Use of the tremendous Name of God's Holy Spirit. To be short, You may depend upon it, that a Religion fo noisy, fo pompous, fo theatrical, as what I have mention'd, is very little a-kin to the humble, and modest, and unpretending Religion of CHRIST.

2. Another fure Mark of a false Spirit, is Disobedience to Rule and Order, Contempt of lawful Authority, and especially any intruding into What does not belong to Them, or the attempting to draw off the People of God from that regular and standing Ministry which God has ordained, to follow Teachers set up by their own Authority, that is, by no Authority at all. Such irregular Practices come not of the Holy Spirit. God is not the Author of Confusion, but of Peace; as in all Churches of the Saints 2. St. PETER'S Rule is: Submit your felves to every Ordinance of Man, (that is, lawful Ordinance) for the Lord's Sakeb. Indeed, the Apostles had special Commission from God to oppose Human Ordinances, and to disturb the Religions then prevailing, which were false Religions: But They had the Power of working Miracles, which were their Credentials to authorize Them in it, and their Heavenly Warrants for What They did: Otherwise, their Methods of proceeding would have been both unwarranted and vain.

When our pious Reformers, about 200 years ago, went about the reftoring Religion to its ancient Purity, They did it in a regular and orderly Way, under the Direction and Countenance of the ruling Powers, and with a due Regard to such a regular Ministry as Christ had appointed in his Church. Those excellent Men were indeed full of the Spirit, which appear'd in their wise Counsels and exemplary Conduct, and was visible, in a Manner, to all good Men; unless We may except Themselves, whose great Humility and Modesty would scarce permit Them to see Those shining Graces of their own, which could not be hid from the observing World. Under such a regular and authorized Ministry, so justly settled, our Church (God be thanked) has subsisted and flourish'd, and does to this Day: And They who any way presume to disturb that comely Order, or to throw any Contempt upon it, only to draw Disciples to Themselves, cannot be led by the Spirit in such Attempts; except it be a Spirit of Delusion, altogether opposite to the Holy Spirit of God.

² Cor. xiv. 33.

What, tho' They pretend to be Ministers of Righteousness, and affect to outvie Others in fome Strictnesses of their own (loose all the while in the main Things, which are of the last Importance to Peace, Order, and Unity) is there any thing strange in such Conduct? There were Christian Teachers in the first Age, who vied even with St. PAUL, and affected to set up a stricter and purer Religion than He could pretend to, in Order to bring Him under Contempt. But what faid He of Them, writing by the Spirit of God? He faid thus: Such are false Apostles, deceitful Workers, transforming Themselves into the Apostles of CHRIST. And no Marvel; for SATAN Himself is [fometimes] transformed into an Angel of Light. Therefore it is no great Thing if bis [SATAN's] Ministers also be transformed as the Ministers of Righteousness; whose End shall be be according to their Works a. What avail magnificent Words, and smooth Speeches? Perhaps fome false Pretenders may labour earnestly to convert Men from Gluttony and Drunkenness, from Curfing and Swearing, from Fornication and Adultery, or the like. Well: What is there of this Kind, which is not done by the regular Ministry, and done also in a more regular, and much more edifying Way? But if, while fuch Pretenders endeavour to draw Men off from some Vices, They lead Them into others as bad, or worse, namely into Faction and Schism, into Sidings and Parties, into a Contempt of Rule, Order, and Authority, and into a Secession from their proper Pastors, their much more knowing and more faithful Guides (besides turning the Minds of the People off unto Fables and Reveries, instead of whole som Truths, and encouraging Them in the Wantonness of itching Ears); I say, if such Pretenders behave in this Way, it will be manifest to all Men Who have their Senses exercised, that They have not the Spirit of God to direct Them in What They do.

3. Another fure Mark of a false Spirit, is the laying down deceitful Rules or Tokens whereby to judge, whether, or when a Man has the

the Spirit of God. There have been Many, both in former and later Times, who have laid great Stress upon I know not what sensible Emotions, or violent Impulses, coming upon Them at Times, which They boldly and rashly impute to the Holy Spirit; prefuming also to date their Conversion or new Birth (as They call it) from fuch fanciful Impressions. There is not one Syllable in Sacred Writ, to countenance the Notion of such Impulses: It is all mere Fiction, Invention, Presimption, and exceeding dangerous in its Issue or Tendency. For, by That blind Rule, a Man may very eafily mistake the Suggestions of SATAN, for Divine Impulses: Therefore, if They do indeed feel any Emotions extraordinary, the first and most important Enquiry is, whether those Emotions are not really SATAN's Illusions, rather than Divine Impressions; or whether they are not rather Marks of Possession, than of Inspiration? Confidence is no Argument in a dark Affair: But it is the grand Deceiver's Artifice to hoodwink forward Men in a blind Presumption, and to blow Them up into an Assurance beyond their Evidence.

There is but one certain Rule whereby to know when We are led by the Spirit; and That is, the Rule of God's Commandments. When We so think, and so do, as the Spirit of God has directed in God's Holy Word, then, and then only, are We fure that We are led by the Spirit, or born of the Spirit. St. John has faid all in a very few Words: Whospever is born of God, doth not commit Sin 2; that is, doth not allow Himself in any known finful Practices. There is the Mark, and the only true Mark of Regeneration, and of the Spiritual Life. every Man examine Himself by this Rule: And when They can, upon fure Grounds, speak Peace to their own Consciences, then let Them attribute the Glory of it to God's Holy Spirit, for That is right: But let Them not blaze it out to the World, however certain They are of it; for That will be feeking Honour of Men, and endeavouring to share with the Holy Spirit in that Glory which belongs to Him only; and it will be forfeiting the Favour of that very Spirit whereof They fo proudly boast. The Spirit has not given us leave to boast of his Favours for our own Glory, or Fame; much less to do it for the Sake of Preeminence, or to make Others look less in Com-Such Affectation of Pre-eminence cometh not from above, but is a fad Token, yea, and a fatal Symptom of an earthly, and a sensual Spirit.

I am aware, that the false Pretenders to the Spirit have often laid hold on that Text of St. John, warping it unnaturally, fo as to draw it to favour their own fond Delusions. They first take for granted, that They are born of God (which is their fond Prefumption) and then They conclude that They are without Sin. This is vilely perverting and abufing the Text: For They ought first to know, that their Ways are right, and then to draw their Conclusion; and not vainly to presume first that They have the Spirit, and then from thence to conclude that their Ways are right. But such has often been the Self-delusive Method of vain Pretenders: And They have fometimes carried it fo far as to argue, that fince They are Saints, and born of God (that is, in their own fond Imagination) They cannot be guilty of Sin; but let Them do What They please, the Spirit is to warrant and fanctify all; for God fees no Sin in his Saints. This is turning the Tables much in the fame Way as the Romanists have often done with respect to their pretended Infallibility. Give them a thousand plain Proofs that They have erred, and do err; and They will answer all by telling you, that They cannot err. In like Manner, tell some false Pretenders to the Spirit, that They are guilty of such and such manifeft nifest Iniquities, and prove it upon Them by plain Evidence of Fact, They will persist in it, that They cannot sin, because (which is their Vanity) They are, in their own Conceit, born of God, and led by the Spirit. How dangerous a Principle This is, how productive of all Ungodliness, and of the most shocking Impieties, was too sadly seen in the last Century, and stands upon Record in the Histories of those distracted Times. But enough hath been said of the Rules or Marks whereby to try and detect every false Pretender to the Spirit.

III.

And now, for an Application of the whole, give Me leave briefly to fuggest, how much it concerns Us to be upon our Guard in such Cases.

Religion, like all other weighty Concernments, is best carried on in the calm, regular, and sedate Way; and therefore great Care should be taken, to keep up the old and well-tried Methods, rather than to change them for new Devices, which will never answer. If Sinners will not listen to the Spirit of God speaking by the Scriptures, and by a regular Ministry, They will not listen to the same Spirit supposed (but vainly supposed) to speak in the undigested, incoherent, extemporary Effusions of raw Teachers. It is easy for warm Zealots of distemper'd Minds to throw Reflections upon the wifer and more confiderate Guides, Who come not up to Their Degrees of unnatural Heat and Ferment: But a small Knowledge of Mankind will fuffice to shew, that They Who will not be converted by the cool, calm, rational Methods, will never be wrought upon, as to any good and lasting Effect, by Eagerness and Passion. If Sinners, wedded to their darling Vices, will not be regularly reasoned into a Change of Life, We must not become as mad in one Way as They are in another, in Hopes to recover, Them to their Senses: For That, instead of reclaiming would but harden Them fo much the more. The World indeed, generally, is bad enough, always was, and always will be: But still We must not take upon Us to use any affected and unjustifiable Methods in order to mend it; Which in reality would not mend it, but make it worse. We must bring Men to God, in God's own Way, if We hope to compass it at all. The making use of wrong Means for the Sake of a good End, is Nothing else but doing Evil that Good may come; which is a dangerous and detestable Practice. Practice a. I fay then, that when the Minifters of CHRIST have done all that is prudent and proper, and the Effect does not answer, They must not run wild Lengths, in order to gain their Point: For, God will fay to fuch Persons, if You could not prevail by Methods of My Appointment, How could you hope to do it by weak Devices of Your Own? You have run wide, and far, to make Profelytes: But Who fent you? or Who required it at your Hands? - There is as much Mischief in over-doing, as in under-doing: Both are equally Transgressions of the Divine Laws, and Deviations from the Rule of Right. Are They eager and impatient to bring Sinners to a fober Life? It is well They are, and We commend Them for it: But there is one Thing of still greater Importance to Them, which ought to be attended to in the first Place, which is, to rest content with God's appointed Methods of reforming the World, and to proceed no farther than He has given Leave; to make use of found Judgment and Discretion in an Affair of that bigh Concernment; and to submit to stop where God requires it, as well as to run on where He has fent: Otherwise, Religion will not be promoted, but greatly obstructed VOL. II. T. and and exposed: And the World will not be made wifer or better but ten times wilder than before.

These Things I have here laid before You in as plain Words, and in as strong a Light, as I could.

May That Divine Spirit, whereof I have been speaking, dwell richly in Us, in all Wisdom, and in all Virtues and Graces; particularly, in Soundness of Mind, and in Humility of Heart, and in Purity of Life and Manners. Such are the Fruits, such the Marks of the Spirit's Presence with Us, and of his Love towards Us: Which, that We may evermore plentifully enjoy, here and hereafter, God of his Mercy grant, through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.

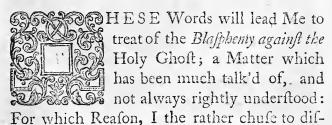

SERMONIX.

The precise Nature of the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost.

Матт. хіі. 31, 32.

Wherefore I say unto you, all Manner of Sin and Blasphemy shall be forgiven unto Men: But the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto Men.

And Whosoever speaketh a Word against the Son of Man, it shall be forgiven Him: But Whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven Him, neither in this World, neither in the World to come.

course upon it.

Vol. II.

L 2

It

164 The Nature of the Blasphemy

It will be convenient, in the first Place, to observe How, and upon what Occasion, the Words of the Text were brought in. We have an Account in this Chapter, of our Lord's healing a blind and dumb Man Who had been possessed by a Devil. The Scribes and Pharifees Who came from Jerusalem, and observed what was done, very maliciously attributed that great Miracle, which our Lord had wrought by the Spirit of God, to the Affistance of the Devil. This Fellow, faid They (speaking in Contempt of Him) doth not cast out Devils; but by BEELZEBUB, the Prince of the Devils 2. Our Bleffed Lord, well knowing the Spite and Venom of that execrable Calumny, takes Them up roundly for it; first, confuting their Cavils, and next, rebuking their Infolence, in very plain and strong Terms. He puts Them in mind how abfurd and contradictory to common Sense it must be, to imagine that the Devils should be no wifer than to differ and difagree among Themselves, in a Matter relating to their common Interest, which would be destroying their own Kingdom. If SA-TAN cast out SATAN, - how shall then his. Kingdom standb? -- After This, He retorts their own Calumny upon Them, in order to manimanifest their grievous Partiality and Self-Condemnation. If I by BEELZEBUB cast out Devils, by Whom do your Children (your own Friends, the Exorcists) cast them out a? They cast out Devils by the help of God, calling on the God of ABRAHAM; why am I, who do the same Things, and greater, in the Name of the same God, charged with doing them by the help of the Devil? He goes on to a third Confideration drawn from the Nature of his Doctrine, and from the whole Tenour of his Life and Conduct, as being directly opposite to the Devil's Interests, and plainly shewing, that He was so far from being a Confederate with BEELZEBUB, that He was his most avowed and formidable Enemy; binding that strong Prince in Chains, risling his House, and spoiling his Goods. These Things being plain and undeniable, what unaccountable Malice must it be in the Pharisees, and how grievous their Sin, to impute the Miracles. wrought by a Divine Power, to the Prince of the Devils? Our Bleffed Lord therefore closes. his Reply with this fmart and tremendous. Rebuke: Wherefore I say unto you, that all Manner of Sin and Blasphemy shall be forgiven unto Men: But the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghoft,

166 The Nature of the Blasphemy

Ghost, shall not be forgiven,— neither in this World, neither in the World to come.

The Phrases and Idioms of Speech (here made use of) may require some Explanation, before We come to the Matter contained in them. All Manner of Sin and Blasphemy shall be forgiven. The Words are not to be taken abjolutely, as if all Kinds of Slanders and Calumnies should be forgiven; (for many, without Question, while unrepented of, never will be forgiven) but they are to be understood comparatively, as amounting to This; that all other unrighteous blaming or censuring, either of Things or of Persons, shall sooner and more eafily be forgiven, than the blaming and flandering the Holy Spirit of God, that is, God Himself. To revile Angels, or Men, is tolerable, and pardonable in Comparison: But to strike higher still, and to revile even God Himfelf, is an unpardonable Impiety. Whosever steaketh a Word against the Son of Man, (against CHRIST confidered meerly as a Man) calling Him, for Instance, a Deceiver, a Glutton, a Wine-bibber, and the like; That, tho' a grievous Sin in it felf, yet being flight in Comparison, may the more eafily be forgiven: But whofoover speaketh against the Holy GHOST, it skall not be so easily forgiven, neither in this World

World, nor in the World to come. In discoursing farther, my Design is,

- I. To examine what the Sin, or Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost means, and wherein precisely it consists: Where, by the Way, I shall take Notice also of some erroneous Accounts of it.
- II. I shall consider the beinous Nature and Aggravations of it, together with the Penalty attending it, or consequent upon it.
- III. I shall enquire whether any Sins committed at this Day are the same thing with it, or which come the nearest to it.

I.

I am to examine What the Sin, or Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost means, and wherein precisely it consists.

I faid Sin or Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, because Some call it the Sin against the Holy Ghost, tho' Scripture it self never calls it any Thing else but Blaspheny; which is worth the observing. For from thence We may be assured, that This Sin (whatever it be) ought to be reckon'd among the Sins of Speech, among the Offences of the Tongue. All the Sins which Men commit are reducible to three Heads, as being either in Thought, in Word, or in Deed: Now, the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost can properly be referred to the Second only of the three now mention'd; it lies in Words, is committed by Speaking, and particularly by Evil-speaking; by reviling and defaming the Holy Spirit of God. In the Text, it is called speaking against the Holy Ghost. And by St. MARK, it appears that the Sin confifted in fomething which the Pharifees said: For it is there remark'd as the Sum and Substance of the Guilt They were chargeable with, that They said of Jesus, that He hath an unclean Spirit a. And it is farther observable; that our Blessed Lord, in the Close of his Discourse upon that Occasion, pronounces thus: Every idle Word that Men shall speak, They shall give Account thereof in the Day of Judgment b. Idle Words here mean malicious, or impious Expresfions; alluding still to the main Subject of his Discourse, the spiteful and opprobrious Words which the Pharisees had impiously thrown out against the Spirit of God. To be short then, the Sin, or Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, was the belying, slandering, or reviling the Divine Spirit Spirit by which our Lord wrought his Miracles, ascribing them to the Devil.

There may be, and there have been feveral Offences committed against the Holy Ghost, which yet do not amount to the Blasphemy against Him specified in the Text. There is such a Thing as grieving the Holy Spirit a, and quenching the Spirit b, when Men refuse to hearken to his Counsels, to follow his Motions, or to obey his Calls: But This is not blaspheming Him. There is also what St. STEPHEN calls refifting the Holy Ghost c, which is opposing Him with an high Hand, and rebelling against Him, and is a very heinous Sin; and yet neither is That the same with blaspheming and slandering Him, which is what those PHARISEES were guilty of. Ananias and Sapphir a grievously affronted the Holy Ghost in telling Him a Lie, either prefuming upon his Ignorance as not knowing it, or upon his Patience as if He should have connived at it: But yet, That was not so bad as What the Pharifees did in ascribing his Works to the Devil. The malicious telling a Lie of Him, to defame and flander Him, was a more beinous Offence than the telling a Lie to Him, under a weak and foolish Persuasion. There is also another Way of affronting.

² Eph. iv. 30. b 1 Theff. v. 19. c Acts vii. 51.

affronting the HOLY GHOST, by vilifying his Operations; which yet comes not up to the Sin of the Text. Upon the Day of Pentecost, when the Disciples, full of the Holy Ghost; began to speak with other Tongues, as the Spirit gave them Utterance, there were Some standing by, who mocking faid, these Men are full of new Wine a, vilifying the Operations of the Spirit, as the Effects of Drunkenness: But the Men who faid it, faid it perhaps wantonly or ignorantly, rather than spitefully or maliciously. They might not know that the Disciples really spake with other Tongues; but being unacquainted Themselves with the Languages then fpoken, They took them all to be Jargon, fuch as Men might utter under fome Disorder of Mind, occasion'd either by Wine, or by Frenzy: And fo They accounted (as They thought) for the Thing in a natural Way, not suspecting any Thing supernatural in it. But the Pharifees who are charged with being guilty of blaspheming the Holy Ghost, They very well knew that What They had feen done, could not be accounted for in a natural Way; and yet fuch was their Spleen and Rage against the Gospel, that they chose rather to impute the Miracles of our Lord to the Devil, than to acknowledge the Divine Hand, which was so visible in them, that They Themselves could not but see it, had They been at all disposed to it.

I may here also mention SIMON MAGUS, as a Person who very highly affronted the Holy Ghost, when He offered Money for the purchasing his Miraculous Gifts. But neither was That any such direct Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, as What the Text mentions: For He had some Respect and Veneration for the Miracles He saw wrought, and for the Author of them; and was very far from imputing them to the Afsistance of the Devil.

The Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost was something worse still than any Thing I have yet mention'd: It was defaming the Holy Spirit of God, and God Himself, under the execrable Name of Beelzebub; it was reviling, and That knowingly and desperately, the Divine Works, as Diabolical Operations. In This, as I conceive, and in This precisely, consisted that Blasphemy which shall never be forgiven, the Sin against the Holy Ghost.

Nevertheless it must be own'd, that many wise and good Men, both Ancient and Modern, have been of different Sentiments in this Article.

Some, with St. Austin, maintaining that all Sins are pardonable upon Repentance, have refolved the Blasphemy of the Holy Ghost, unpardonable Sin, into final Hardness and Impenitency: But final Impenitency is one Thing, and Blasphemy is another: And final Impenitency is an Error in a Man's whole Conduct; whereas the Blasphemy of the Text is one particular Crime, and committed by reviling Words, as observed above. So that final Impenitency is not the Sin here fignified: and for the same Reasons We may conclude, that a total and final Apostasy, which Some take to be the Sin against the Holy Ghost, is very different from it, tho' it is certainly unpardonable as much, or perhaps more than the other.

Some, with ORIGEN and the Nova-TIANS of old, have imagined that Sins committed after Baptism, are Sins against the Holy Ghost: But there is the same Objection, besides many more, against this Opinion, as against the two Former, and it has very long and very deservedly been exploded by all sober Divines.

Some fay, that every malicious resisting, or opposing the Gospel-Truths, when sufficiently propounded, is the Sin against the Holy Ghost: But Insidelity is one Thing, and Blasphemy another:

ther: and the Sin which the Text censures, consists more in reviling, than in resisting, as before observed: So that neither is This Account at all satisfactory.

There is one more remaining still, which has been esteem'd as highly plausible, and which has met with feveral very confiderable Abettors. It is, that the holding out obstinately against the last Dispensation, the Dispensation of the Spirit, commencing after CHRIST'S Ascenfion, was the Sin against the HOLY GHOST. They who maintain this Opinion, are obliged also to maintain, that the Scribes and Pharisees, who attributed our Lord's Miracles to the Devil, were not then, and therein guilty of the Sin against the Holy Ghost. They plead, that those blaspheming Pharisees were not yet excepted out of the general Pardon offered to as Many as would repent and believe; but that our Lord Himself pray'd for their Forgivenes's upon the Cross, which shews that They were yet capable of Pardon. They further add, that the Holy Ghost was not yet given 'till our Lord ascended, and therefore could not, properly speaking, be blasphemed before that Time: and that the Blaspheming and refisting Him then, being holding out against the very greatest Miracles, the strongest Proofs, and the last Remedies,

This of Course must be the most sinful and provoking Obstinacy that could be, and on that Account is pronounced unpardonable.

These Reasons are specious: But then here is no Account given how it comes to pass, that neither in the AEts of the Apostles, nor in any of the Epiftles, is there a Word faid by way of Reproof, or of Caution against Blaspheming the Holy Gloft; and that it should never have been mentioned, but by our Lord Himfelf at a Time when no body was capable of committing it: And yet, by all the Circumfrances of our Lord's Discourse at that Time, one would be very apt to conclude, that those blaspheming Pharifees were then verily guilty of the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. Nay it feems further, that St. MARK's Comment upon the Cafe, may be alone sufficient to decide the Doubt. For after reciting our Lord's dreadful Sentence against Such as should blaspheme against the Holy Ghost, He immediately adds, because They said, He bath an unclean Spirit a. What is This but declaring in fo many Words, that the reviling the Holy Spirit, as an unclean Spirit, was the Blasphemy our Lord spake of, and was then committed by those blaspheming Pharifees?

As to what is objected, that those very Pharifees were yet capable of Pardon, because our Lord upon the Cross prayed for their Forgiveness; It may as reasonably be said, on the other hand, that Those also who rejected the last Dispensation of the HOLY GHOST were capable of Pardon; for St. STEPHEN prayed for the Forgiveness of Those who stoned Him, tho' He had before told Them, that They had refisted the Holy Ghost 2. This Objection therefore returns upon the Objectors, and equally affects either Their Interpretation of the Sin against the Holy Ghost, or Ours, Besides, the Objection goes upon the Supposition that the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost is absolutely unpardonable, which indeed the Text does feem to fay: But yet good Criticks have observed, that according to the Hebrew Idiom, the Words may, or rather must bear a softer Construction; importing only, that of all Kinds of Slander and Calumny, Slandering the Holy Ghost is most daring and impious; and that any other Calumnies will fooner meet with Pardon than That will. But supposing the Sin to be absolutely unpardonable, then it must be said, that our Lord's praying for the Forgiveness of his Enemies upon the Crofs, is to be underflood stood only of his praying for the Jews in general, and not of his praying for those Persons in particular Who had been guilty of the unpardonable Sin.

As to the other Objection, that the Holy Ghost could not be blasphemed at that Time, because He was not yet given; it is of very little Weight. Our Blessed Lord most undoubtedly had the Holy Spirit always residing in Him without Limitation or Measure a: And He Himself professes, that it was by the Spirit of God that He cast out Devils b: So that the Blaspheming that Divine Power by which He wrought his Miracles, was plainly blaspheming the Holy Spirit. It is true that the Holy Ghost was not yet given in full Measure to our Lord's Disciples, but to our Lord Himself He most certainly was; and therefore the Objection, in this case, is slight, and comes not up to the Point.

Upon the Whole then, I conclude as before, that the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost was the imputing our Lord's Miracles to the Devil; and that That dreadful Sin was committed by Those very Men who so reviled, ilandered, and traduced that Divine Power by which He wrought Them.

II. The

IT.

The Heinousness of that Sin, which was the Second Particular I proposed to go upon, may be competently understood from What hath been already faid, and will not need many Words more.

It was a most wicked and impudent Lie and Slander upon the Holy Spirit, and was flying, as it were, in the Face of God. One would think, when God Himself interposes, giving the divine Signal in plain uncontested Miracles, that it might become All Men to be mute, and to lay afide their otherwise unconquerable Rancour and Prejudice: But the Pharifees were fo refolute and fo outragious in reviling every Thing that gave any Countenance to CHRIST and his Gospel, that They would not spare even God Himself, but call'd Him BEELZE-BUB, spitefully defaming his most divine Works, as being Nothing else but Diabolical Impostures. They faw the Miracles of our Bleffed Lord, and were very fenfible that they were real and true Miracles: They knew also that they were wrought in direct Opposition to the Devil and his Kingdom, having all the fair Appearances possible of being Divine: Nor would They M Vol. II. have have ferupled to have received them as divine, had They been wrought by any One elfe, excepting CHRIST or his Disciples: But such was their invenom'd Hatred and Inveteracy against Him and His, that, at all Adventures, contrary to all Candor or Equity, and in Contradiction to Reason and common Sense, They resolved to say however, scarce to believe (for They hardly could be fo stupid) that He was in League with the Devil; and that all his mighty Works, which He wrought in the Name of God, were the Works only of BEELZEBUB the Prince of the Devils. There could not be a more infolent Slander, or a more provoking Outrage against the Divine Majesty, than This All other Calumnies, against Men, or against Angels, come short of This; for it was calumniating God Himself, the tremendous and most adorable Deity; and was done very maliciously, and designedly to hinder and obstruct, as much as possible, the first planting of the Gospel, to the universal Hurt and Detriment of Mankind: In a Word, it was facrificing the Honour of Almighty God, and both the present and future Happiness of Men, to their own private Humours and Party-Passions; being resolyed to take up with any wretched Cavil, any improbable probable and felf-contradictory Lies and Slanders against God, rather than permit the honest and well-meaning People to believe in Christ Jesus upon the brightest Evidence of his Miracles.

Such was the heinous Nature, and the tranfcendent Guilt of blaspheming against the Holy Ghost, in That Instance: And therefore it is, that our Blessed Lord took so particular Care, first, to confute the Calumny, and next, to pass a most righteous, but dreadful Censure upon the Sin contained in it. The divine Vengeance should pursue a Crime of that deep Die, both in this World, and in the World to come. The Offenders in that Kind, being unreclaimable and incurable, should, by the just Judgment of God, be seal'd up to everlassing Destruction; like Pharoah, or like Judas, like Sodom, or like Gomorrha, ripe for Perdition, and fit to be delivered over to eternal Ruin.

Having thus largely confidered What the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost means, and how heinous a Sin it was; it remains now only,

III.

To enquire whether any Sins committed at this Day, are the fame Thing with it; or which Vol. II. M 2 of

of them come the nearest to it. Of This very briefly, having no Room to inlarge.

1. First, for the Sake of the over-tender and fcrupulous Consciences, I would observe, that roving, and which fome call blafphemous Thoughts, which rife up accidentally, and as accidentally go off again, are Nothing a-kin to the Sin which I have been speaking of; which confisted in premeditated Lies and Slanders against God, form'd with Design to obstruct or darken the Evidences of the true Religion, and to prevent Others from looking into them, or being convinced by them. None but profess'd Atheists, or Infidels, can be guilty of fuch Spite and Malice against the Gospel-Salvation. No One, while He believes the Christian Religion, and seriously professes Himself a Member of Christ's Church. can be guilty of the Blasphemy against the Holy Ghost.

2. I observe, Secondly, that even the Atheists or Insidels of these Times, can scarce come up to the same Degree of Guilt with the Pharises of old; because They have not seen the Miracles of Christ with their own Eyes. It is some Mitigation of their Sin, and it makes their Insidelity the more excusable, that They have not altogether so strong and glaring Evidences of the Truth of Christianity, as Those had Who lived in the first Ages, and saw the wonderful Works of God. Rational and Historical Evidence may be as convincing as the other, when duly considered: But, as it strikes not upon the Senfes, it does not awaken the Attention, and alarm every Paffion of the Soul, in fuch a Degree as the other does. For which Reafon, the Unbelievers of our Times, tho' abandon'd and profligate Men, are not altogether fo blameable in the Opposition They make to Christianity, as the Unbelievers of old Time were. They may indeed, at this Day, attribute the Miracles of CHRIST and his Apostles (Which They read of in credible History) to the Devil, as the Pharifees of old did; and This will be blaspheming the Holy Ghost: But it will not be exactly the same Sin; not the same in Degree (tho' in Kind the fame) because Circumstances are different; and upon the Circumstances depend the heightening Aggravations.

Nevertheless, It must be said, that the obstinate rejecting the Miracles of our Lord and of his Disciples (which have been so fully attested) and much more the ridiculing and bantering them, and the endeavouring to run them down by Lies and Stander (as the Way of Some is)

 M_3

This

This is a very high and heinous Crime, as well as horrid Blasphemy; especially if committed in a Christian Country, and in a knowing Age, and where Men have all defirable Opportunities of learning the Truth, as well as the strongest Motives offered for submitting to it. Scoffers of this Kind come very little short of the Pharifees of ancient Time, either in Spleen and Malice, or in Perverseness and Hardness of Heart, or in an impious and desperate Defiance to God and CHRIST, and to the Holy Spirit of Both. From such Blasphemers turn away, and have Nothing to do with the Tents of these wicked Men, lest ye be consumed in their Iniquities. Look upon Them as Vessels of divine Wrath, Sons of Perdition, prepared for Vengeance, which will either fuddenly overtake Them in this World, or will fall the heavier upon Them in a World to come. The Christian Religion has been fo abundantly proved and fettled by great Variety of Evidences, beyond reasonable Exception, that all Gain-fayers are now left without Excuse. It has had the concurrent Testimony of CHRIST and his Apostles, and Both establish'd by many and great Miracles, unparallel'd, and uncontroll'd: And were there Nothing elfe, its prevailing and triumphing fo much, much, fo early, and fo long, over Fewish Superstition and Pagan Idolatry, is it self a Miracle as great as any, and manifestly shews that the Finger of God was in it, and that an Almighty Power went along with it. What remains then, but that We learn from all, to fet a just Prize and Value upon This our most holy Profession; evermore defending and maintaining it against all Opposers, and adorning the fame, as it becomes Us to do, with fuitable Lives and Conversations.

SERMON M 4

The control of the co

SERMON X.

The Case of Deceivers, and Deceived, Considered.

EPHES. iv. 14.

That We henceforth be no more Children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every Wind of Doctrine, by the Slight of Men, and cunning Craftiness, whereby They lie in wait to deceive.

ERE are two Sorts of Persons mark'd out by the Apostle in the Text, the Deceivers and the Deceived; the One, subtle and crasty, and full of intrigue; the Other, easy and credulous, and unsuspecting; the One, supposed to have all the Wiliness of the Serpent, without the Innocency of the Dove; the Other, all the Tameness and Simplicity of the Dove, Dove, without the Serpent's Wisdom. Both are blameable, tho' in different Respects, and not in the same Degree; One, for abusing and misemploying their Talents, and the Other, for not employing them at all to discern between true and false, between Good and Evil. Both are accountable to God as Delinquents; One, for high Contempt, and the Other, for great Supineness and Neglect. The World has never been without both these Kinds of Men, since Men have multiplied upon the Earth, and Sin and Folly have taken Place among Them. The Church of CHRIST, from the Beginning and downwards, has fuffered much by Both. Herefies and Schifms have disturbed its Peace and broken its Union; while crafty and intriguing Men have begun the Quarrel, and weak credulous Men have run blindly into it. It was the Defign of our Bleffed Lord, when He first founded his Church, to prevent, as much as possible, all Confusion and Discord, and to provide for its then prefent, and future Peace.

With this View, as the Apostle here in this Chapter observes, He instituted a Ministry, and appointed proper Officers to instruct his People, and to lead Them in the Way everlasting. He gave Some, Apostles; and Some, Prophets; and Some, Evangelists; and Some, Pastors and Teachers; for the perfecting of the Saints, for the Work of the Ministry, for the edifying of the Body of CHRIST; till We All come in the Unity of Faith, and of the Knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect Man, &c a. Such was the Provision made at the first planting of the Church, to preferve its Unity, to bind and cement it together by the Ministry and good Offices of Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Pastors, and Teachers. The first three Offices lasted for a Time only, and ceased by Degrees, as there was less and less Occasion for Them; but Pastors and Teachers, as They will be always needful, fo will They be continued always in constant Succession till the End of the World. As there is no New Church to form, after the Foundation laid by CHRIST and his Apostles; nor any New Doctrines to be publish'd beyond what They have taught; fo there is no Need of Officers extraordinary, fuch as were Apostles, Prophets, and Evangelists, after a Church has been once raifed, and a Rule fix'd and settled for all Times to come: It is sufficient then to have a standing Ministry, in Succession, to preach and publish that Rule, and so to keep up in all After-ages What was once delivered to the Saints.

But,

But, as neither the Apostles Themselves, nor Prophets, nor our Lord's own Presence with Mankind, was then sufficient to hinder evilminded Men from sowing Divisions, or unstable Men from running in with them; so neither is it to be expected that the ordinary Ministers, in after Ages, can with all their Endeavours prevent the like Irregularities, supposing Them ever fo fincere and intent upon it.

But it is further to be confider'd, that They Themselves are but weak and frail-Men, and They have no fuch infallible Assistances, or Divine Inspirations, as the Apostles had, nor are They Proof against such Temptations as are common to Men; fo that it is not impossible even for Them to fall from their own Stedfastness, and to desert their Rule; and so in Effect, to become Deceivers and Seducers, instead of being proper Instructors of the Church of CHRIST. And whenever fuch Cases as these happen, it is a dangerous Snare to common Christians, Who will be most at a Loss what Course to steer, when the very Guides Themfelves differ, and draw contrary Ways. This however is a Case which may be supposed, and which has often appeared in Fact. Divine Wisdom has not thought proper to provide any infallible Remedy against it, but leaves it for a Trial a Trial of Mens Ingenuity and Sincerity in fuch Instances; that it may be seen what Care and Pains honest Men will take to inform Themselves right in any doubtful Circumstances, and that They who are approved may be made manifest.—In discoursing farther, my Design is,

- I. To confider the Case of Deceivers, or Seducers, Who, in their slight and cunning Craftiness, lie in wait to deceive.
- H. To confider the Case of the Deceived, Who in their great Simplicity, or Credulity, are apt to be tossed to and fro with every Wind of Doctrine.
- III. I shall suggest some Advices proper to prevent our falling in with Either; concluding with some brief Application of the whole, suitable to our present Circumstances.

I.

First, I propose to consider the Case of Deceivers, or Seducers, Such as, by their slight, and cunning Craftiness, lie in wait to deceive.

And here it will be proper to enquire, upon what Motives, or with what Views, Men are led thus to beguile, and mif-guide Others.

The particular Motives in fuch Cases may be many; but they are all reducible to these three Heads, Pride, Avarice, Voluptuousness; that is to say, Love of Honour, or Prosit, or Pleasure.

1. To begin with the first. There is oftentimes a great Deal of Pride and Vanity in starting odd Notions, and broaching new Doctrines. It is pretending to be wifer than the Rest of the World, and is thought to be an Argument of uncommon Sagacity. Upon this Foot, Some are perpetually in Quest of new Discoveries. Nothing pleases Them, if They have not the Honour of inventing it, or of reviving it in Their Times. It is Objection enough against common Truths, that they are common, and in Every Body's Hands. There is no Glory to be gain'd by traversing this beaten Road; it is but low and dull Employment: But if they can open a new Way, and strike out a new Track which No Man has discovered; there is the Triumph, and the Exultation. When once a Man has thus far given a loofe to his Vanity, and thinks Himfelf fignificant enough to be Head of a Sect; then He begins, first, to whister out his choice Discoveries to a few Admirers and Confidents, Who will be fure to flatter Him in it; and next, to tell aloud to all the World, how great a Secret He had found found out, with the inestimable Value of it. And now at length comes in the Use of flight and cunning Craftiness, and all imaginable Artifices; first, to find out proper Agents to commend and cry up the Conceit; next, to spread it in the most artful Manner among the simple and least sufpecting; and after that, to form Interests, and make Parties; and so, if possible, to have a publick Sanction set to it, or a Majority at least contending for it. This frequently is the End and Aim of Novellists and Seducers. They are first, fond of their own Conceits, which is their Pride and Vanity; and next, impatient to make Proselytes, and to draw the World after Them, because every Convert gain'd is a Compliment to their Judgment, and the greater the Numbers are, the greater their Glory. Love of Fame and Glory is a very strong Passion, and operates marvellously in Persons of a warm Complexion. Even St. John the Apostle, with all his Gifts and heavenly Endowments, was flighted by DIOTREPHES, who fet up against Him. I wrote unto the Church, fays that Divine Man, but DIOTREPHES, Who loveth to have the Preeminence among Them, receiveth Us not a. DIOTREPHES was a Christian, and probably a Christian Priest too, and thought Himfelf Himself considerable enough to form a Sect; and to head a Party in the Church, even against St. John. He loved to have the Preeminence: Ambition, it seems, was his Motive: And as He wanted not flight, or cunning Craftiness, whereby He could impose upon the Weak and Ignorant, and misselead Them with every Wind of Doctrine; He was able, in a good Measure, to maintain his Ground, and to keep Himself in Countenance, tho' in direct Opposition to the greatest Man in the Church, the only then surviving Apostle. Having seen how Pride and Ambition prompt and incite Many to become Deceivers, or false Teachers,

2. Next let Us observe how Avarice, or Love of Presit, may sometimes do the same Thing. There is a Gain to be made, in some Junctures, by perverting the Truth, and deceiving the Populace. Men who are not worthy to teach in the Church, or who have been set aside for their Insufficiency or Immorality, may bring up new Doctrines, and draw Disciples after Them, for the Sake of Protection and Maintenance, or for filthy Lucre. With Such, the vending of salse Doctrine is a Trade, and Preaching a Merchandize. They must of Course contrive to teach what will be most for their Interest, not so much considering what is rue and right, as what is most palatable and pleasing, and will bring Them in most Profit. Men of this Stamp are the meanest and vilest of Men: Yet Such there were even in the Apostolical Times: For St. PAUL thus complains, in his Epistle to TITUS; There are Many unruly and vain Talkers and Deceivers, especially They of the Circumcifion; whose Mouths must be stopped, Who pervert whole Houses, teaching Things which They ought not, for filthy Lucre's Sake a. They invented and propagated palatable Doctrines, pleafing Errors, fuch as took with the Vicious, and brought in Gain to the Teachers. Those false Teachers were Jewish Christians, and taught, among other Things, that Israelites, All in general, were secure of their Portion in the Life to come; a Doctrine as pleasing to Many, as it was pernicious to Their Souls. Another Doctrine which They taught, as false as the other, was the Necessity of Circumcision to Gentiles; and This They did, only to humour and flatter the Jews, for Their own Interest, lest They should suffer Persecution of the Jews, for the Cross of Christ b. Of like Sort were the Nicolaitans, or Balaamites, Whom St. PETER, St. Jude, and St. John speak of, as running greedily after the Error of BALAAM for Re-VOL. II. N ward, ward 2. They taught several Doctrines, false and scandalous, but agreeable enough to Flesh and Blood; and fuch as, upon that Account, brought Them in both Honour and Profit, among the Libertines of the Age, among the Diffolute and Profane. Thus has Avarice been the Mother of Herefies, and has brought in many Deceivers into the Church of CHRIST: But They have contrived generally to give fome plaufible Turn and Colour to Their Inventions, through Their Sleight, and cunning Craftiness, in Order to deceive the Hearts of the Simple, and to beguile unwary and unstable Souls.

² Tit. i. 10, 11.

3. One Motive more I mention'd, namely, Voluptuousness, or Love of Pleasure. As religious Restraints set not easy upon Flesh and Blood. but bear bard upon corrupt Nature; fo Men of corrupt Minds will be ever labouring to invent, and publish smooth and softening Doctrines, such as may either qualify the Strictness of the Gospel-Rule, or sap the Belief of a future Reckoning. Many ancient HERETICKS had fuch Views as these in the first broaching of Their Herefies: But I shall look no lower than the Scripture Accounts; that it may appear from thence, that neither any Respect even to living Apostles, nor any Regard to the Attestations of the brightest Miracles, can sufficiently deter Those who are disposed to set up for Heads of a Sect, and to disperse and propagate their own crude Conceptions. HYMENEUS, and PHILETUS, and ALEXANDER the Copper-Smith, were Men of this perverse Stamp, and gave great Disturbance to the Holy Apostle St. PAUL". They pretended that the Refurrection was already past, overthrowing the Faith of Some b. They explain'd away the Scripture-Doctrine of a real Resurrection to quite another Sense, and gave out Their own false Glosses for Scripture Truths, as is the Manner of Deceivers. Their Design was, to take off the Awe and Dread of a future Judgment, and thereby to open a Door to all Licentiousness of Life. and Dissoluteness of Manners. St. PAUL therefore reprimanded Them sharply, as became his high Office; and, by his Apostolical Authority, He delivered Them over unto Satan, that They might take Warning for the future, and learn not to blaspheme c. These Instances are fufficient to shew how Deceivers arise, and with what Views They endeavour to make Converts to their respective Persuasions, all centring in the Love of Honour, or Riches, or Pleasure; or more briefly, in the Love of the VOL. II. World .

^a 1 Tim. i. 20. 2 Tim.ii.17. b 2 Tim. ii. 18. c 1 Tim. i. 20.

196 The Case of Deceivers,

World: For, when Men desert either the true Faith, or sound Morals, We may say of Them, as St. PAUL said of DEMAS; — DEMAS hath for saken Me, having loved this present World. But having done with the Deceivers, I come now secondly,

II.

To confider the Case of the Deceived, Who suffer Themselves to be tossed to and fro with every Wind of Doctrine.

They are supposed to be ignorantly, and in a Manner blindly, led on by Others; Otherwise, They would be rather Confederates and Confidents in managing the Deceit, and so would be more Deceivers than Deceived. Now, as to Those who are so ignorantly imposed upon, They are more or less to blame, according as Their Ignorance is more or less blameable: And That again will be more or less blameable, according as it is more or less affected, or wilful.

There are, I think, three Cases which will take in All Sorts of Men who suffer Them-felves to be deceived in Things of this Kind.

The first is, of Those who have no Opportunity, no moral Possibility of informing Themselves better. The second is, Of Those who might inform Themselves better, but do not. The third.

third, Of Those who might also be better informed, but will not. Of which in their Order.

1. As to the first Sort, fince They are supposed to lie under invincible Ignorance and Incapacity, Their Case is pitiable. Perhaps it may be the Case of a poor Servant under an overbearing Master, Whom He is taught to reverence in all Things, and to take his Word for a Law. Or it may be the Case of a raw and ignorant Youth while under a bad Father: Or of any plain labouring Man in the Way of low Life, Who can neither read nor examine for Himself, but must take every Thing upon Trust from the Hand of such superior Person, or Persons as He chances to be listed under. These, and the like Cases, I refer to simple, unaffected Ignorance: And fo far as Their Ignorance, or Infirmity is really unconquerable; fo far are They blameless, or not accountable. They be like Children toffed to and fro with every Wind of Doctrine; yet, if They are really Children in Understanding, and are overborn by Others in fuch a Way as is morally irrefiftible, confidering Their Circumstances; then it seems to be Their Misfortune to be so imposed upon, rather than Their Fault, and so is not imputable.

2. A fecond Case is, of Those who may inform Themselves better, but neglect to do

198 The Case of Deceivers,

do it. I suppose it to be merely Neglect in Them, not Defign. Perhaps They have little or no Leisure for Enquiries: They are taken up with worldly Cares and Business: They have a very great Esteem and Value for the Man who so misleads Them, and They know no better, but swallow every Thing He fays, without confidering; or They are not aware of any ill Consequences of the Doctrine, see or fuspect no Harm in it. This, I think, is a true Description of the Unthinking and Careles, who take up their Opinions by Chance, and enquire no farther. They are much to blame in this Affair; because God has given Them the Faculty of Reason, which ought not to be thus left to lie dormant and useless. Men who can be sharp enough in secular Affairs to prevent being imposed upon, may and ought to have fome Guard upon Themselves with respect also. to their spiritual Concernments. It is not enough to fay, They have Something else to mind, or that They do not think of it: Such Negligence betrays a Culpable Carelesness as to the one Thing needful, and a great Contempt of God and Religion. ought to think it as much our Concern in spiritual Things, not to have Errors, and false Doctrines put upon Us; as We do in Things temporal, not to be imposed upon by false Weights instead of true, or false Money instead of Sterling. So much for Those Who are merely careless in a Matter of this high Concernment.

3. There is yet a third Sort of Men, worse than the former, who fuffer Themselves to be deceived, and might know better, but will not: That is to fay, Their Ignorance is affected and wilful: They love Darkness rather than Light, because their Deeds are evil. These are Such as readily run in with every Wind of Doctrine which hits their Taste, and chimes in with their favourite Inclinations. They admit the Doctrine, because They like it; and They eafily believe it true, because They would bave it fo. It is with this Kind of Men that Deceivers prevail most, and make Their Harvest. False Teachers commonly observe and study the feveral Weaknesses and corrupt Dispositions of Those whom They apply to; and so, by flattering Their Passions, and humouring Their Follies, They lead Them about where They please, and make a Property of Them. 'The Persons so deceived, first deceive Themselves, being led away and enticed as much by their own Lusts, as by the Tempter's Subtilty. They are very near as deep in Guilt, as the Deceivers Themselves are, because the same corrupt Principles are common to Both; only there is NA this this Difference, that One spreads the false Doctrine, the Other gladly receives it, and by receiving encourages it, and so is passively instrumental in seducing Others, and is but one Remove from the more active Seducer. Having thus confider'd the feveral Cases both of Deceivers and Deceived; it remains now only, in the third and last Place,

III.

To subjoin some Advices proper to prevent

our falling in with Either.

The best Preservative, in this Case, is an honest and good Heart, well-disposed towards Truth and Godliness, having no By-Ends to ferve, no favourite Lust or Passion to indulge. If Any Man is but willing to know and do God's Commandments; He will eafily discern, in most Cases, whether a Doctrine be of God, or whether it be of Men. The Evidences of the true Religion, and of its main Doctrines, are so bright and strong, when carefully attended to, that common Sense and Reason are sufficient to lead us, when there is no Bias to mislead Us. If We intend well, and sincerely aim at Truth, and have no Inclination to turn from it, either to the right or left, We shall not miss of it; at least, not in any Points of Weight or Concernment. Retain but this bonest, and upright upright Disposition of Heart, and then, as You can have no Inclination to deceive Others, so neither will you be liable to be grossly, or dangerously deceived your Selves. Many particular Cautions might be given, which I have no Room to mention: But He who has once well learnt the general Rule before mention'd, will need no other, or will Himself find out, as Occasion offers, all the rest.

And now to apply very briefly What hath been here said, to our particular Case and Circumstances. - We live in an Age of Deceivers, and so did the Apostles Themselves: And if Their Authority, even among Their own Difciples, was not sufficient to keep out false Doctrines and dangerous; fo neither will any more disputable Authority be able to do it now. It is our Happiness however, that both the Truth, and the whole Truth, purged from every gross Error or Superstition, is here publickly profess'd and taught, and every One that runs may read it. What has been calmly, wifely, and deliberately fettled by excellent Men, Martyrs here, and now Saints with God, let None lightly depart from, left They justly fall under the Cenfure of the Text, of being like Children toffed to and fro with every Wind of Doctrine, by the Sleight of Men, and cunning Craftine/s Craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive. Such Deceivers We are to expect, and Such We have had lately, more perhaps than ever.

For feveral Years last past, rude and bold Attacks have been making against the important Doctrines of Christianity, and against all Revealed Religion: And This is what They are still carrying on with exquisite Subtilty and Craftiness many Ways, and with a great deal of fruitless Pains and Labour. For, I may have leave to suppose, that No Man can in this Case be deceived, who has not first a Defire to be so, and is not the Dupe and Bubble to his own Lusts and Vices. Attempts have been made to persuade Us, that private Vices are publick Benefits: Who sees not that Their Lusts dictate what Their Pens write, and that the very Corruption of the Heart is come up into the Head? Others presume to tell Us, that Man is no Free Agent, and has no Liberty of Will; from whence it would immediately follow, that there is no Virtue nor Vice, no future Reckoning. Such Dogmatizers as These, only betray Their own guilty Fears, and, if there be any fuch Thing, have prejudged Themselves beforehand to everlasting Damnation. lastly, have run riot upon the Miracles of our Bleffed Lord, and have thrown out more Blafphemies phemies in a few Months Time, than hath ever been known in any Christian Country, in a Course of Ages. Can any serious Person be deceived by these Things, which are frightful and hideous enough, almost to chill his Blood, or to make it run backward in his Veins?

It would be affronting a Christian Audience, to exhort Them not to be carried about with any fuch Wind of Doctrines as have been taught by these Blasphemers. The cunning Serpent, in these Instances, seems to have gone beyond Himself, and to have forgot his wonted Subtilty. The Imposition is too gro/s, and the Language too coarse to fetch in Converts. All it can do, is, to make Those worse who were always bad, to render Them perhaps ten times more the Children of Hell, than They were before.

As to Men of any good Sense or Sobriety, I prefume, fuch Attempts will only fill Them with Horrour and Astonishment, and stir up Their pious Zeal for God and Religion. May all Attacks upon our most Holy Faith, or against any Branch of it, have no other Effect: And may our Bleffed Lord God, who alone can bring Good out of Evil, direct and over-rule all Things for the Good of his Church, thro' Jesus Christ our Lord. . Amen.

Examination of the second South the Was all the state of the Crailed a still of the Colon of to a profit the sale from the grown and it

edon Town of series of the long gray in the first agreet of a copation in the first at all the tree of a first the first

A second second contraction of the contraction of t

within the contract of the second works of the thirty of the

and the second of the y with the first the state of the The state of the s FOR THE WAS A SECOND OF HER SECOND The Contract of the Contract o A production of the order of the contract of t

and the second second second second 12 14 7 1

SERMON XI.

The Case of St. Paul, in persecuting the Church.

Аст в іх. 4, 5.

And He fell to the Earth, and heard a Voice, saying unto Him; Saul, Saul, why persecutest Thou Me?

And He Said, Who art Thou, Lord?

And the Lord Said, I am Jesus whom Thou persecutest: It is hard for Thee to kick against the Pricks.

HE Festival of St. PAUL's Conversion is of great Note, and of long Standing in the Church, not much short of a Thousand Years. The Memorial of that happy, miraculous Conversion, may suggest to Us many pious and useful Reslections; for which which Reason I chuse, conformably to our Church-Offices, to entertain You, this Day, upon That Subject. SAUL was once a grievous Persecutor of the Church of God: But, by the Divine Bleffing, He at length changed his Principles, changing also his Fewish Name SAUL into the Roman PAUL, and became a Chief Apostle. None of the Apostles had so confiderable a Hand in converting Men to the Christian Faith, as this St. PAUL had. Helaboured more abundantly than They All. He had for his Province the whole Gentile World, being therefore called the Apostle of the Gentiles. And as his Sermons, while living, drew many Thousands, or even Thousands of Thousands after Him, to profess the Faith of CHRIST; fo the Writings which He left behind Him, making up a great Part of the Canon of the New Testament, have been of admirable Use to feed and support the Christian Church ever fince. Of this Great Man, and Bleffed Saint, I am now going to treat. The History of his Conversion is particularly related in this Chapter by St. LUKE, and by St. PAUL Himself once and again in Chapters the xx11d, and xxv1th of this Book of the Acts. Such particular Care has been taken by Divine Providence, that an Event fo memorable morable should be transmitted down to Posterity with Marks of Honour and Advantage.

It was about two Years after our Lord was gone to Heaven, that this fo famed Conversion, was wrought. SAUL, for a Year or two before, had behaved as blind Zealots are used to do, with great Warmth and Fury. He was then in the Heat of his Youth, about 30 Years. old, very honest and fincere in his Way, and exceedingly zealous for the Law of his God. As He had been bred up a Few, and of the strictest Sect among Them, a Hebrew of the Hebrews by Descent, and by Party a Pharisee; He thought it became Him to maintain the Religion of his Country, and the Faith of his Ancestors, with all imaginable Vigour against All Opposers. The Prejudices of Education, were fo strong, and his natural Temper withal fo eager and impetuous, that He staid not to examine into the Merits of the Christian Cause, into the Truth or Credibility of the then new, and just commencing Religion: But as He very well knew that his own Religion was from God, He too hastily concluded that This other, now pretending to rival it, could not be divine also. Under this false Persuasion, He saboured to destroy it, believing it his Duty so to do, and that the Honour of God required it at his Hands. Fired Fired with the Thought, He entred a Kind of Volunteer into the Service, went of his own accord to the Magistrates to take out his Warrants for persecuting the poor Christians. He had Commission given Him to break open their Houses, to seize and apprehend Christian Men or Women, and to hale them by Force to Prison, in Order to have still greater Severities exercifed upon Them. While He was thus driving on with unbridled Zeal, He diftreffed the Christians all about Jerusalem, and pursued them even to strange Cities. One of those strange Cities, about 160 Miles from Ferusalem, was Damascus; and thither was He marching with all Haste, to search for Christians, that He might bring Them away bound in Chains, to be tried and executed at Ferufalem: But while He was yet upon the Road near to Damascus, it pleased the Blessed Jesus to look mercifully down from Heaven, and to take Pity both upon the Church and Him. He calls to Him, through a Gleam of Light, brighter than the Sun at Mid-day; SAUL, SAUL, why persecutest Thou Me? To which, SAUL, trembling and pale, replied, Who art Thou Lord? The Voice again answered, I am Jesus whom Thou persecutest; it is hard for Thee to kick against the Pricks. Hard for Thee to contend contend with Me thy Maker and Governor, who can crush Thee at Pleasure. All Thy Attempts against Me are like kicking against the Spikes: They will not hurt Me, but they will prove fatal to Thee, if persisted in. Saul, after this so friendly and heavenly Warning, instantly submitted; and from that Time forwards put off the Persecutor, to become a Convert, and an Apostle of Christ. This is a short Account of the Fact, which the Text relates to: And now I proceed to make the proper Resections, and Observations upon it.

- I. Confider We SAUL as a Perfecutor, and the Guilt He contracted in being fuch.
- II. Confider We the Alleviation of his Guilt, on the Account whereof He found Mercy.
- III. Observe We the exceeding great Goodness of our Blessed Lord, both to Him and to the Church, in this Affair.
- IV. Confider We the proper Use, or Application to be made of the Whole.

I.

Confider We SAUL as a Persecutor, and the Guilt He contracted in being such.

However honest and sincere He had been in doing it, however fully persuaded in his own Mind that He was serving God in it, yet He never reflected upon it afterwards but with Shame and Regret, with a penitential Sorrow and Remorse for it. I verily thought with my self, says He in one Place, that I ought to do many Things contrary to the Name of Jesus of Nazareth. He did it, it seems, in a full Persuasion, with an upright Conscience, and in the Integrity of his Heart: Notwithstanding which, He elsewhere ranks Himself among Sinners, on that very Account.

By our Translation it should seem He was Chief of Sinners; because it is there said, Of whom I am Chief b: But I conceive, ων ωρωτός είμι Εγώ should rather be rendred, of whom I am first, meaning not that He was either the Chief, or the First of Sinners, absolutely, but the First or Chief of those Sinners whom Christ, in a remarkable Manner, had shewn Mercy to; as it follows in the next Verse: Howbeit, for this Cause I obtained Mercy, ενα εν εμοί ωρώτω, that in Me First Jesu's Christ might shew forth all Long-Suffering, &c.

But to proceed. In another Place, humbling Himfelf for his Sin in this Particular, He fays,

I am

I am the Least of the Apostles, that am not meet to be called an Apostle, because I persecuted the Church of God2. He takes Shame to Himfelf, and confesses his Guiltiness, in that He had persecuted the Church of God. For, tho' He had Commission from the Magistrates, and might perhaps have been justified in profecuting Those who should disturb the Peace for the Sake of an Imposture, or for any false Religion; yet, no Commission could justify, or wholly excuse any Man in persecuting the Truth, in persecuting the Church of God. No Concerns of temporal Peace are of any Moment in fuch a Cafe: But both They who commission, and They who act under it, are alike guilty, in opposing the Will of Heaven, in fighting against God. No Perfuation of Mind, no Sincerity of Heart can altogether justify in such Cases; because God never does fend out any Religion, but He gives also sufficient Credentials with it; which, if calmly considered, and carefully attended to, in fuch a Manner as All Men ought to do in a Matter of that High Concernment, will be found to be abundantly full and satisfactory. SAUL was too eager and hasty, to consider well the Case. Prepossession had blinded Him, and He fuffered his Passions to run before his Reason.

Vol. II, 0 2 He

He took it too easily for granted, that Truth was on bis Side, without fo much as allowing the other Side a fair Hearing. This was wrong Judgment, and a very great Fault in a Person of his good Sense and great Abilities of Mind. It was the greater, because it was a Cause of Blood, and the Lives of many Thousands might be concern'd in it. It is exceeding finful and dangerous to mistake in such a Case: For, if the Supposed Offence of Those Whom He so persecutes be not proved, and the Crime clear, it is murdering Men, instead of doing Justice. St. PAUL, afterwards, did not forget to make Mention of this High Aggravation of his Fault: For thus He speaks: When the Blood of thy Martyr STEPHEN was shed, I also was standing by, and consenting unto his Death, and kept the Raiment of Them that flew Him 2. is very true, that, by the Jewish Law, Blasphemers and False Prophets, and Such as attempted to seduce the People from the true Religion, were to be put to Death: And accordingly the Prophet ELIJAH, and King JEHU, made no Scruple of shedding the Blood of the Priests and Worshippers of BAAL, as was proper and necessary to do: But then those Priests, and those Worshippers were really Impostors, Seducers, and gross Idolaters, and deserved to suffer. The Christians were quite contrary: Their Cause was just, their Religion true, their Commission divine; which the Persecutors Themselves might easily have perceived, had They but duly attended either to the Nature of the Doctrine, or to the Miracles wrought in Confirmation of it, or to Their own Prophecies, which long before had made way for it, and given Testimony to it.

Upon the Whole then, SAUL, confidered as a Persecuter of the Church of God, cannot be acquitted of Prejudice, Partiality, and precipitate Judgment, in a Cause which demanded cool Deliberation, and the most scrupulous Care, Caution, and Sedateness. Proceed We next,

II.

- To confider What may be pleaded to soften and alleviate his Guilt in it, on Account of which

He found Mercy.

He Himself has intimated how the Case stood with Him; observing, that, tho' He had been some time a Blasphemer, and a Persecuter, and Injurious; yet He obtained Mercy, because He did it ignorantly in Unbelief ². He did not know that the Christian Religion was from God, and that the Yewish was to cease and give way to it. He had no Suspicion, no Thought of any fuch Thing: He meant and intended well, while He was doing amis: This is his Excuse.

O₃ and

It may be faid in Answer, that He might have known better, if He had been pleafed to examine—Very true, He might; and therefore He is blameable: But still his Heart was honest and good, and therefore his Mistake was pitiable, and pardonable. His Ignorance was not altogether affected and wilful, but had a great Mixture of natural Temper and Human Frailty, to alleviate and qualify it. The JEWS who crucified our Saviour, did it thro' Ignorance 2: And therefore our Bleffed Lord, praying for Them upon the Cross, says, Father forgive. Them, for They know not what They do b. And yet it must be observed, that Their Ignorance was much more affected and culpable, than St. PAUL's was; as proceeding from a much more corrupt Heart. Envy, Pride, Malice, and other vile Affections had blinded Their Eyes, and corrupted Their Understandings: Whereas St. PAUL's Ignorance feems to have been owing chiefly, or folely, to the almost insuperable Prejudices of Education, and the natural Warmth and Vivacity of his Spirit. He had Zeal without Knowledge, more Heat than Light: But it was a Zeal for God, and not for any of the Honours, or Riches, or Pleasures of this World. His Mistakes proceeded from no evil Principle, no finister Aims, or corrupt Views; but from an over eager Defire of promoting, as He believed, the Honour and Glory of God, in the Way which He had been bred up to, and which He had never yet prefumed to call in Question. He had lived in all good Conscience before God a; a strict Observer of the Yewish Law, and true to his Profession and Principles: But a new Case, a new Turn of Religion came which He had not fulpected, and which He was too halty to allow Himfelf Time to confider. All This was confiftent with a very bonest and good Mind, fincerely zealous for the Honour of God, but misguided by an erroneous Conscience. Our Bleffed Lord, well knowing the Integrity of bis Heart, was pleased to overlook his Failings, and to receive Him into his own more immediate Service. He approved his upright Zeal, which wanted Nothing but clearer Light, and a better Direction. He indulges Him the Fayour of an heavenly Vision, condescends to speak to Him from above, and finds Him as willing and ready, upon Correction, to embrace 0 4 and and propagate the Christian Religion, as He had before been to persecute and destroy it. Which brings me to confider in the third Place,

III.

The exceeding great Goodness of our Blesfed Lord, both to St. PAUL and to the Church, in this Affair.

How kind, and how gracious were the Words which our Lord spake: SAUL, SAUL, why persecutest Thou Me? intimating the Love and Tenderness He had for all his true Followers: infomuch that He looked upon any Injuries committed against Them, to be as so many Injuries done to Himself. Next, He gave the good Man a feafonable, and a very affecting Caution. I am Jesus, whom Thou persecutest: I am Jesus, the Saviour of the World (fo the Name fignifies) it is hard for Thee to contend with One fo much mightier than Thou art: Stop thy Career, and retreat in Time. These were moving Arguments, and pierced to the very Soul. But to make the Impression still stronger, He was pleased to surround Him with dazling Light, and to strike Him quite blind for a Time. He had the better Opportunity of retiring inwards, to confider the more closely, and to recollect. These outward Means, together together with inward Grace, had their full Effect, and made SAUL become a very obedient and humble Convert to the Faith of Christ. Thus the Man was marvellously rescued from the Jaws of Death and Hell, in order to become a great and glorious Saint in Heaven. Such was our Lord's Kindness to Him in particular.

But, What is still more considerable, was the exceeding Goodness therein shewn to the Church in general. It was not only taking off a very furious and dangerous Enemy; but it was making of Him One of the kindest and best of Friends. There was No Man better qualified to serve the Church, both by preaching and writing, than St. PAUL. He had great natural Abilities, improved by a liberal and polite Education; to which also were super-added many extraordinary supernatural Gifts: And one Advantage more He had above the Rest of the Apostles; that He could tell both Yews and Pagans, whom He went to convert, that He had been once as vehemently prejudiced against Christianity, as They could be; that He had been mad enough even to persecute it; that He knew the utmost They could have to object to it, for He had been one of the Objectors Himself, and upon as good Reasons as Any Man

218 The Case of St. PAUL,

Man else could be: And yet, after all, He had met with full Conviction of the Folly of his former Courfe, and of the necessary Obligation which Every Man lay under, to submit their Prejudices to the Law of CHRIST. When Any leading, or confiderable Man of a Sect changes Sides, and there is no visible Interest, no worldly Prospects which could invite Him to it, His Example carries very considerable Force and Weight with it. It is reasonably prefumed in fuch a Case, that Nothing less than Demonstration, or some Divine Impulse, could work Conviction upon a Person so strongly prepossessed, and prejudiced another Way. On this Account, St. PAUL's preaching up CHRIST among Yews and Gentiles, was more affecting and forcible than That of St. PETER, or St. JOHN, or Any Other of the Apostles. They had been Friends to CHRIST'S Religion from the Beginning, and might perhaps be suspected of some partial Fondness towards it: But PAUL had been a professed Adversary to it, and very bitter against it; so that Nothing but a strong Conviction of its Truth and Certainty could have made Him espouse it. It is from this very. Man, once an avowed and declared Enemy to Christianity, that We have, at this Day, 14 Epistles written in Defence and Confirmation of it. He was the Chosen Vessel, the principal Instrument which God made Use of, for converting and reforming the World; because He, of All Men, having been once an Enemy, and now become a Friend, was the most likely to perfuade. What Advantage that fingle Circumstance gave St. PAUL in his Preaching, may be learn'd from What is faid in the 21st verse of this ixth Chapter of the Acts. All that heard Him, were amazed and said; Is not This He that destroyed Them which called on This Name in Yerusalem &c. And St. PAUL Himself takes notice of it, in these Words: They had heard that He which persecuted Us in Times past, now preacheth the Faith, which once He destroyed, and They glorified God in Me a.

IV.

It remains now only to confider the proper Use, and Application to be made of the Whole.

1. And first, let Us learn from the Instance of St. PAUL, how much it concerns Every Man to take Care, that He judges right in all Matters of high Consequence especially, and that his Conscience be duly informed. Let No Man trust to a meer Persuasion of Mind, which may be owing only to Prepossession and Prejudice; but let Him well and wifely examine upon what Foundation Foundation his present Judgment is grounded. Infinite Mischiefs may arise from an erroneous Conscience, and a misguided Zeal. It is not sufficient to mean and intend well, in fuch Cases: But it is further necessary to take all reasonable Care to be rightly and fully informed; that fo We may know certainly what we do, and may be able to justify it upon true and found Principles. Ignorance of the Rule will not excuse a Man in acting against it; because He ought to know the Rule He is to act by; which He may do, if He will be at the Pains to attend and look into it. Yet it must be acknowledged, on the other Hand, that many merciful Allowances will be made for Men of fincere Virtue and Probity, Who have been misled only by the almost infuperable Prejudices of Education, and whose Mistakes have been owing more to Natural Infirmity and Human Frailty, than to any evil Difposition of a corrupt Heart. St. PAUL found Mercy, on this Account chiefly: And fo may Other misguided Zealots who have the same Probity of Mind which St. PAUL, even before his Conversion, had.

2. From the same Instance of St. PAUL, learn We a ready Submission and Obedience to Truth and Godliness, when sufficiently propounded to Us. Lay We aside all inveterate Prejudices, and stubborn Reluctances, as soon as ever We have Light enough to see that We have been in an Error, and that We ought to retract. There is a great Deal of Pride and Obstinacy in some Tempers, which renders Them proof against Conviction. They are averse to own They have ever been in the wrong, lest it be a Reflection upon Their Judgment, and lessen Their Esteem in the World. This is Folly and Vanity. There is no real Discredit, but Honour rather, in growing wifer: And it is much more creditable to correct our Follies or Mistakes, than to perfift in them. How refign'd and tractable was the good Apostle of this Day! how ready both to own, and to retract his former Errors and Misconduct! how sincerely penitent for them, and zealous to amend them! He valued not the Imputation of Levity or Inconstancy: To change for the better, shewed the truest Constancy of a well-disposed Mind. He regarded not the Flouts or Reproaches of his Party, Whom He had deferted for CHRIST. Let Them call Him a Deferter, a Renegade, an Apostate, or What They pleased: He knew that He had weighty and unanswerable Reasons for leaving Them, and that They ought also to follow, under Pain and Peril of being Themselves deserted and abandoned by God. Such was St. PAUL's wife wife and willing Compliance with what was right and just, as foon as apprized of it; which shew'd a large Soul, and a generous Probity of Mind, and is an admirable Pattern for Others to copy after.

3. Thirdly, and lastly, Learn We from the whole Transaction, which We this Day commemorate, the Truth and Certainty of our Lord's Resurrection and Ascension into Heaven, his Power and Majesty there as Lord of all, and his exceeding Goodness in looking down from thence to take Care of his Church here below; and how dangerous a Thing it will be, and how fatal to the Undertakers, to perfift in any Attempts against Him. It will be hard for Them to kick against the Pricks. What Account then shall Those Men have to give, Who still oppose, and, as much as in Them lies, persecute the Religion of CHRIST? I speak not now of Yews, Pagans, or Mahometans, Who may have the Prejudices of Education to plead, as St. PAUL had, to alleviate Their Sin in doing it: But I fpeak of Such as have been baptized and bred up in this very Religion, and have revolted from it, and labour, if it were possible, to destroy it. Their Conduct is plainly monstrous, and Their Crime unpardonable. They have no Colour for it, no Temptation to it, more than what springs from from a wicked and corrupt Heart. Either the Pride of Singularity, or the Spirit of Contradiction, or Malice towards the Profession of this Religion, or the Aversion they have to Rule and Restraint, or, in a Word, Their strong Attachment to Their Lusts and Vices, makes Them wild and outragious, and fo of Course drives Them upon any desperate Lengths. The Time will come, when the Lord JESUS, Whom They persecute, will take fad Vengeance upon Them in Flames of Fire. In the mean while, let Every ferious Christian detest and abominate fuch flagrant Instances of Impiety: And let Us however make this good Use of Them, as they are Occasions offered, to stir Us up and to awaken Us to a more fervent Zeal for our most Holy Profession, endeavouring also to adorn the Same with a Conversation suitable to the Gofpel of CHRIST.

SERMON

SERMON XII.

CHRIST'S Sacrifice of Himself explained; and Man's Duty to offer Spiritual Sacrifice inferred, and recommended.

EPHES. V. 1, 2.

Be Ye therefore Followers of God, as dear Children; and walk in Love, as CHRIST also hath loved Us, and hath given Himself for Us, an Offering and a Sacrifice to God for a sweet-Smelling Savour.

FOR HESE Words carry in them an instructive Lesson concern-T ing CHRIST'S Death and Pafsion, together with a practical Conclusion drawn from it, to shew the Use and Improvement which We ought to make of it. As CHRIST hath loved Us, and gave Himself a Sacrifice to God upon the Cross for Us (a fure Pledge and Token of his Kindness towards Us) so ought We to give up our selves to God in all holy Obedience, but more particularly in the Offices of Love towards our Brethren, as fuch Offices are the most acceptable Sacrifices that We can offer to God most High. The general Meaning and Intendment of the Text being thus briefly opened, I may now proceed to a particular Consideration of the two main Branches of it; namely, our Lord's unexampled Sacrifice made in his Death, for the Honour of God and the Good of Men; and Our own Sacrifice of Our Selves in the whole Course of our Lives, which ought to bear some Analogy to our Lord's, and to be, as it were, a Copy drawn from it, as an humble Imitation of it.

I.

I begin with our Lord's Sacrifice, That Great Sacrifice which was from all Eternity forelaid in the High Counsels of Heaven; which was intimated to Mankind as soon as there was Need for it (that is, immediately after the Fall) which, probably, gave Birth and Rise to all Other Sacrifices whatsoever, whether in the fewish or Gentile World; but which undoubtedly edly was as the Pattern in the Mount to all the Sacrifices of the Old Testament (Mosaical, or Patriarchal) all which pointed to it, rested upon it, and centred in it. No fooner had Man forfeited the Favour of God by committing Sin, but there appeared a Necessity of a Sacrifice for Sin, to re-instate Him. Divine Wisdom appointed it, and called for it: From whence We may certainly infer, that Reasons of Justice, or (which comes to the same) the unerring Rules of Divine Government required God would not, or in Reason could not, be appeafed without it: But with it He might, and He has declared that He would. He accepts of our Lord's Sacrifice as a grateful Odour, a sweet-smelling Savour delightful to Him, as reconciling his Justice and Goodness together, fecuring the Honour of his Laws, and at the same time providing for the Felicity of Man.

The first Time We meet with the Phrase of fweet-smelling Savour, or fweet Savour (which comes to the same) is in the viiith Chapter of Genesis, v. 21, where Noah having offered Burnt-offerings, the Lord is said to have smelled a sweet Savour, or a Savour of Rest. When God speaks to Men, He accommodates his Expressions to the Language of Men, in Vol. II. P 2

Order to be understood by Them. He condescends to make Use of Their low Phrases, to express high and sublime Truths in the most affecting and sensible Way. The Figure, or Similitude here made use of, is very easily understood: For, as Perfumes are grateful to Man's Sense, so are virtuous and godly Acts or Exercises grateful to the Divine Mind. Our Lord's Obedience unto Death, even the Death of the Cross, was eminently a godly Service, the most exalted Instance of true Piety and Charity that ever was, or ever could be performed. It was more than All Men, or All Angels, more than the whole Creation in a Body together could have done towards the pacifying of God, and reconciling of Man; and therefore it was as the richest Perfume, having a most delightful Fragrancy, such as None other can come up to, inafmuch as that therein God is well pleased.

To make This appear the more distinctly, We may consider, First, the PRIEST: Secondly, the SACRIFICE: Thirdly, the ALTAR: And lastly, the Divine LAW-GIVER to Whom the Offering was made, and by Whom It was, and is accepted.

1. A PRIEST, properly speaking, is a Person taken from among Men, authorized by God to be an Advocate for Them at the Court of Heavena. As a Prophet or an Apostle properly is an Ambassador from God to treat with Men; so a Priest is an Agent or Sollicitor, in behalf of Men, to treat with God. Our Lord was both a Prophet and Priest, in different Views: But here We are to confider Him in his Sacerdotal Capacity only; in which Capacity He made his Offering and Sacrifice for Sins. He is a Priest of an Higher Order than the Order of AARON, the Order of MELCHI-ZEDECK, whose Priesthood was Royal: For He was King of SALEM, which, in mystical Construction, is King of Peace. MELCHIZE-DECK, undoubtedly was a mortal Man; yet, to make Him the fitter Type of CHRIST, He is introduced as a Priest, and no Notice taken either of his Birth or his Decease; as if, like CHRIST, He had had no Beginning of Days, nor were to have End of Life. He was introduced as Blessing ABRAHAM, the Father of the Faithful, to intimate that CHRIST's Priestbood was to extend to All the Faithful, in all past, present, and future Ages; and not to be confined, like AARON's to the Ferus only, commencing with their Oeconomy, expiring with it. And it is farther observable, that MEL-

2 Hebr. v. 1.

MELCHIZEDECK, as introduced in Genesis, brought no Typical Offerings or Sacrifices, as AARON was wont to do: He presented Nothing to God but Himfelf, and his pious and benevolent Offices; in which He was so far a Type of CHRIST (tho' very imperfectly) as CHRIST also offered Himself and his all-sufficient Services, active and paffive, unto God. MELCHIZEDECK further exercised his High Priesthood, in Blessing the Father of the Faithful, and feeding Him with Bread and Wine; correspondently to Which, Our Lord, as High Priest, Blesses all the Faithful with all spiritual Bleffings a, and feeds Them with the Bread of Heaven, the Wine of Angels, with his own Body and Blood. - But my Business at present is, not with the Bleffings consequent upon our Lord's Sacrifice, but with the Sacrifice it felf of which the Text speaks.

2. The Text mentions both Offering, and Sacrifice: Our Lord was Both. He hath given Himself for Us an Offering, and a Sacrifice. The Word Offering is of somewhat larger Meaning than the Word Sacrifice: For, every Sacrifice is an Offering to God, but every Offering to God is not a Sacrifice. However, the Word Offering, in this Place, does not mean Offering as different from Sacrifice, but as Sacrifice taken in a larger Sense, and different from Sacrifice in a stricter Acceptation. There were under the Old Testament Offerings of Fine Flour, otherwise called Meal-Offerings, or Bread-Offerings; and there were Animal Sacrifices of Sheep, Goats, Bullocks. The Meal-Offerings are here alluded to under the Name of Offering, and the Animal Sacrifices under the Name of Sacrifice. They were Both of them Gifts to God, Both of them Sacrifices in a just and proper Sense, as Sacrifice means a Present made to God: And They were Both of them Types or Figures of what CHRIST was to give to God in the Sacrifice of Himself. He is the Bread of Heaven, corresponding to the Jewish Bread-Offering: He is the Lamb of God, corresponding to all the Animal-Sacrifices. To Him all those Material and Typical Services pointed, by Him they were fulfilled, and in Him they expired. He was both the Beginning and the End of all those Ordinances: He eftablish'd them at the first, to give Notice of his coming; and by his coming He removed them, and took them away, when He took away our Sins, nailing them to his Cross a.

mean

P 4

The

The Text fays, CHRIST gave Himself: That Word Himfelf, may want some Explanation. His Ferion is constituted of two Natures, the Disane, and Human: He is in Himfelf both God and Man. The Priest who made the Sacrifice, is the whole Person: The Sacrifice, That Self in part only; for the Divine Nature could not suffer, nor be made a Sacrifice; only It might, and did give Value and Dignity to the Human Nature, which alone was, in Strictness, The Sacrifice. Giving Himself therefore, must be understood to mean, giving Himself in Part. For as a Martyr, who gives his Body only (not his Soul) to be burned, is rightly faid to give Himself to the Flames, because He gives what is Part of Himself; so also our Blessed Lord, in sacrificing his Human Nature, a Part of Himself, is rightly faid to have facrificed Himfelf. This Sacrifice is variously expressed in Holy Scripture: For, fometimes it is called giving his Body, fometimes his Blood, fometimes his Soul, fometimes his Life for Us: All which Expressions amount to the fame Thing, namely, that He died for Us, died in our Stead, a willing Sacrifice for the Sins of the whole World. And yet None of those Expressions, however well they are adapted to the customary Forms of Speech, are, in Strictness of Propriety, to be compared with St. PAUL's Saying, that He was obedient unto Death 2. For, in Truth of Notion and precise Accuracy of Expression, It was his Obedience active and passive, which was properly the Sacrifice, the acceptable Offering unto God. God is a Spirit, and the Spiritual Services are properly his Delight. Perfect Innocence, and consummate Virtue, both in doing and suffering, were, in Strictness of Speech, not only the Flower and Perfection, but the very Form and Effence of our Lord's Sacrifice. There was found in That unfathomable Mystery of Divine Love, in our Lord's dying for us; there was found, I fay, not only spotless Holiness and Purity, but a most upright Heart, and the most devout Affections, breathing Nothing but the most ardent Affections and Services for the Glory of God, and the Salvation of Men; for the general Happiness, if I may fo speak, of the whole Rational System. Those Benevolent Services taken together, and All recommended by the fuper-eminent Dignity of the Person so doing, and so suffering, were the Sacrifice of sweet Odour, the spiritual Perfume, acceptable to Him who alone could judge perfectly of the infinite Worth and Merit of it. - So much for the Sacrifice.

3. The Third Thing to be confidered is the ALTAR. Priest Sacrifice and Altar have commonly been thought Relatives, supposed to infer, and imply each other: Tho' That is not strictly and universally true; as might be shewn at large, were This the Place for it, or were it at all proper to enter here into Niceties of That Kind.

In This Case however, Divines both Ancient and Modern have thought of an Altar, as well as of a Priest, and of a Sacrifice: And from the Third Century at least, down to This Time, The Cross whereon our Lord suffered, has been generally esteemed, and called the Altar. For, as the Jewish Sacrifices were lifted up upon the Altar erected for that purpose, so was the Son of Man lifted up by the Cross. And as the Altar among the Jews was used to bear or sustain the Sacrifice, so the Altar of the Cross bore or sustained our Lord's Humanity, while Himself bare our Sins in his own Body on the Tree b.

Thus far the Refemblance and Analogy between the Levitical Altar and the Altar of the Cross, seem to hold very aptly; and to These two Circumstances of the Comparison, there might be others added of inferior Note. Nevertheless,

vertheless, Similitudes should not be strain'd too far: Because, tho' they may hit in several Circumstances, yet will They not be found to answer in All.

One Circumstance of an Altar is, that it Sanctifies the Gift, or Sacrifice offered upon it a. This Circumstance cannot properly be applied to the Altar of the Cross, as sanctifying the Great Sacrifice. Wherefore Some very Judicious Divines have here thought of Another Altar, besides the Cross, a spiritual Altar; namely, the Eternal Spirit, the Divine Nature of our Lord, which in this Case sanctified the Human. It is faid in the Epistle to the Hebrewsb, that CHRIST thro' the eternal Spirit offered Himself without Spot to God. In This View CHRIST was the Priest, his Human Nature the Sacrifice, and his Divine Nature the Altar which fanctified the Sacrifice, which fupported it under all Sufferings, and under the Weight of the World's Iniquities laid upon it, and finally added infinite Value and Dignity to it. So then, the Cross might be the Altar in some Respects, and our Lord's own Eternal Spirit might be the Altar in others.

But after all, It must be owned that Scripture is not clear either for This Kind of Altar, or That. The Doctrine of the Sacrifice is plainly Scripture-Doctrine: But the Doctrine of the Altar stands only upon Scripture-Confequences, drawn by Interpreters, and not perhaps with fuch Evidence as must extort the Affent of every reasonable Man. What need is there of a proper Altar to every proper Sacrifice? The Notion of a Sacrifice, which means a Gift to God, is independent of the Notion of an Altar to present it upon. It was accidental to the Jewish Sacrifices that they required Altars, because they were generally to be confumed by Fire, in whole or in part, and therefore wanted a Fire-Hearth for that Purpose: And it is far from certain that all proper Sacrifices were offer'd upon Altars, An Altar feems to be no more necessary to every Sacrifice, than a Case, or a Patine, or a Pix is to every Gift or Present which any Person may bring to Another. It is a Circumstance perhaps of Decency, not of the Substance of the Present. A Gift is not the less a Gift for being presented naked and simple, without the Formalities of a Case to inclose it, or of a Plate to offer it upon. In a word then, the Sacrifice of CHRIST is an undoubted Scripture-Truth: But as to a proper Altar for That Sacrifice, it is a more disputable Point; about which which very wife and good Men may be allowed to think very differently, or to judge as They fee Caufe.

4. The Fourth Article to be confidered is the supreme LAW-GIVER, to Whom the Sacrifice of the Cross was made, and by Whom it was graciously accepted. God the Father, without Dispute, as First Person in the Godhead, is Law-giver in chief; and to Him our Blessed Lord paid the Price of our Redemption, the Sacrifice of Himself.

If it be ask'd, what Need there was of any Sacrifice to a Person so benign, and so mercifully disposed to pardon All repenting Sinners; I say, if this were ask'd, it might be sufficient to reply that We know the Fast: God did require a Sacrifice, and such a Sacrifice; and He knows what Need there was for it. However, without pretending to sathom the Divine Counsels, or to understand all the Reasons of State, by which an All-wise Governor proceeds, We may presume to observe that Two Special Articles, the Glory of God and the Felicity of Man have been admirably served by This mysterious Dispensation.

It is for the Glory of God, that He is feen not to connive at Offences, nor to be too indulgent towards Sin, while He requires a valuable Satisfaction for Offences committed. His Fuffice, his Holiness and unspotted Purity are hereby glorified before Men and Angels, and the Honour of his Laws supported in the Face of the whole World.

On the other Hand, Man's eternal Felicity appears to be best secured by the same Means, because hereby Provision is made to keep Him the more Humble and modest to all Eternity. Pride is reasonably supposed to have been the Sin of Lucifer, which Heaven it felf, and even the Presence of God did not keep Him from. The more exalted his Privileges were, the greater was his Danger, and the furer his Downfall. God has taken Care that Mankind shall have less Occasion to assume, or to grow High-minded. Their Salvation shall stand entirely in the Merits of Another Person, not at all in their Own: And as often as They hope to be accepted in God's Sight, it must not be with Robes of their own cleanfing (full of Spots and Stains at the best) but with Robes made white in the Blood of the Lamba. This may be to Them for ever a constant Lesson of Humility, Which is the Mother of all Virtue, and a fure Foundation of all Happiness, securing Them from the Temptation which even Angels

Angels before lay under, and which at length turn'd Them out of Heaven, fince reserved in everlasting Chains under Darkness, unto the Judgment of the Great Day 2.

Seeing then that the Glory of God, and the Felicity of Man, appear to have been thus most effectually provided for by the Sacrifice of Christ; no Wonder if That Sacrifice has a very fweet-smelling Savour, or is received as the most delightful Perfume by Him whose Goodness is infinite, and whose Mercies boundless; and, Who having no Interests of his Own to serve, takes Pleasure in every Thing whereby his Creatures may be made to come near Him, and be rendred happy in the Enjoyment of Him.

Having thus run thro' the doctrinal Part of the Text, I come next to the practical Conclusion drawn from it, drawn by the Apostle in the Text it self.

II.

Be ye therefore Followers of God as dear Children [of God] and walk in Love, that is, in Love of the Brethren. If our Blessed Lord condescended to make a Sacrifice of Himself to God for the general Good of Mankind; We ought ought likewise to make the like Tender of our Selves, our Hearts Wills and Affections, and all our Services, to the fame God, and on the same Account, namely, for the general Good of All our Brethren. Such a Tender as I now speak of, is That Sacrifice which the Gospel every where points out to Us, and which God expects of Us; to facrifice the Old Man, with the Affections and Lusts, and to put on the New Man, devoting Our Selves wholly to the Glory of God, and the Happiness of our Fellow-Creatures. In This respect, all Christians are represented in the New Testament as making one Holy Priefthood (faving to God's commission'd Officers Their peculiar Presidency in it) to offer up spiritual Sacrifices acceptable to God by JESUS CHRIST 3. Those /piritual Sacrifices are reducible to two Heads, to the two great Commandments, the Love of God, and the Love of our Neighbour. To the First Head belongs the Sacrifice of Prayer, which is the Gospel Incenseb; as also the Sacrifice of Praise, which St. PAUL exhorts us to offer up continually c. To the Second Head belongs the Sacrifice of Alms-deeds, and of all other friendly Offices towards One Another. To do good and to communicate, forget not; for with with fuch Sacrifices God is well pleased. There are other spiritual Sacrifices recommended in the New Testament, which are expressive of the Love of God and of Man, Both in One: As the Sacrifice of an bumble and contrite Heart b, and the presenting our Bodies a Living Sacrifice holy, acceptable unto God c. We cannot do greater Honour to our Lord's Sacrifice, than by thus copying after it in the best Manner We are able; and following it (tho' at an infinite Distance) in our own religious Offerings and Sacrifices, fuch as I have been mentioning. Be We thus Followers of God, as dear Children of God, and true Disciples of CHRIST.

^{2 1} Pet. ii. 5. b Revel. v. 8. viii. 3, 4. 6 Heb. xiii. 15.

But more particularly, as often as We come to commemorate our Lord's High Sacrifice at his Holy Table, be We mindful to make a Tender of our Selves to Him, as He made a Tender of Himself to God. While We plead the Merits of That Sacrifice in our Offices here below (which He also pleads in his Intercessions on our behalf above) let us throw in our own fecondary Sacrifices to it; not to heighten the Value of it, which already is infinite, but to render our Selves capable of the Benefits of it. As there is Merit sufficient on His Part, so VOL. II.

⁹ Heb. xiii. 16. b Pfal. li. 17. c Rom. xii. 4.

there must be competent Qualifications on Ours: While CHRIST, by the visible Signs of Bread and Wine, conveys to Us the Fruits of his natural Body and Blood; so ought We, by the same Signs, to present to Him the mystical Body, whereof We are a Part. By the Levitical Law, there was to be a Meat-Offering and a Drink-Offering thrown upon the Lamb in the daily Service, and Both together were reputed but as One and the same Sacrifice. The Lamb, without Question, fignified CHRIST and his Sacrifice: And why should not those secondary Oblations thrown upon the Lamb, be supposed to fignify or prefigure the secondary Sacrifices, or Services of Christians, thrown, as it were, upon CHRIST's Sacrifice, to strengthen. our Claim to it, and to fix our Interest in it? Therefore, while our Lord's Sacrifice is reprefented and pleaded before God on Our Behalf, in the Holy Communion; take We Care to fend up our devout Prayers and Praises, our Humble Minds and Contrite Hearts, our Almsdeeds, and our Forgivenesses of All who have offended Us, our holy Resolutions and Pious Vows; and in a Word, Our Selves, our Souls and Bodies, to be a reasonable, holy, and lively Sacrifice unto God. So may the Sacrifice of CHRIST commemorated, and our own Sacrifices therewith . therewith presented, be considered as One Sacrifice of the Head and Members, in Union together: And so may the united Offering be received above, as an Offering and a Sacrifice to God of a sweet-smelling Savour; acceptable unto Him, thro' Jesus Christ our Lord: To Whom, with the Father and the Holy Ghost, be all Honour, and Glory henceforth for evermore. Amen.

Vol. II. Q2 SERMON

SERMON XIII.

The History and Character of BALAAM.

Numb. xxii. 10, 11, 12.

And Balaam said unto God, Balak the Son of Zippor, King of Moab, hath Sent unto Me Saying,

Behold, there is a People come out of Egypt, which covereth the Face of the Earth: Come now, curse Me Them; peradventure I shall be able to overcome Them, and drive Them out.

And God said unto Balaam, Thou shalt not go with Them, Thou shalt not curse the People: For They are bleffed.

PIN HE Story of BALAAM fills up three whole Chapters in this Book of Numbers; and it is frequently referred to in feveral other Places, both of the Old and New Testament. Seeing then that It makes fo confiderable a Figure in the Sacred History, (though It comes in but occasionally) I have thought it may well deserve a distinct Confideration; and do therefore chuse it for the Subject of our present Meditations.

246 The History and Character

The Israelites, in their Passage through the Wilderness, were to march through the Landof the Moabites, a People descended of Lot, and over Whom BALAK was King at that Time. The Moabites, Ammonites, and Midianites, near Neighbours, were All alarmed at the March of the Israelites, and were afraid of Them; knowing what great Things God had so lately done for Them; and that neither SIHON King of the Amorites, nor Og the King of Basan had been able to stand before Them. The Israelites had entirely routed and ruin'd Those two potent Princes, taking Possession of Their Lands: And They had done it with fuch Dispatch, and in so surprizing a Manner, that the Nations round about had Reason to fuspect that there was Something very extraordinary and supernatural in it. It seems to have been owing to some such Apprehension as This, that None of Them durst oppose the Hebrews, without endeavouring first to engage Heaven on Their Side, which They hoped to do by the help of Inchantments.

There

There was a Famous Magician, or Prophet, of that Time, whose Name was BALAAM, mightily celebrated through all the East: Him They refolved to court with high Promises, and, if possible, to bribe Him over to Their Interests in this Exigency. The Notion They had of Him was, that He was so Divine a Man, fo highly favoured by Heaven, that He could turn the Fate of War which Way He pleased, by his Benedictions and Imprecations: For thus faid BALAK in his Meffage to Him: I wot that He Whom Thou bleffest, is bleffed; and He Whom Thou curfest, is curfed a. The Midianites, and Moabites were Both of Them full of the fame Persuasion, as We learn from this Chapter: And We find from other Places of Scripture b, that the Ammonites join'd with Them in the Defign of fending to BALAAM. Difpatches were order'd to Him, defiring Him to come and take a Survey of the Camp of Ifrael, and to curse Them in solemn Form, in Order to their Destruction.

It may look a little strange, that They should trust so little to their own Gods at Home, and should send as far as Mesopotamia for a Prophet to assist Them. Certainly, BALAAM's Reputation must have run very high; or there must have been some very peculiar Reason for that uncommon Method of proceeding. Perhaps They imagined, that the Gods of Their own Country were not able to defend Them against the God of Ifrael; having so lately seen what the Israelites had done to the Amorites Their Neighbours: Or They might fancy that BA-LAAM had an Interest with all Kinds of Gods, and might ingage Them All to come in to Their Affistance: Or rather, I incline to think that They knew BALAAM to be a Prophet of the same God which the Israelites worshipp'd; and that therefore by His Means They hoped to draw off the God of Ifrael (Whom They were fo much afraid of) from affifting the Ifraelites, and to incline Him to favour the Moabites, and Those who were join'd with Them.

² Numb. xxii. 6.

b Deut. xxiii. 3, 4.

248 The History and Character

The Learned are not perfectly agreed as to BALAAM's Character, whether to call Him a Magician, or a Prophet: But it is very evident that He was well acquainted with the Name of the God of Ifrael, and that He applied Himfelf to Him, and to Him only in that Affair. For, when the Elders of Moab and Midian came first to Him, He desired Them to lodge with Him that Night, promising Them to bring Them Word in the Morning, what The Lord (that is, what Jehovah the God of Ifrael) should Thould fay to Him, in Relation to Their Errand^a: Which accordingly He did; and the Answer He brought was What Jehovah the God of Israel had really put into his Mouth. This Circumstance plainly shews that He had been used to consult the True God in former Times: For otherwise, He could never have pretended now to promise before hand to bring an Answer from Him, or to know for certain that it was His.

There is no Abfurdity in supposing that God might have some Prophets (abroad in the Heathen World) who were not of Israel. JOB was undoubtedly fuch an One: And why might not BALAAM be Another? It is the more likely, because, from the Time of ABRAHAM, God had fpread the Knowledge of Himfelf about the idolatrous World: And all ABRA-HAM's Posterity were originally circumcifed, and became Worshippers of the true God; tho', in Process of Time, They revolted, and fell into Idolatry. The Moabites and Ammonites, Whom We are now speaking of, were of distinct Consideration from the Rest of the Heathen World, being the Descendants of righteous Lot, Who was of the fame Religion with ABRAHAM. The Midianites too, of Whom most probably BALAAM was, were the Posterity of ABRA-

HAM, by KETURAH; and Who therefore certainly had, for some Time, the Knowledge of the true God amongst Them: Which makes it the more probable that God might plant some Prophets amongst Them in those early Days, to preserve That true Religion and Wor-ship Which They had received from their Progenitors.

Upon the Whole then, I take the Liberty to conclude, that BALAAM was really a Prophet; and fo He is called by St. PETER2. And as He had an Interest and Correspondence with the true God, fo the Meaning of the Moabites really was, that He should come and endeavour to draw off the God of Israel from affifting the Hebrews. He did make the Attempt (being hired and bribed fo to do) and without Effect. Accordingly it is observed in Deuteronomy, that the Lord would not bearken unto BALAAM b. And God Himself says by the Mouth of Joshua to the same Purpose, Ba-LAK fent and called BALAAM the Son of BEOR to curse you, but I would not bearken unto BA-LAAM, therefore He bleffed you still c. These Confiderations shew that BALAAM had address'd Himself to the God of Israel, in Hopes to have his License and Authority for cursing the

^{2 2} Pet. ii. 16. Deut. xxiii. 5. C Josh. xxiv. 10.

the Ifraelites. From whence We may reasonably infer, that BALAAM had been bis Prophet some Time before, and that, in Confidence of such his high Relation to God, He presumed to consult Him once and again upon That Occasion. Having thus far cleared our Way, We may now proceed,

- I. To confider more diffinctly the History of BALAAM, as laid down in Scripture.
- II. To make some Reflections upon it.

I.

The first Mention which we have of this Man is in this Chapter of the Book of Numbers. The Occasion of his being concern'd with the Children of Israel has been already intimated. Next, let Us observe How he behaved Himself upon That Occasion, What the Effect was, and what became of Him in the End.

To do Him Justice, He behaved Himself extremely well when the Message was first brought Him from King Balak. He confulted God upon the Matter laid before Him, made a faithful Report of the Errand which the Embassadors came upon, received God's Answer

252 The History and Character

Answer, and submitted to it; acquainting the Messengers that God would not give Him leave to curse That People; no, nor so much as to go along with the Embassadors. Thus far He carried Himself well and wifely, like an Honest, Pious, Upright Man. But afterwards came Other Meffengers, more in Number, and greater in Dignity than the Former: And They press'd Him vehemently to comply with BALAK's Request; promising Him rich Prefents, and honourable Preferments, in a Word; any Thing, or every Thing which He could ask or defire. To This again He made Answer, that, if BALAK would give Him his House full of Silver and Gold, yet He could not go beyond the Word of the Lord his Goda. This was well faid, and was the plain Truth. And here by the Way observe, that BALAAM, in these Words, professes his Attachment to the Lord JEHOVAH, as bis God: Which is a farther Confirmation of What I before hinted, that He was really a Prophet of the true God.

But to proceed: After This, whether prevail'd upon by Importunity, or foften'd too much by the Charms of Honour and Riches (which dazled his Eyes) the good Man began to stagger; and He yielded so far as to confult God again upon the same Thing, tho' He had before had an absolute, and peremptory Denial: This was his first false Step; for it was tempting God, and making too free with the Divine Majesty, forgetting both his Duty and Distance. God then gave the Man Leave to go with the Princes; but in fuch a Manner, as might have made Him sensible that it had been better if He had not ask'd it; and that his going would be to no Purpose, since He should still be restrain'd from cursing the People; which was What He went for, and was the fole End and Defign of the Princes who came to call Him. BALAAM however, having already fet his Heart too much upon the Bribes, readily accepted of the Concession made Him; and that very Morning He fet out on his Journey with the Princes of Moab. God was angry with Him for being so forward in this Matter, Which He might more wifely have declined, tho'Leave was given Him: And besides, BA-LAAM conceived Hopes that He might at Length have Permission to curse the Children of Ifrael: Otherwise It was a wild Undertaking to pretend to go at all. God feeing the Temper of the Man, and What He had in his Heart, sent an Angel to stop Him in the Way, and to deter Him effectually from his Purpose.

fult

254 The History and Character

He loved the Wages of Unrighteousniess, as St. PETER observes, and was rebuked for his Iniquity; the dumb Ass speaking with Man's Voice, forbad the Madness of the Prophet². The History of that Prodigy is related at large in the Book of Numbers, and is a Matter well known.

Some have been of Opinion (with MAI-MONIDES the famous Jew) that the whole Story of BALAAM and the Ass was a Vision only, or a Dream, and transacted meerly in Idea. But there is Nothing in the Text of Moses to countenance such a Persuasion; nor are the Reasons, suggested for this Opinion, of weight sufficient to persuade Us to lay aside the plain literal Construction.

It is with better Colour that Others, admitting the literal Construction, have further thought that the whole Affair was symbolical, and might admit of a mystical, as well as a literal Interpretation; tho' This also is no more than Conjecture. But They who take this Way, suppose that the Beast which the Prophet rode upon, might be an Emblem of BALAAM spurr'd on by BALAK his Master. The As saw the Danger by the Way, and made some Efforts to avoid it, while the Rider was persectly blind: And in like Manner the Prophet had seen that God was against the Design, and He made some Efforts

Efforts to turn aside from it; but was still vehemently press'd on, and push'd forwards by K. BALAK. I forbear to mention other refembling Circumstances, which have afforded Reason for supposing that the Whole was emblematical, and intended for BALAAM's Instruction, that He might see his Folly and retreat in Time.

But He went on; and God permitted Him now to proceed (according to his own Devices) to reap the Fruits of his Ambition and Avarice; only taking care all the Time, that He should not drop the least Curse upon the Israelites; but should speak as directed by God Himfelf, and deliver Nothing but Bleffings. The Prophet accordingly, after feveral fruitless Essays to prevail with God to let Him curse the People, was still constantly with-held from doing it; and instead of cursing Them, He altogether bleffed Them three times; and at length concluded, prophefying of the Downfall of the Moabites, and foretelling many and prodigious Successes of the People of Israel. Thus was King BALAK's Defign utterly frustrated: And instead of rewarding the Prophet, He was bitterly incens'd against Him. And now BA-LAAM, being reduced to these Straits, began to perceive how foolish an Errand He had come upon, and how little He had gain'd by the Expedition. However, having fail'd in One Way, He hoped now to make BALAK fome Amends in another: And, as God had now given the Man up to his own mad Counfels, He next enter'd into as wicked and impious a Defign as could well be imagined. He advised the Moabites to think of some Means of drawing the Israelites into some heinous Offence against Their God; affuring Them, that there was no poffible Way of getting an Advantage over Ifrael, unless They could be first drawn into Sin, that fo a Breach might be made between God and Them. This was a Kind of Machiavilian Policy, shrewd and deep laid, but cursed and diabolical. It had not the Effect which BA-LAAM aim'd at in it (God fo far defeating his Counfels) but the Event was, the feducing great Numbers of Ifraelites into Whoredom first, and then into Idolatry; and It ended in the Destruction of 24000 of God's People.

256 The History and Character

This Wickedness of BALAAM is particularly taken Notice of by St. John, in the Revelations; Who, speaking to the Church of Pergamus in the Name of Christ, says: I have a few things against Thee, because Thou hast there. Them that hold the Doetrine of BALAAM, Who taught BALAK to cast a Stumbling-block before the Children

Children of Ifrael, to eat Things facrificed unto Idols, and to commit Fornication a. St. PETER alfo alludes to the Same Thing; speaking of Some Persons, Who, as He says, had for jaken the right Way, and were gone astray, following the Way of BALAAM the Son of BOSOR, who loved the Wages of Unrighteousness b. St. PETER calls Him Son of Boson: In the Old Testament He is called Son of BEOR: But BEOR and Bosor are Both the fame Name in the Original, only differently pronounced: And perhaps This may be one Instance among others wherein St. PETER followed a Galilean Pronunciation: But That by the Way only. I should take Notice, that St. JUDE also alludes to the same Thing with What St. PETER and St. John refer to; rebuking some Persons for running greedily after the Error of BALAAM for Reward c. The Persons there pointed to, were a wretched Sect of False Teachers which started up in the very Infancy of the Christian Church. They held it lawful to follow carnal Lusts, to commit Fornication, Adultery, Incest, and other Impurities. This palatable Doctrine suited the corrupt Taste of the Voluptuous, and brought the Teachers in much Applause, and many a fair Present from their carnal VOL. II.

² Rev. ii. 14. b 2 Pet. ii. 15. Jude ver. 1 2.

258 The History and Character

carnal Hearers. And now, because Their Doctrine was very like Balaam's, and the principal Motive to it in the Teachers was Avarice, and a Desire of flattering and pleasing Others in Their Lusts; therefore Those Teachers were compared to Balaam, and Their Doctrine to His. Their Hebrew Name also was Balaamites, as their Greek Name was Nicolaitans; Both which signify the same Thing, viz. Lords, or Leaders of the People. And thus the Name of Balaam revived, as it were, in the first Ages of the Gospel, but much to his Dishonour, to make his Memory the more odious and detestable to latest Posterity. But I return to the History where I lest off.

-After BALAAM, by his curfed Counfels, had led Ifrael into a Snare, and God had taken fevere Vengeance of his own People for being fo weakly mifled; He then gave Orders to Moses and the Israelites to march against the Midianites, and smite Them, in Revenge for the Wiles which, by the Advice of BALAAM, They had practifed, and thereby beguiled Israel. Accordingly, They went out, and made a dreadful Slaughter of the Midianites, destroying Their Country, and dividing the Spoil. And here it was that BALAAM at length reap'd the Wages of his Iniquity, being slain among among the Rest with the Edge of the Sword a. Such was the End of that unhappy Man; once a Prophet, and, as it seems, highly in Favour with Almighty God; but beguiled with the Charms of Ambition and Covetousness, falling off by little and little (as God withdrew his Grace, which He had made an ill Use of) till at length He came up to the highest Pitch of Wickedness; becoming a Seducer, and setting Himself at the Head of the Rebellion against God, doing infinite Mischief by his Diabolical Counsels; and instructing Princes in such Arts of cursed Policy, as ought to render his Name infamous to all Posterity.

I should farther observe, that, for a standing Memorial of God's Resentment for What had been done by the Ammonites and Moabites against his People of Israel; He made an Order that No Ammonite or Moabite should be permitted to enter into the Congregation of the Lord, till after the tenth Generation, because of What They had done in the Matter of Balamonite or Moabite shall not enter into the Congregation of the Lord, even to the tenth Generation.— Because They met You not with Bread and Water in the Way, when You came Vol. II. R 2 forth out of Egypt; and because They hired against Thee BALAAM the Son of BEOR, of Pethor of Mesopotamia, to curse Thee 2. The Meaning of which Law is, that, tho' an Ammonite, or a Moabite, should become a Convert to the Yewish Religion, and conform to Their Law and Ceremonies in every Respect, and become a compleat Member of the Yewish Church; yet He should not have the Privileges of Marrying with an Israelite, but should be debarred from it, He and his Posterity for ten Generations; Which is interpreted, in NEHEMIAH, to mean for ever b. Such was the Mark fet upon the Ammonites and Moabites for Their Offence in That Instance: And BALAAM'S Infamy was perpetuated by the fame Law, being expresly mention'd in it as the Man who had been bired to curse God's People. But enough hath been faid of the History of BA-LAAM; pass We on now,

² Numb. xxxi. 8. Josh. xiii. 22.

II.

To make fome Reflections upon it; as it may indeed afford Us plentiful Matter for it.

1. In the first place observe, that there is no Time of Man's Life wherein He may not be tempted, or may not be in Danger of falling

ing off from God and Goodness; Which should be an Argument to Us for constant Care and Watchfulness over Our Selves. Even Those Whom God hath favoured in a very particular Manner, and with Heavenly Gifts and Graces, are no more fecure than Others, if They take not proportionable Care. I fay Nothing of Solomon, or Others who might here be mention'd: BALAAM is the Instance now before Us, a Prophet of the most High God, and probably advanced in Years, fince his Fame had fpread wide and far. His Standing was not fo firm, but that an unlook'd for, and a powerful Temptation shook his Stedfastness, and brought Him down from the Heights He had attain'd in God's Favour, to a most forlorn and wretched Condition.

2. Observe farther, how dangerous a Thing it is, so much as to attend, or listen to the Charms of Wealth and Honour: For a Gift will sometimes blind the Wise, and a Bribe will beguile their Hearts. BALAAM look'd too much upon the golden Presents, and was too sensibly struck with the Sound of Honour and Preserments; Which made Him the less consider upon how slippery Ground He stood, and how dangerous an Assair That was to concern Himself in. Put it even in the best Light, and ima-

3. Observe thirdly, that when God sees Men leaning too far to ambitious or covetous Defires, and not wife enough to take fuch gentle Hints as might be fufficient to call Them back; He then leaves Them to purfue Their own Hearts Lusts, and lets Them follow Their own Imaginations. When He at first probibited BA-LAAM-from curfing the People, and from going with the Messengers, That was Indication sufficient. A wife Man, after That, would have absolutely refused to treat or parley with any Embassadors whatever upon the same Errand. But BALAAM had fet bis Heart upon the Bribes, and was become warm and eager in the Business. So God permitted the foolish Man

Man to go on as his Inclinations led, and to run his utmost Lengths of Folly and Madness. Since He would not retreat in Time, nor know when He had done enough (tho' God had given Him sufficient Intimations) He was at length permitted to proceed in his own Way, and to his own Destruction.

4. Observe next, how foolish a Part a Man acts, and how He exposes Himself to Contempt and Scorn, as well as Danger, when He takes upon Him to follow his own Way and Humour, and will not have God for his Guide. It was a weak Thing in BALAAM to ask God a fecond Time, after God had abundantly fignified his Pleasure: And It was still weaker, after He had received a fecond Answer discouraging Him from any Thought of curfing the People, for Him to go on with the Princes of Moab, and to offer Himfelf to BALAK, when He could do Him no Service. But, to shew fome good Inclination towards ferving BA-LAK, He resolved to make very free with Almighty God; tho' He had carried his irreverent Familiarity too far before. He was now come to BALAK, and Something he must do; tho' as to the main Thing, which was curfing the People, He knew very well that God had tied up bis Mouth. However, He, makes R 4 BALAK

264. The History and Character

BALAK prepare Altars and Sacrifices, and He would thereby try again and again, What God would fay to Him. A dangerous Thing thus to tempt, and trifle with the eternal God! Well: The Effect was, that, much against his Inclination, He was made to Bless the People whom He came to Curse; Which highly offended BALAK, and made the Prophet ridiculous in the Eyes of All there present. Yet This was not sufficient, but the soolish Man goes on to tempt God again, and with the same Success; till BALAK was perfectly inraged against the Prophet, and God let them Both see, that His Will should prevail, and not Theirs.

5. Observe farther, that, when once stubborn and wilful Men have run such Lengths in Opposition to the Will of Heaven; God then gives Them up to a reprobate Mind, and lets Them fall from one Degree of Wickedness to another. So it was in BALAAM. He had been provoking God, Time after Time, by the foolish, irreverent, and conceited Part He had been acting: And now God left Him to do a great deal worse; to be Counsellor to BALAK in as wicked Policy as Hell it self could invent; to seduce the Israelites into Fornication, and into the abominable Lewdnesses which went along with the Feasts and Revellings made in Honour of BAAL-PEOR. A Man who could give fuch Counfel as That, must have first shaken off all Honour, Respect, or Reverence for the Living God; Which indeed appears to have been BALAAM'S Case in the End.

of

6. One Thing more We may observe from his History, which is This; that the Spirit of God may fometimes vouchsafe to come upon a very wicked Man (so far as concerns the extraordinary Gifts) without reforming or influencing the same Man as to his Life and Morals, in the way of ordinary Operation. These two Things are very distinct, and may often be separate; as in BALAAM at That Time, and in Judas afterwards. BALAAM had undoubtedly the Gift of Prophecy, even while He was doing amis, and tempting Almighty God. For the Spirit of God came upon Him a, and made use of his Organs in the delivering feveral remarkable Prophecies fulfilled in their Season: As the rifing Strength, and growing Greatness of the Ifraelites: The Fall of Moab, and of Edom, which was to be effected in the Time of King DAVID: The Destruction of Amalek, which came to pass somewhat sooner, in K. SAUL's Time: The Overthrow also of the Kenites by the Hand of the Allyrians: And, What is more than than all, the Overthrow of the Affyrian Conquerors Themselves by the Hands of the Chittim, that is, of the Macedonians; which was executed under the Conduct of ALEXANDER the Great. These were great and valuable Prophecies, and most of them, besides their more immediate Reference, had a further View to the coming of CHRIST: And hence it is that this History of BALAAM deserved the more especial Notice, and is made to fill up fo many Chapters in Moses. But when We find fuch confiderable Prophecies delivered by the Mouth of an ungodly Man; give God the Glory, and let the Shame rest where it ought. The Prophecies are of standing Use in the Church; but the Prophet will be no Gainer by them: Our Lord Himself has fully interpreted this Case, in the Words following—Many will fay to Me in that Day, Lord, Lord, Have we not propheseed in thy Name? and in thy Name cast out Devils? and in thy Name done many wonderful Works? And then will I profess unto Them, I never knew You; depart from Me Ye that work Iniquity a.

^a Numb. xxiv. 2.

266 The History and Character, &c.

2 Matt. vii, 22, 23.

SERMON

The Appearance of SAMUEL, to SAUL at En-dor.

I SAM. XXVIII. 15, 16.

And Samuel Said to Saul, Why hast Thou disquieted Me, to bring Me up? And Saul answered, I am sore distressed; for the Philistines make War against Me, and God is departed from Me, and an-Swereth Me no more, neither by Prophets, nor by Dreams: Therefore I have called Thee, that Thou mayest make known unto Me What I shall do.

Then said Samuel, wherefore then dost Thou ask of Me, Seeing the Lord is departed from Thee, and is become thine Enemy?

HIS Chapter contains a most remarkable Paffage of facred Story: Melancholy indeed it is, but entertaining withal; and, when confidered in all its Views, highly

King SAUL is here introduced, instructive.

268 The Appearance of SAMUEL,

not in his Glory and Splendor, as when first called to the Throne of Israel, but in his Decline of Life, and his most deplorable Circumstances, which his many and grievous Transgreffions had brought Him into. Vengeance, which had long hovered and waited, now advanced with large and quick Strides, and his Fate drew on a-pace. He perceived it, and was very fenfibly affected with it. One cannot express, nor indeed conceive, the Pains and Agonies He must then have felt in his He had abandoned God for fome Time, and He was now fadly fenfible that God had abandon'd Him: Yet He had a great Defire to confult Him once again, and to obtain a kind Answer from Him in his Day of Distress. He put on the outward Garb of a Devotee, while his Heart was still hard as ever, and his Mind not changed. His present Fears, rather than any Thing of true Penitence, rouzed Him up, and made Him have Recourse to God; prepared at the same Time, if God should not anfwer, to make his next Refort to a Sorceres, and by Her to come at SAMUEL's Ghost.

But first He applies to God. The Philistines bore hard upon Him at that Time with a formidable Army, and so near to Him that there was but a Valley between Them and

Him;

Him; whereupon He was greatly distress'd. In such pressing Exigency, He attempted every Method He could think of (by Dream, or by Urim, or by Prophesy) to obtain some instructive Answer from God: But God would not hear Him, nor take the least Notice of Him, knowing Him still to be the same wicked Man as before; afflicted indeed, but not more humble; sorrowful, but not penitent, nor at all changed in the inward Man.

SAUL, thus finding Himfelf repulsed and rejected, like a distracted Man resolved to struggle with his Fate to the utmost, and to run any Lengths of Madness. Tho' God had deferted Him, yet He was weak enough to imagine that SAMUEL however (that is, the Ghost of Samuel; for He had been dead about four Years before) might be prevailed upon to listen to Him, and to return Him a kind Anfwer. But in Order to come at SAMUEL, He repairs to a Sorceress, a Woman of En-Dor, skill'd in Magick Art, and fam'd for conjuring up Ghosts (as the World believed) by her Sorceries, or Enchantments. It is not material here to enquire into the Mysteries of that Art, or whether it ever hath, or can perform fo much as it pretends to. It is fufficient that Fame fo reported of That Woman, and SAUL believed it; and the Woman, trusting to her Art, undertook the Thing: But God Himself, as it seems, interposed, and both conducted and govern'd the whole Transaction. There hath been great Variety of Sentiments among the Learned, and very different Accounts have been given, of this samed Adventure.

270 The Appearance of SAMUEL,

- I. I will therefore endeavour to fettle what I take to have been the Truth of the Case. And,
- II. Proceed to the practical Use and Application of it.

I.

Some have thought that there was Nothing more in it than Trick and Legerdemain, whereby a cunning Woman imposed upon SAUL's Credulity; making Him believe that she saw an Apparition, when she really saw None; at the same Time contriving that a Voice should be heard speaking unto SAUL in such Manner, and in such Words, as are related in that Chapter.

But this Opinion is highly improbable. For, if the Woman had the fole conducting of That Affair, intending only to impose upon SAUL, she would most undoubtedly have contrived to make the pretended SAMUEL'S Answer as

That for her Own Sake especially; for Fear of offending SAUL, and to fave her own Life, as well as to procure from Him the larger Gratuity. She would never have told Him (she durst not have told Him) that He Himself should be shortly slain, and his Sons with Him, and that the Host of Israel should be delivered into the hand of the Philistines; as we read Verse the 19th. Indeed, the whole Turn of SAMUEL's Speech, in this Chapter, is too rough and ungrateful, too grave and solemn, I may add also, too full of Truth and Reality, to have been owing only to her Contrivance, or Invention.

For It must be observed farther, that What was here spoken as from Samuel, was really prophetick, and was punctually fulfilled a few Days after. Here were Things foretold, which neither the Woman Her self, nor even her Familiar Spirit could certainly have foreseen. None but God Himself could have revealed the Secret. And how unlikely is it that God should make use of this Sorceres as a Prophetes, and should give Her the Honour of revealing his Counsels; at the same time concurring with Her in the Imposition put upon Saul, making Him believe that Samuel appeared and talk'd, when there was no Samuel there.

272 The Appearance of SAMUEL,

For these Reasons, we may presume to think and judge, that the Matter here related was not all a meer Juggle or Contrivance of an artful Woman, but Something more. There was most certainly an Apparition in the Case, either of SAMUEL's Ghost, or of Some Other Spirit personating SAMUEL. And here again Criticks are much divided, Which to chuse. Upon confidering this Matter very carefully, with the Reasons offered on both Sides, I incline to think that SAMUEL really appeared, that is, SAMUEL's Ghost; not by any Power of Inchantment, but by God's Direction and Appointment, for a Rebuke to SAUL, and in the Way of Punishment to Him for His great Prefumption in doing What He did. For the Meffage, thus brought Him, was exceeding rough and fevere; greatly added to the Load of his Misfortunes, and enhanced the Weight of his Troubles. The Reasons for this Interpretation are as follow.

I. This Method of proceeding is very conformable to What God had been pleased to do before, in other Cases of like Nature. As, when King BALAK had Recourse to Sorceries and Divinations, in Hopes to procure some Relief, or fair Promises at least from them, God Himself interposed, and so over-ruled BALAAM, and all his Divinations, that K. BALAK could obtain no favourable Answer from them, but quite the Reverse.

all

In like Manner, when King AHAZIAH had fent to confult BAALZEBUB, the Demon of Ekron, to know whether He should recover of the Sickness He then lay under, hoping, no doubt, to obtain a Favourable Answer there, as probably He might have done; God Himfelf took care to anticipate the Answer by Elijah the Prophet, who assured the Messengers, meeting Them by the Way, that Their Master Ahaziah should not recover, but should surely dieb.

Thus probably was it in the Case of Saul: When He was in Hopes of a kind Answer from Samuel, and, it is likely, would have had a very savourable one from some pretended Samuel, some Demon in his Shape, if the wretched Woman could have raised such a One by her Sorceries; God was pleased to disappoint both the Sorceres and Him, by sending the true Samuel with a true and faithful Message, and quite contrary to what the Woman or Saul had expected; Which so consounded and disorder'd Him, that He in-Vol. II.

Numb. xxiii.

b 2 Kings i.

274 The Appearance of SAMUEL,

stantly fell down into a Swoon, and could no longer bear up against the bitter Agonies of his Mind.

2. This Interpretation is plain and natural, and least forced of any, agreeing well with the Words of the Text. The Story is here told in fuch a Way as One would expect to find, upon the Supposition it really was SAMUEL. It is faid, that the Woman faw SAMUEL, The cried out, &c 2. And that Saul perceived that it was SAMUEL^b. How could He perceive it, if it was not fo? Or why is it faid, that He perceived it, rather than that He imagined, or supposed so? In the Sequel of the Narrative, it is added, SAMUEL faid unto SAULC; and again, Then faid SAMUEL d; which would not be true, if it were only a personated SAMUEL, a Familiar in SAMUEL's Shape: And It is strange that the Text should thus word it, if SAMUEL were not really there. It is as plainly faid here, that SAMUEL appeared and talk'de; as it is elsewhere said that MosEs and ELIAS. appeared and talk'd with our Bleffed Saviourf So that if we confider the Letter of the Text, and the most obvious and natural Construction of. it it

^a I Sam. xxviii. 12. b —ver. 14.

e -ver. i5.

⁻ver. 15.

d —ver. 16.
e —ver. 12, 14, 15, 16.
f Matt. xvii. 3.

it (which We should not depart from, without the greatest Necessity) We shall be obliged to confess, that the Apparition was really SAMU-EL, and No Other.

3. This Construction is very ancient, the most ancient of any; and seems indeed to have been the general Persuasion of the fewish Church, long before the Coming of Christ.

The Author of the Book of Ecclesiasticus lived about 300 Years before CHRIST, within 100 Years, or less, of the last Prophet MALA-CHI. He was a confiderable Man in his Time, and as likely to know the true Sense of Scripture, and to give the general Sentiments of the Yewish Church, as Any Man of that Age. What He thought of this Matter which We are now upon, may be there feen, where, fpeaking of SAMUEL, He fays thus: After his Death He prophesied, and shewed the King his End, and lift up his Voice from the Earth in Prophecy, to blot out the Wickedness of the People a. This Author plainly enough supposed, that it was SAMUEL Himself who appeared in Person, and prophefied to King SAUL.

The Greek Translators of the Old Testament, who lived not long after that Time, Vol. II. S 2 were a Ecclef. xlvi. 20.

276 The Appearance of SAMUEL,

were in the same Persuasion; as appears by an additional Note which They inserted in the xth Chapter of the first Book of Chronicles, where They say, that Samuel the Prophet gave the Answer to King Saul, when He enquired of the Sorceress 2.

In the same Sentiments was Josephus the Jewish Historian, who lived in the Apostles Times; and thus thought Many of the earliest Christian Fathers. So that This Construction of the Text is certainly very ancient, and for a long Time pass'd current: Nor do I see any sufficient Reason why it should be rejected. But because later Criticks have some slight Things to object, which have been thought material; I shall briefly consider What those Objections are which have moved Them to depart from the Letter, and from the ancient Construction.

I. They object, that the Text speaks of bringing up Samuel as it were out of the Ground; whereas, if it had been Samuel, He should rather have come down from Heaven.—But This Objection is no more against the Supposition of it's being Samuel's Ghost, than against the supposing it to be any other Spirit whatever: For We have Reason to believe, that even Evil Spirits have not their Dwelling under Ground, but in the Air rather; and the Devil therefore is stiled, in the New Testament, The Prince of the Power of the Air a. But the true Reason why SA-MUEL is represented as being brought up, is, because his Body was under Ground, to which his Soul was still conceived to bear a Relation; and it was upon this chiefly, that the popular prevailing Notion of all Separate Souls being in the Heart of the Earth, was founded: Which popular Notion, as it obtained among the Yews, and is often alluded to in the Language of Scripture, adapting it felf to vulgar Capacities, it is no Wonder that the Relation of this Apparition of SAMUEL should be accommodated thereto: So that Nothing can be concluded, in this Case, merely from the Manner in which SA-MUEL is faid to come up.

2. But it is further objected, that the Apparition here in the Person of SAMUEL, complain's to SAUL, of being disquieted or disturbed by Him: And It is thought not likely, that the Rest of God's Saints should be liable to be disturbed by Inchantments, or any Power of Witches, or Devils.-Very true; neither the Sorceress nor all the Powers of Hell could have given any S' 2 Disturbance

278 The Appearance of SAMUEL,

Disturbance to his peaceful Ghost: But God Almighty, with whom the Spirits of just Men made perfect dwell, might please to send SA-MUEL upon that Occasion, to deliver the Message from Him: And as SAUL's Presumption and Rashness was the Occasion of the whole Thing, He deferved a Reproof for What He had done: And what can One better call it, than difquieting, and disturbing the Repose of SAMUEL, and bringing Him out from his Rest, which SAUL is faid to have done, because He occasioned the doing it? Nevertheless, SAMUEL, to be fure, thought it no Trouble to come upon God's Errand, and to execute the Divine Commands; tho' it was proper to rebuke SAUL for his Part in it, and to speak of that Affair after a natural Way, and in Conformity to common Apprebensions.

3. But It is further objected, that It is hard to give a Reason why God, Who had resuscit to answer Saul either by Dreams, or by Urim, or by Prophets, should at length vouchfase to answer Him in such a Way as This, and by the Mediation of a wicked Sorceress.—But as to this Matter, if the Fact be true, It is not necessary for Us to assign the Reason for God's Dispensations: Be That as it will, It is very certain certain that God did interpose and conduct that whole Affair, as I before remark'd; otherwise there could not have been so plain and so true a Prediction of Things to come. But it may be easy to account for God's answering SAUL in this Way, as it was exposing and afflicting Him more severely than in any other, after He had richly deserved it: And God might hereby shew his prevailing Power even over Inchantments and Charmers; that, when vain Men attempt even to go to Hell for Counsel, He will meet Them and baffle Them even there.

4. But it is still further objected, that the Predictions of the Apparition, under the Name of Samuel, were not true, and therefore could not be Samuel's.—This Objection is to the Purpose, and would be decisive, if it were just: But the Things foretold were exactly verified, and the Event answered to the Prophecy in every Particular: Only It is observed, that the Things came not to pass till four or five Days after, whereas the Prediction seems to limit the Time to the next Day; for It says, To Morrow, shalt Thou and thy Sons be with Mea. But then again it must be acknowledged, and is acknowledged by the Best Criticks, that the Word which we render in English, To Morrow, may as well be rendred, Very shortly, which it really signifies in this Place.

S 4

25

5. Well, but is it not faid, To Morrow shalt Thou and thy Sons be with Me? Was Saul then, so wicked a Man, to go after Death to the same Blessed Place with righteous Samuel?—No, nor is it likely upon the other. Supposition, that so good a Son as Jonathan should fare no better in another State, than so bad a Father: But, in Truth, the Text determines Nothing at all of the State of Einther after Death. All that is meant by the Words, Thou shalt be with Me, is, Thou shalt die, Thou shalt be as I am, that is, dead, and in the Regions of Separate Spirits; and so it proved.

I have now run thro' the most considerable Objections which have been pleaded against interpreting the Words, of Samuel Himself, that is, of Samuel's Ghost, as I interpret Them: But none of those Objections seem to be of Weight sufficient to persuade Us to depart from the Letter, and the most ancient Construction. I conclude therefore, as before, that it was Samuel Himself Who appeared and prophesied; not called up by that wretched Woman, or her Demons, but sent thither by God to rebuke SAUL's Madness, in a most affecting and mortifying Way; and to deter all Others from ever applying to Witches or Demons for Assistance, when refused Comfort from God.

II.

Having thus fettled the Sacred Story, I shall now proceed to the Practical Use and Application of it. For indeed I would not have set so light either by your Time or my own, as to have chosen a Subject of mere Curiosity, to entertain the Ear only, without improving the Heart. But I take this Part of Scripture-History to be highly instructive and edifying; and therefore well deserving our close and serious Meditations.

I. First, observe how careless and unthinking, Men are apt to be in their Prosperity, and till the Hour of Distress comes. SAUL was a Man of as much Coldness and Indisference in Religion, as Any Man could be; swayed, for the most Part, by his own Humour and Vanity. He never thought of consulting God, or asking Directions, all the Time He was persecuting righteous DAVID from City to City, hunting hunting Him thro' every Quarter of the Kingdom, and driving Him out into a strange Land. He never thought of confulting God, when He barbarously undertook to murder fourscore and five of the Lord's Priests, innocent Men, and who had deferved no Ill at his Hands. But now at last, when He perceived his own Life to be in Danger, as if That alone were precious in God's Sight, or That alone worthy of the Divine Care and Notice; then He began to apply to God, and pretended a Respect and Reverence for Him, tho' all the while his Heart was far from Him. Danger and Distress will sometimes frighten and dismay a hardned Sinner, and That is all: For, It is not any relenting Sorrow for his Sins which troubles Him; but the Sense of What He apprehends of the Pain and the Destruction just falling upon Him.

282 The Appearance of SAMUEL,

2. Observe, Secondly, that in such Cases, generally, God very justly turns away his Ear, and will vouchsafe no Answer in the ordinary Way, to such grievous Offenders. Of Such as These it is that God says, in the Proverbs, They shall call upon Me, but I will not answer; They shall seek Me early, but They shall not find Me. And good Reason why; Because He had before called, and They refused; He had stretched out his Hand, and No Man regarded; They had fet at Nought all his Counfel, and would none of his Reproof a. There is a certain Degree of Forbearance and Long-suffering, beyond Which even the Divine Goodness will not extend. Provocations may proceed to fuch a Height, as to leave no Room for farther Mercy. Patience long-abused will at last give Place to Vengeance. God will then withdraw his Grace, and lock up his Favours, deferting the impenitent hardned Wretch, and abandoning Him to the wild Pursuit of his own Inventions. This is a Matter of dreadful Confideration to all inveterate, impenitent Offenders: And yet it should not be a Discouragement to Any Man against repenting; Because the very Disposition, or Inclination to Repentance is a hopeful Symptom, and is a promifing Argument in his Favour, that his Day of Grace is not past, and that it is not yet too late to return.

3. Observe further, from the History before laid down, how miserable, how melancholy a Thing it is, for a Man to have finn'd to such a Degree as to be entirely abandon'd by God, and to have the best Friend in the World become.

284 The Appearance of SAMUEL,

become his Enemy. There is no Condition fo disconsolate, so deplorable as That is: Let Him fit down to invent and contrive ever fo long; there is no Expedient that can help Him, no Contrivance but what will turn against Him, and will increase his Misery, instead of relieving it. What could unhappy SAUL do in his pressing Difficulties! God would not affist Him, and no One else could. He might think of his Court-Flatterers, or of his ablest Counfellors, and of his Troops and Armies: But Nothing in this World could give Him Comfort, or afford Him Relief. Then He thought of dead SAMUEL, whom He had often despifed and flighted while alive: And, to shew how a finking Man will lay hold on every Twig, He was foolish enough to imagine, that-He might fleal a Favour from God's Servant SAMUEL, when He could not obtain one from God Himself. He made the Experiment, and in a very odd Way, as you have heard; and how at length it ended, I have described at large. Let this fad Example convince Every Man who attends to it, how impossible, bow impracticable it is, to lay any Scheme of Happiness which shall at all answer, without first taking Care to make God his Friend: Without

This,

This, all our Toils and Endeavours come to Nothing: It is but building in the Air, or labouring for the Wind. What can a Man do, when God becomes his Enemy, or but ceases to be his Friend! Can He hide Himfelf from His Presence! Can He run beyond the Reach of His Power! If He could climb up into Heaven, God is there; and if He goes down into Hell, even there also will his Hand find Him, and his Vengeance pursue Him. Search the whole Universe for a Moment's Protection, and it is all to no Purpose: For all is in God's Hands; to Him all Creatures bow, and every Element submits to his Will and Pleasure. The Sum then is, that the only Way to Happiness, is, to strike up an Interest, a League of Amity with God, and never to swerve from it, for any Temptation, any Allurement whatfoever. Make but Him your Friend, and in Him you have All; as on the other hand, by lofing Him, you are fure to lofe every Thing that is valuable together with Him.

The practical Conclusion from the Whole is, that We learn to set a true Value upon God's Favour and Friendship, and that We use our utmost Endeavours both to procure and to preserve it: And, as Nothing will do it but a good and holy Life, and That certainly will; We may from hence infer the absolute, indispensable Necessity of making Religion our first and principal Care, as it is our last and our greatest Concern. So much for the Use and Application of this samous Part of Sacred History.

286 The Appearance of SAMUEL,

4. There is a flighter, incidental Use, which might have been taken Notice of by the Way, which yet I pass'd over, and shall here but just mention; and That is, the Argument to be drawn from this Instance, to prove that Souls exist separate from the Body after Death; and do not only exist, but are awake and active, and have their intellectual Powers in Perfection. But as That may be abundantly proved from other Places of Scripture less liable to Dispute, We need not insist much upon This. Indeed I cannot fay that there is, in the whole Scripture, any plain and unexceptionable Instance of a departed Soul's appearing and talking upon Earth, if This be not One: Moses once, and ELIAs came down and talk'd with our Bleffed Saviour; but whether in the Body, or out of the Body, We cannot tell, God knoweth: However, the Question, as to Separate Souls existing and acting after Death, does by no Means depend upon any Examples of Apparitions, but is fufficiently proved by many and clear Testimonies of Sacred Writ, as might be shewn at large, were this the proper Place for it: But I design'd only a short Hint of this Matter, that I might not seem entirely to have pass'd it over thro' Forgetfulness, or Haste.

And now I should beseech You, after this short Interruption, to let your Thoughts return to the principal Thing of all; namely, the Necessity of looking after, and procuring God's Friendship by a good and holy Life: Which, that we may all seriously think of, and with good Effect, God of his Mercy grant, thro' Jesus Christ our Lord!

A

SUMMARYVIEW

OF THE

DOCTRINE

O F

JUSTIFICATION.

Vol. II.

T

, P A

A

Summary View

OFTHE

DOCTRINE, &c.

HE Doctrinal Points of Regeneration and Renovation have been lately brought upon the Carpet; and I have, upon another Occafion, taken the Liberty to throw in some sew Thoughts upon them. Now, the Subject of Justification being nearly allied to the Former, and seeming also to want some farther illustrating, by Way of Appendage or Supplement to the Points before-mention'd; My present Design is to give you a summary View of it, by considering,

Vol. II.

T 2

I. What

- I. What the Name imports.
- II. What the Thing contains.
- III. How it stands distinguished from Renovation and Regeneration.
- IV. What are the concurring Causes on God's Part, and on Man's, to produce it, and to preserve it.
- V. What are the common Extremes which Many have been apt to run into on this Head, and how they may be avoided.

I.

The First Article is the Name, which ought to be defined before the Thing; and, in Order thereto, must be first distinguished.

There appears to be sufficient Ground in Scripture for distinguishing Justification into active and passive: For, as the Name Regeneration, when denoting an Act or Grant of God, bears an active Sense, and when denoting a Privilege received by Us, bears a passive Sense; such also is the Case with Respect to the Name Justification. It means either God's Grant, for it is God that justifies 2; or it means

Our

² Rom. iii. 25, 26, 30. iv. 5. viii. 33. Gal. iii. 8. Tit. iii. 7. Rom. iv. 25. v. 18. N. B. In the two last Texts, the Word for Justification is Δικαίωσις, which bears an active Sense.

Our Privilege, Endowment, Possession holden of God b, as We are faid to be justified by Him. Justification always supposes two Parties, One to give, and Another to receive; whether without any AEt at all on the Receptive Side, as in the Case of Infants, or whether accompanied with receptive Acts, as in the Case of Adults, who may be properly faid to accept and affent to, as well as to receive or enjoy. God, the supreme Law-giver may be considered either as a Rector and Governour contracting with Man, and laying down the Terms of his Covenant; or as a Judge, giving Sentence according to the Terms laid down. Correspondently, Man may be confidered either as accepting the Terms upon his entring into Covenant; or as pleading them afterwards at the Bar of Justice, at the Divine Tribunal. There is no more Difference between those two feveral Views of the fame Thing, than there is between the isluing out a general Grant for the Benefit of All Perfons .Who shall duly and properly accept it; and the actual conferring the Benefit of that Grant upon the Persons so accepting: But Some have chosen one View for the easier and b Διαzιωσύνη, which may as well be rendred Juftification as Righteoufness, appears to mean our Righteoufness, which We hold of God's Grace by Faith in Christ Jesus, in the following Texts; Rom. i. 17. iii. 5, 21, 22. ix. 30, 31. x. 3. 1 Cor. i. 30. 2 Cor. v. 21. Philip. iii. 9. 2 Pet. i. 1. Matt. vi. 33.

T 3 apter

apter explaining (as They conceived) the Nature of Justification; and Some have preferred the other, for the like Reasons c. The general Way has been to understand Justification as a Kind of Law-Term, expressing a judicial Transaction. Protestants of every Denomination have set Themselves to defend it d: And even Romanists also, Many of Them, have readily submitted to it c. So that the Word Justification, in this View, and in the active Sense, will signify God's pronouncing a Person just and his accepting Him as such ; while, in the passive Sense, it will signify Man's being so declared, and thereupon accepted into

new

353.

Bishop Andrews's Serm. p. 76. Field, p. 291. Bishop Bull, p. 411, &c. Frid. Spanham. Fil. Tom. iii. p. 276. Vitringa, Observat. Sacr. Lib. iv. c. x. §. vi, &c. Tom. i. p. 346. Buddeus. Instit. Theol. p. 951. Deylingius. Obs. Sacr. Tom. iii. 561.

e Vid. Gul. Forbes, Consid. Modest. p. 98. edit. 2.

f Justificatio evangelica quæ Deum Auctorem respicit, desiniri potest, Asio Dei qua pœnitentem absolvit, propter Merita Christivia Fide accepta & applicata. Fogg. Theolog. Speculat. Schema, p. 427.

[&]quot;It is indeed to be granted, that Justification importeth, "not making of a Man righteous, but declaring Him and ac"counting Him righteous, treating Him, and dealing with Him
"as righteous: All This is true; and yet I will not grant that "it is so properly understood to be the Act of God as sitting "upon the Throne of Judgment (whether according to Mercy, "or Justice) as the Act of God contracting with Man for ever"lasting Life, upon Condition of submitting to the Covenant of
"Grace, and the Terms of it." Thorndike, Epil. B. ii. p. 40.
Conf. Pufendorf. jus fecial. divin. p. 144, 166, 172, 319, 349, new Privileges, and his enjoying the Benefits thereofs. So much for the Name.

IÎ.

I am next to confider What the Thing granted and received, really is, or What it contains.

Here We are to observe, not barely What the Word it self strictly and grammatically signifies, but what it stands for, and must stand for as made use of in this particular Case, or in such and such Circumstances. The Evangelical Notion of it must be govern'd by Evangelical Principles: It is a complex Notion which takes in more Ideas than the Name would necessarily signify in different Circumstances.

considerable Part, or Ingredient of Evangelical Justification: Not that the Name, abstractedly considered, imports it, but the Nature of the Thing, in this Case, requires it. Had our First Parents preserved their Innocence entire, They would have been thereupon justified as inherently and perfectly just, needing no Pardon: But Men in a lapsed State, being All of Them more or less Sinners, cannot be accepted as Persons who have had no Sin, but as Persons discharged from it. I need not here fay, how, or upon what Account; because That will be considered hereafter in its proper Place: But in the mean Time it is felf-evident, that the Justification of a Sinner must include Remission of Sin. I may add, that fuch Remission of Sin properly fignifies a Discharge from the Penalty due to it; not from the Blame it carries with it; except it be in such a Sense as ZACHA-RIAS and ELISABETH were pronounced blameless h; for so all good Christians, living up to the Gospel-Terms, and persevering to the End, will be pronounced blameless at the last Day: And so are They esteem'd of here, in the mean Seafon, by God who fearches the Hearts i.

T 4 who

s Si confideretur (Justificatio) cum Respectu ad Conditionem Justificati, est Mutatio status, quem Respissens obtinet erga Deum, unde cessante reatu, propter Merita Christi viva Fide applicata, non est Condemnationi obnoxius. Fogg. Theol. Specul. p. 427, 428.

2. But, besides Remission of Sin, a Right and Title to Life eternal, but sounded only upon Promise k, is included in the Gospel-Notion of Justification: Not that the bare Force of the Word requires it (for a Man might be properly h Luke i. 6.

i Vid. Grab. in annotatis ad Bulli Op. p. 414. Edit. ult. it Debitor enim factus est [Deus] non aliquid a Nobis accipi-

Le Debitor enim factus est [Deus] non aliquid a Nobis accipiendo, sed quod Ei placuit promittendo. Aliter enim dicimus Homini debes Mibi quia dedi Tibi; & aliter dicimus, debes Mibi quia promisisti Mibi.— Illo ergo Modo possumus exigere dominum nostrum, ut dicamus, redde quod promissti, quia secimus quod jussis: Et hoc Tu fecisti, quia Laborantes juvisti. Augusiin. Serm. clviii. de verbis Apost. Rom. viii. p. 762. Tom. v. Edit. Bened.

faid to be justified, Who is acquitted from Penalty, the not intitled to a Reward) but We know what the Scripture-Promises are; and that a Discharge from Penalty hath thereby a fure Title to Rewards connected with it: Therefore Evangelical Justification comprehends according to the full Notion of it, not only a Title to Pardon, but a Title to Salvation also, a Title to Both for the Time being!

3. To These some learned Divines have added the Sanctification of the Holy Spirit m, as a third Ingredient, to compleat the Nature or Notion of Justification: But that Persuasion is scarce tenable, unless We first qualify it with proper Distinctions. If by Sanctification We understand Renovation of the inward Man, That has no Place in the Justification of Infants; besides that even in Adults it is rather a Qualification for the Privilege, than the Privilege itself: But if by Sanctification of the Spirit be meant only the Baptismal Unction, or that Sealing of the Spirit n, which goes along with all valid, and of course with all saving Baptism o; That indeed must necessarily be supposed in all Baptismal Justification, as a Part n See Bingham XI. 1, 6.

¹ Vid. Bull. exam. cenfur. ad Animadv. iii. p. 537, 533. ^m Vid. Gul. Forbes, Confid. Modest. p. 118, & c.

[.] See Regeneration stated, &c. p. 28, 29.

Part of it, or an Ingredient in it; inasmuch as Justification cannot be conceived without some Work of the Spirit in conferring a Title to Salvation. In This Sense, Every Person justified is ipso Facto sealed and consecrated by the Spirit of God. But the Truth of this Matter will more fully appear under another Head in the Sequel.

III.

Having thus briefly confidered what Justification is, and what it contains; I proceed to observe how it is distinguish'd from Renovation and Regeneration, to Both which it is indeed very nearly allied.

renewing of the Heart and Mind^p; the same that commonly goes under the Name of inward Santtification of the Spirit. This is necessarily pre-supposed, in some Measure or Degree, with respect to Adults, in their Justification; because without Holiness no Man shall see the Lord^q, no Man shall be entitled to Salvation; that is to say, no Man justified. But the Santtification and Justification are near allied; yet it does not prove that they are the same Thing, or that one is properly Part of the other.

P See Regeneration flated, &c. p. 12, &c. 9 Hebr. xii. 14.

other. An essential Qualification for any Office, Post, Dignity, or Privilege, must be supposed to go along with that Office, Post, &c. But still the Notions are very distinct, while the Things themselves are in Fact connected of. Course. So stands the Case between Sanctification and Justification: The One is a Capacity for fuch a Grant; the Other is the very Grant it Self: The One is an infused and inherent Quality, God's Work within us; the other an outward Privilege, or extrinsick Relation, God's gracious Act towards us. In short, Sanctification denotes the Frame of Mind, the holy Difposition; while Justification denotes the State which a Man is in with Respect to God, his Discharge from Guilt and Penalty, his Christian Membership, his heavenly Citizenship, his Gospel-Rights, Pleas, and Privileges.

Again: Sanctification is commonly underflood of the Mind, or Soul only; while Justification is of the whole Man. The Title which the Body hath to a future Resurrection or Redemption, is included in the very Notion of a justified Man.

It may be further noted, that Justification may be supposed, where Sanstification (according to the full Notion thereof) is not; as in the Case of Infants newly baptized: They are indeed indeed thereby fanctified in a certain Sense; but not in the Sense of a proper Renewal of Mind and Heart. These Considerations sufficiently mark out the Difference between Justification and Sanctification.

2. I am next to observe, how Justification differs from Regeneration. They differ but little as to the main Things; since the Grants made, and the Blessings conferred, are much the same in Both: But still there is some Difference, and that both notional and real.

So far as the main Things are the fame, They are however express'd under different Figures: For in Regeneration, God is considered as a Father begetting us into a new Life of Light, Blessings, and Privileges: But in Justification, He is considered either as a Proprietor making over the same Grants, or as a Judge giving savourable Sentence from the Throne of Mercy.

Another Difference is, that Regeneration, in the strict Sense, expresses no more than the first Admittance and Entrance into such and such Rights and Privileges; and therefore comes but once: But Justification is a Thing continued r during the whole Spiritual Life:

One

r Vid. Gul. Forbes, p. 261. Bulli Op. p. 437. And compare my Review of the Dostrine of the Eucharist, p. 325, 330, 345, 362.

One is giving and receiving Life; The Other is giving and receiving Growth and Increase.

A third Difference is, that Regeneration, in the stricter Sense's of that Name, may admit of the Distinction of Salutary, and not Salutary: Whereas Justification admits not of that Distinction at all, being falutary in the very Notion of it, as it imports a Right and Title to Salvation, for the Time being, on the Gospel-Terms.

A fourth Difference is, that Regeneration, once given and received, can never be totally lost, any more than Baptism, nor ever want to be reiterated, in the whole Thing t: But Justification may be granted and accepted, and take Place for a Time, and yet may cease afterwards, both totally and finally u. These several

see Regeneration stated, p. 18, 19, 27, 30. St. Austin followed the stricter Sense when He said: Simon ille Magus natus erat ex Aqua & Spiritu, Tom. ix. p. 169.

In another Place, He followed the larger Sense, which takes in Renovation to compleat the Notion of Regeneration confidered as falutary.

Qui natus est ex Deo habet Caritatem — videat si habeat Caritatem, & tunc dicat, natus sum ex Deo. — Habeat Caritatem; aliter non se dicat natum ex Deo. Augustin. Tom. iii. Part ii. p. 859.

Hence it appears, that, as the Word Faith sometimes signifies fimply Faith, and fometimes faving Faith, fo the Word Regeneration admits of the like twofold Meaning.

s Of the stricter and larger Sense of the Word Regeneration, t See Regeneration stated, &c. p. 9, 12, 16, 17, 26, 30.

"See Article XVIth. And Homily on good Works, p. 49.

Compare Bulli Op. p. 668. Augustan Conf. c. xi. Truman.

ral Articles of Difference sufficiently shew that the Names are not tantamount, but that they stand for Things different; similar in some Respects only, not in all.

IV.

Having confidered what Justification is, and how distinguish'd, I may now pass on to enquire into its constituent Causes, principal and less principal, efficient and instrumental, divine and buman, and the like: For there are feveral Causes, more or less contributing to the Justification of a Person; that is, to the making Him a fure Title to Salvation for the Time being.

1. God the Father is here to be confidered as Principal, as He is the Head and Fountain of all. Of That there can be no Question, and therefore I need not fay more of it: The divine Philanthropy is of prime Confideration in the whole Thing.

2. In the next Place, God the Son is here to be confidered as the procuring and meritorious

Cause

Great Propit. p. 153, 178. Heylin. Histor. Quinquartic. Part i.

P. 17, 28, 33, 86. Part iii. p. 31, &c.
The Sense of our Church on this Head, is manifest from this fingle Confideration; that She looks upon it as certain by God's . Word, that all Children baptized are so far justified, inasmuch as if They die before actual Sin, They are undoubtedly faved. Now it cannot be doubted but that many Who have been baptized in Infancy, may, and do fall afterwards, both totally and finelly: Therefore our Church must of Consequence allow and suppose, that Persons once justified may totally and finally perish.

Cause of Man's Justification, both by his active and passive Obedience. This, though it may be disputed by such as will dispute any Thing, or every Thing, yet seems to be generally admitted among the sober Divines of all the great Divisions of Christians.

3. In the third Place, God the Holy Ghost is here to be considered as the immediate, efficient Cause: For Proof of which, We need go no farther than our Lord's own Words, that, except one be born of Water and of the Spirit, He cannot enter into the Kingdom of God x; which is as much as to say, He cannot have a Title to Salvation, cannot be justified. Neither need we here put in the Restriction, ordinarily so far as the Spirit is concern'd: His immediate Agency must be supposed, in all Cases, and upon every Supposition.

4. After the three Divine Persons, principally concurring and co-operating in Man's Justification, We may next pass on to the subordinate Instruments: And here come in the Ministry, the Word, and the Sacraments V; but more

w See Gul. Forbes Consider. Modest. p. 67, &c. Thorndike Epil. Book ii. p. 254, &c. Pufendorf. Jus Fecial. p. 187.

x John iii. 5. comp. 1 Cor. vi. 11. xii. 13. Tit. iii. 5, 6, 7.

y Sacramenta funt Media offerentia & exhibentia ex Parte Dei; Fides Medium recipiens & apprehendens ex Parte nostra. Gerbard. Loc. Comm. Part IV. p. 309.

bard. Loc. Comm. Part IV. p. 309.

Tantum dicimus, quemadmodum Files est quasi Manus nostra, qua more particularly the Sacrament of Baptism; which perhaps may here deserve a large and distinct Consideration, as it has been too often omitted, or but perfunctorily mention'd, in Treatises written upon the Subject of Justification.

If We look either into the New Testament, or into the ancient Fathers, We shall there find that the Sacrament of Baptism, considered as a Federal Rite or Transaction between God and Man, is either declared or supposed the ordinary, necessary, outward Instrument in God's Hands of Man's Justification: I say, an Instrument in God's Hands, because it is certain, that in that facred Rite, God Himself bears a Part 2, as Man also bears His; and that in both Sacraments (as our Church teaches) God embraces Us, and offereth Himself to be embraced by Us2. According to the natural Order of Precedency, the authorized Ministry is first in Confideration b; the Word next; then bearing, and believing with a penitent Heart, and lively Faith; after That, Baptism, and therein the first solemn and certain Reception of Justification.

b Rom. x. 13, 14, 15. Tit i. 3.

qua Nos quærimus & accipimus; Sic Verbum & Sacramenta esse quasi Manus Dei, quibus Is nobis offert & confert quod Fide a nobis petitur & accipitur. Vossius de Sacram. Vi & Esse. Op. Tom. vi. p. 252.

² See Review of the Dottrine of the Eucharift, p. 16, 17, &c. ³ Homily on the Common Prayer and Sacraments, p. 270.

tion, which is afterwards continued by the same lively Faith, and the Use of the Word, and of the other Sacrament.

Now, as to Baptism, and its being, ordinarily, the necessary outward Mean or Instrument of Justification, the immediate and proximate Form and Rite of Conveyance; That will be easily made appear from many clear Texts of the New Testament, as also from the concurring Verdict of Antiquity, the best Interpreter of the facred Writings.

First. The Texts I shall here take in their Order. He that believeth, and is baptized, shall be faved; but He that believeth not, shall be damnede. Here the Word faved amounts to the fame Thing in the main with justified, being opposed to condemned: And it is farther observable, that the believing here must be understood of a lively Faith; yet That alone is not faid to fave, or justify, but with the Addition of Baptism, or in and with the Use of Baptism: For, whatever some may please to teach of Faith only as justifying, the exclusive Term, most certainly, is not to be understood in Opposition, either to the Work of the Father, or of the Son, or of the Holy Ghost; or to the standing Means of Conveyance which They have VOL. II. chosen.

chosen. The warmest Contenders for Faith alone, are content to admit that the exclusive Term, alone, is opposed only to every Thing else on Man's Part in justifying, not to any Thing on God's Part: Now, I have already noted that Baptisin is an Instrument in God's Hand, who bears his Part in it; and therefore Baptism, in this View, relates to God's Part in justifying, and not to Man's. It is not indeed faid in the Text just cited, that He who is not baptized shall be damned, as it is said of Him, who believeth not. God reserves to Himself a Liberty of dispensing in that Case. At the same time, He has made no Promise, or Covenant to justify Any One without the Use of Baptism: So that still Baptism must be look'd upon as the ordinary standing Instrument of Justification on God's Part; and We have no certain Warrant for declaring any one justified independently of it.

The next remarkable Text is, except one be born of Water and of the Spirit, He cannot enter into the Kingdom of God, cannot fee the Kingdom of Godd. Where We may observe, that born again in the 2^d Verse, is interpreted of Baptism, (Sign and Thing signified) in the 5th; and the emphatical Word, cannot, is twice made Use of in That Case. What Room then is there left for pretending any direct and positive Promise from God to justify Any Man before, or without that ordinary Mean? Say that Faith is our Instrument for receiving Justification, which is saying enough; still Baptism must be God's Instrument, ordinarily, for applying or conferring it, in Virtue of what our Lord Himself, in that Place, has twice solemnly declared. But I pass on.

John iii. 3, 5. See Regeneration flated, &c. p. 3.

In the Second of the AEts, We read these Words of St. Peter to the Jews of That Time: Repent and be baptized Every One of You in the Name of Jesus Christ, for the Remission of Sins, and Ye shall receive the Gift of the Holy Ghoste. Now, it is to be noted, that true Repentance in such Case presupposes some Degrees of preparation was to intervene too, in Order to Remission, that is, in Order to Justification, and the Gift of the in-dwelling of the Holy Spirit of God.

So again in the Case of St. PAUL, at his Conversion to Christianity: He had been a true Believer from the Time when He said, Lord, what wilt Thou have me to dof? But He was not yet justified: His Sins remained in Vol. II. U2 Charge

[.] Acts ii. 38.

f Acts ix. 9.

20

Charge for three Days at least longer: For, it was so long before Ananas came to Him, and said, Arise and be baptized, and wash away thy Sins, calling on the Name of the Lords. Baptism was at length his grand Absolution, his Patent of Pardon, his Instrument of Justification granted Him from Above: neither was He justified till He received That Divine Seal, in as much as his Sins were upon Him till that very Time.

Pass We on to the Epistle to the Romans, where St. Paul says; know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his Death, (that is, into a Participation of the Death and Merits of Christ, thro' which also We die unto Sin) Therefore We are buried with Him by Baptism into Death in Baptism is the sink formal solemn Death unto Sin, in the plenary Remission of it; which comes to the same as to say, that there also commences our Justification entire: All before was but preparatory to it, as Conception is to the Birth.

The

h Rom. vi. 3, 4. See Wolfius in Loc.

Augustin, de Divers. Quest. ad Simplic. L. I. p. 89. Tom. VI.

Z Acts xxii. 16.

¹ Fiunt ergo Inchoationes quædam Fidei, Conceptionibus fimiles: Non tamen folum concipi, fed etiam nafei Opus est, ut ad Vitam perveniatur æternam.

The same St. PAUL says; By one Spirit are We All baptized into one Body k. Now, if We are first incorporated into the mystical Body of Christ by Baptism, it is manifest that We are there also first justified: For, no Man strictly belongs to Christ till He is incorporated; neither is Any One justified before He is incorporated, and made a Member of Christ, a Citizen of Heaven.

St. Paul also says; Ye are All the Children of God by Faith in Christ Jesus: For, as Many of You as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ! Words very observable, as plainly intimating, that ordinarily a Person is not made a Child of God by Faith, till that Faith is exerted in, and perfected by, Baptism.— Faith in Adults, is the Hand whereby They receive the Privilege of Adoption and Justification; while the Sacrament is the Hand whereby God dispenses it.

God is the Donour; and He can dispense the Grace to Some without Faith, as to Infants; and to Others without Baptism, as to Martyrs principally, and to Catechumens prevented by Extremities: But still the ordinary Rule is, first to dispense it upon a true and lively Faith, fealed with the Stipulations mutually pass'd in Baptisin.

^k 1 Cor. xii. 13. See my Review, &c. p. 367, &c. ¹ Gal. iii. 26, 27.

So again, We read in the Epistle to the Ephesians, as follows: Christ also loved the Church, and gave Himself for it; that He might sanctify and cleanse it with the washing of Water, by the Words if That is, by the Words used in the Form of Baptism, as St. Chrysostom interprets. If then Baptism is the ordinary Instrument whereby Christ cleanses the Members of his Church; by the same He must be supposed to justify Them; as cleansing and justifying are Words of like Import, in this Case, meaning the same with Remission of Sins, which is one great Part of Justification.

St. PAUL elsewhere speaks of his new Converts, as putting off the Body of the Sins of the Flesh by Christian Circumcision, that is, Baptism, buried with Christ in Baptism, and risen with Him thro' the Faith of the Operation of God,—having all their Trespasses forgiven Them o. What is This but saying, that They were justified,

* Chrysoftom in Loc. Tom. XI. p. 145. item Damascen. in Loc.

Op. Tom. II. p. 190.

m Ephef. v. 25, 26. Significatur heic omnino Baptismus, verbo junctus; tanquam Instrumentum Parisicationis. Wolfius in Loc. Compare Pearson on the Creed, Art. X. p. 368.

Coloff. ii. 11, 12, 13. See Wolfius in Loc. Wall. Hift. of Infant. Bapt. Part I. c. ii. Defence, p. 269, &c. Blackwall Sacr. Claticks, Tom. II. p. 189.

Thing is, at the same Time, said to be brought about by Faith p (which is indeed the Instrument of Reception on Man's Part, as Baptism is of Conveyance, on God's Part) but still That very Faith is supposed to be exerted in, and compleated by, Baptism, before it justifies, so far as it does justify.

I proceed to a noted Text in the Epistle to TITUS: Not by Works of Righteousness, which we have done, but according to his Mercy He saved us by the washing of Regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost — that being justified by his Grace, we should be made Heirs according to the Hope of eternal Life q. It is manifest, by comparing the three Verses together, that Baptism is here made the Mean thro' which, or the *In*frument by which, the Holy Spirit of God worketh Regeneration, Renovation, and Justification; and that Justification, the last named, is, in Order of Nature (tho' not in Order of Time) the last of the Three, as the Result of the two former, in the same Work of Grace, in the U 4 fame fame Federal Solemnity. It may be noted by the Way, that Baştifm, in this Text, is not confidered as a Work of Man, but as an Inftrument, Rite, or Federal Transaction between God and Man.

P Διὰ τῆς ἐνίςτως τῆς ἐνεργείας τῷ Θεῷ. Ea infertur Efficacia & Virtus Dei, que Fidem in Coloffenfibus procrearit, fimilis illi, qua Christum excitavit ex mortuis. Wolf. in Loc.

Text. De Baptismo hæc accipienda esse Patres crediderunt:

Nec aliter Interpretes recentiores tantum non Omnes. Wolfing ad Loc.

In the Epiftle to the Hebrews, we read thus: And having an High-Priest over the House of God, let us draw near with a true Heart, in full All rance of Faith, baving our Hearts sprinkled from an evil Conscience, and our Bodies washed with pure Water: Let us hold fast the Projession of our Faith 1, &c. In these few Words are pointed out the meritorious Caufe of our Yustification, express'd by the sprinkling, viz. with the Blood of Christ, in Allusion to the Blood of the ancient Sacrifices; the instrumental Moun of Conveyance, Baptifm, express'd by the washing of our Bodies; and the instrumental Mean of Reception; express'd by the Word Faith. The Merits of Christ, applied in Baptisin by the Spirit, and received by a lively Faith, compleat our Justification, for the Time being. I know not whether the Apostle's here laying so much stress upon our Bodies being wasked with pure Water, might not, among feveral other fimilar Confiderations drawn from the New Testament, lead the early FATHERS into a Thought Thought which They had, and which has not been so commonly observed; namely, that the Application of Water in Baptism secured as it were, or sealed the Body to an happy Resurrection: while the Spirit more immediately secured the Soul; and so the whole Man was understood to be spiritually cleansed, and accepted of God, in and by Baptisms. They had also the like Thought with respect to the Elements of the other Sacrament, as appointed by God for insuring the Body to an happy Resurrection along with the Soul to Whether that ancient Rationale of the two Sacraments be not, at least, as good as any modern Ones, I leave to be considered, and pass on.

St.

• The Thought is thus express'd by an eminent Father of the fecond Century:

Corpora enim nostra per Lawacrum illam quæ est ad Incorruptionem Unitatem acceperunt; Animæ autem per Spirstrum: Unde & utraque necessaria, cum utraque proficiunt ad Vitam Dei, &c. Irenæus L. I. c. xvii. p. 208. Edit. Bened. Compare Tertullian de Baptismo, c. iv. p. 225. De Anima, c. xl. p. 294.

Cyrill Hierofol. Catech. III. p. 41. Nazianzen Orat. XL. p. 641.

Hilarius Pict. in Matt. p. 660. Edit. Bened.

Nyssenus Orat. de Bapt. Christi, p. 369. Cyrill Alex. in Joann. L. II. p. 147.

Ammonius in Catena in Joann. p. 89. Damascen, de Fid. Orthodoxa, L. IV. c. ix. p. 260.

Irenæus, L. IV. c. xviii. p. 251. L. V. c. ii. p. 293, 294. Tertullian de Resurr. Carnis, c. viii. p. 330.

Cyrill Hierofol. Mystag. IV. p. 321.

Paschasius de Corp. & Sangu. Domini, c. xix. p. 1602.

St. PETER fays, Baptism doth also now save us; not the putting away of the Filth of the Flesh, but The Answer [Stipulation] of a good Conscience towards God, by the Resurrection of Jesus Christ u.-What I have hereupon to observe is that Baptism saves: That is, it gives a just Title to Salvation; which is the same as to say, that it conveys Justification. But then it must be understood not of the outward Washing, but of the inward, lively Faith, stipulated in it, and by it. Baptism concurs with Faith, and Faith with Baptism, and the Holy Spirit with Both; and so the Merits of CHRIST are favingly applied. Faith alone will not ordinarily ferve in this Case; but it must be a contracting Faith on Man's Part, contracting in Form, correfoonding to the Federal Promifes and Engagements on God's Part: Therefore TERTUL-LIAN rightly stiles Baptism Obsignatio Fideiw, Testatio Fidei, Sponsio Salutis*, Fidei Pactio y, and the like. But I shall say more on the Head of Faith in a distinct Article below.

There is yet another very observable Text, which might have come in, in its Place; But I chose

^{* 1} Pet. iii. 21. See my Review, c. xi. p. 434, 435. * Tertullian de Poenit. c. vi. p. 125. Conf. de Resurr. Carn. c. xlviii. p. 355.

^{*} Tertullian de Bapt. c. vi. p. 226. Y Tertullian de Pudicit. c. ix. p. 562.

I chose to reserve it to the last, for the winding up this Summary View of the Scripture-Doctrine on this Head. It runs thus: Such were Some of You: But Ye were washed (viz. in Baptism) but Ye were sanctified; but Ye were justified in the Name of the Lord Jefus; and by the Spirit of our God z. I think it better to render it were, or bave been, than are, as best suiting with the Original, and with the, were, just going before; But the Sense is much the same either Way. Here are three concurrent Causes of. Fustification (together with Santtification) mention'd together: Viz. The meritorious Cause, the Lord Fesus; the efficient and operating Cause, The Spirit of our God; and the instrumental Rite of Conveyance, Baptism. From these feveral Passages of the New Testament laid together, it fufficiently appears, not only that Baptism is the ordinary Instrument in God's Hands for conferring Justification; but also, that ordinarily there is no Justification conferred either before it, or without it. Such Grace as precedes Baptism, amounts not ordinarily to Justification, strictly so called a: Such as follows

² 1 Cor. vi. 11. See Wolfius in Loc. Bull. Op. Lat. p. 411,

² Vid. Augustin. de divers. Q. ad Simplic. L. I. p. 89. T. VI. item Epist. CXCIV. p. 720. Tom. II.

And compare Regeneration stated, &c. p. 13.

lows it, owes it's force, in a great Measure, to the standing Virtue of Baptism once given b.

Secondly. To confirm what has been here proved from Scripture, or rather to shew the more plainly that we are not mistaken in so interpreting, I may next briefly add the concurring Verdict of the Antients, bearing Testimony to the same Doctrine, down from St. BARNABAS of the first Age, about the Year 70, to the End of the IVth Century, or later.

BARNABAS declares that Baptism procures Remission of Sinse: Therefore it procures Justification. He declares farther, that Men defected into the Water full of Sins and Pollutions: Therefore, by his Account, They are not justified, ordinarily, before Baptism. Some Moderns have imagined the Antients built their strict Notions of the Use and Necessity of Baptism, upon too rigorous a Construction of John iii. 5. But it is certain, that They had those strict Notions before St. John's Gospel was written; and that BARNABAS, in particular, pleaded Texts out of the Old Testament for

b Vid. Augustin de Nupt. & Concupisc. L. I. p. 298. Tom. X.

Compare my Review, &c. p. 328, 329.

^c Το Βάπλισμα το φέρον εἰς ἄφεριν ἀμαριῶν. Barnab. Epith. c. xi. p. 36. ἡμεῖς μέν καλαδαίνομεν εἰς το ῦδωρ γέμονλες ἀμαριῶν κὰ ἐὐπω, κὰ ἀναδαίνομεν καρποφορῶνλες κ. τ. λ. Ibid. p. 38.

for the same Doctrine, and that later FATHERS had several other Texts to produce, befides John iii. 5. such as I have cited: But I proceed.

HERMAS, of the same Century, affirms, that a Christian's Life is and shall be saved by Waterd; which amounts to the same with what We have before feen in St, PETER, and admits of like Interpretation. His elsewhere declaring Remission of Sins to belong to Baptisine, imports as much as saying that Justification hangs upon it. In another Place, He expresses his Sense of the Necessity of Baptism to Salvation (consequently, to Justification) still more positively - "Before Any One receives "the Name of the Son of God, He is liable " to Death: But when He receives that Seal, "He is delivered from Death, and is affign'd " to Life. Now, That Seal is Water, into " which Persons go down liable to Death, but " come out of it affign'd to Life "." Here it is d Quoniam Vita vestra per Aquam salva sacta est & siet: sundata est enim Verbo Omnipotentis & honorisici Nominis. Herm. L. I. Vis. III. §. 3. p. 793. Ed. Fabric. Compare Wall's Hist. of Inf. Bapt. Part I. c. i. p. 2.

^e In Aquam descendimus, & accipimus Remissionem Peccatorum nostrorum. Herm. Mandat. IV. §. 3. p. 854.

f Antequamenim accipiat Homo Nomen Filii Dei, Morti desti-

f Antequam enim accipiat Homo Nomen Filii Dei, Morti destinatus est: At ubi accipit illud Sigillum, liberatur a Morte, & traditur Vita. Illud autem Sigillum Aqua est, in quam descendunt Homines.

is plain, that Baptism is presupposed to Justissication, which is made the Effect and Consequent of it. I defend not HERMAS's Inference or Retrospect, with Respect to the ancient PA-TRIARCHS. Baptism is the Gospel-Instrument of Justification: But other Symbols, and other Instruments served the same Purpose under the preceding Dispensations 5.

JUSTIN, of the next Age, undertaking to describe the Order and Method of training up, and admitting new Converts to Christianity, particularly observes, that They who are perfuaded, and do believe Those Things to be true which are taught Them, and do undertake to live accordingly, are directed to fast and pray for the Forgiveness of their former Sins; and are afterwards brought where there is Water, and so They are regenerated, being washed with Water, in the Name of the three Divine Perfons; (the Necessity of which is apparent from John iii. 3, 4, 5. and Isaiah i. 16, 20.) and then They receive Remission of Sins in Water; but provided that. They truly repent Them of their Sins h. The Order here specified runs thus:

mines Morti alligati, ascendunt vero Vitæ assignati. Herm. Sim. IX. §. 16. p. 1008. Compare Wall. Part. I. c. i. p. 2, 3, 4, 5. And Bingham XI. 4, 6. p. 203, 204.

g Vid. Augustin. Enchirid. p. 241. Tom. VI.

h Justin Mart. Apol. I. p. 88, 89, 90. Edit. Lond. Compare Wall. Inf. Bapt. Part. I. c. ii. p. 12, 13. 2d Edit.

thus; Faith, Repentance, Baptism, Dedication to God, Renovation in Christ, Remission of Sins, which is Justification. The two first preceded Baptism; The Three last accompanied it, as the Fruits and Effects of it, being subsequent in Order of Causality, if not in Order of Time. Preparatory Grace, we know, must be before all; But Justin had no Occasion there to be particular on That Head.

IRENÆUS, 30 or 40 Years later in the same Century, teaches, that every Son of ADAM needs the Laver of Regeneration, to relieve Him from the Transgression with which He is born is that is, to save Him, as He elsewhere explainsk.

CLEMENS, of the same Time, speaking of Baptism, says; "Being baptized we are illu"minated, being illuminated we are made Sons, being made Sons we are perfected, being per"fected we are immortalized.— This Work "is variously denominated; Grace, and Illu"mination, and Perfection, and Laver: Laver,
"by which we wipe off Sins; Grace, by "which

i Quoniam in illa Plasmatione, quæ secundum Adam suit, in Transgressione sactus Homo indigebat Lawacro Regenerationis; postquam linivit Lutum super Oculos ejus, dixit ei, wade in Siloam, & laware; simul & Plasmationem, & eam quæ est per Lavacrum Regenerationem restituens ei. Iren. L. V. c. xv. p. 312. Edit. Bened.

k Omnes enim venit per semetipsum falvare: Omnes, inquam, qui per Eum renascuntur in Deum, Infantes, & Parvulos, & Pucros, & Juvenes, & Seniores. Iren. L. II. c. xxii. p. 147.

"which The Penalties due to Sins are remitted; Illumination, by which That Holy and Salutary Light is view'd, that is, by which we gaze on the Divine Being!" Baptism is here supposed to be the Instrument of Illumination, Remission, Adoption, Perfection, Salvation:
Under which, jointly considered, must be comprehended all that concerns Justification, tho' the Name it self is not used.

"Sacrament of Water, whereby We are "washed from the Sins of our former Blind"ness, and recovered to eternal Life." He adds that We are born in Water, and are no otherwise faved than by the abiding in it, or by the Use of it in Baptism. He answers the Objection drawn from the Sufficiency of Faith

m Felix Sacramentum Aquæ nostræ, qua abluti delictis pristinæ cæcitatis, in Vitam æternam liberamur. Tertullian de Bapt.

c. i. p. 224.

¹ Βαπθιζόμενοι, Φωτιζόμεθα Φωτιζόμεθα. - καλείται δε σολλαχώς τὸ εκειμεθα τελειέμενοι ἀπαθανατιζόμεθα. - καλείται δε σολλαχώς τὸ εγγον τέτο, χάρισμα, κὰ φώτισμα κὰ τέλειον, κὰ λεθρόν λεθρόν μεν, δι ε τὰς αμαβίας ἀπορρυπθόμεθα χάρισμα δε, δι τὰ επὶ τοῖς ἀμαβήμασιν επιθίμια ἀνεῖται Φώτισμα δε, δι ε τὸ άγιον εκεῖνο Φῶς τὸ σωθήριον ἐποπθεύθαι, τετές νι δι ε τὸ θεῖον δξυωπέμεν. Clemens. Alex. Pædag. Li. L. c. vi. p. 113. Edit. Oxon. Conf. Nazianzen. de Bapt. Orat. XL. p. 638.

n În Aqua nascimur: nec aliter quam in Aqua permanendo Salvi sumus. Ibid. præscribitur Nemini sine Baptismo competere Salutem, ex illa maxime Pronuntiatione Domini, qui ait uis natus ex Aqua, &c. Ibid. c. xii. p. 228. Conf. de Anima, c. xl. p. 294.

very

Faith alone, as in the Instance of ABRAHAM. The Sum of his Solution is, that what was not required formerly, is required now: That The Gospel has made a new Law, a new Rule for it, and has tied Us up to fuch Form. He refers to MATT. xxviii. 19. and to John iii. 5. and to the Instance of St. PAUL, recorded in the Acts; who, tho' He had before Faith sufficient, yet was strictly required to add Baptism to it o. From hence it is plain, that TERTUL-LIAN understood Baptism to be the ordinary and indispensable Mean or Instrument of Justification; infomuch that He thought even a Layman guilty of destroying a Soul, if He should refuse to give a Person Baptism in a case of Extremity, no Clergy being present p. Nevertheless, the same TERTULLIAN indulged some Particularities as to the Point of delaying Baptism in some Cases; and has been thought not Vor. II.

· Hic ergo scelestissimi illi provocant Quæstiones: Adeo dicunt, Baptismus non est necessarius, quibus Fides satis est; nam & Abraham nullius Aquæ nisi Fidei sacramento Deo placuit. Sed in omnibus posteriora concludunt, & sequentia antecedentibus prevalent. Fuerit Salus retro per Fidem nudam, ante Domini Paffionem & Resurrectionem. At ubi Fides aucta est, credendi in Nativitatem, Passionem, & Resurrectionem ejus, addita est Ampliatio Sacramento, Obfignatio Baptismi, Vestimentum quodammodo Fidei, quæ retro erat nuda, nec potest [esse] jam sine sua Lege. Lex enim tinguendi imposita est, & Forma præscripta. Tertull. de Bapt. c. xiii. p. 229.

P Reus erit perditi Hominis, si supersederit præstare quod liberè

potuit, c. xvii. p. 231.

very consistent with Himself in That Article; especially where He makes it an Argument for such Delay, that Faith entire is secure of Salvation 9. But He hereby only qualified his former Doctrine, so as to except some very rare and extraordinary Cases, where Delays might be made, not out of Contempt, but Reverence towards the Sacrament: Otherwise the ordinary Rule was to stand inviolable. As to the excepted Cases, they would be rare indeed, since Baptism might be had upon very short Warning in any Extremity almost according to his Principles, if so much as a Laic could but be found to confer it. But I return to the Point in Hand.

CYPRIAN, more cautious in the Point of Delays than his Master TERTULLIAN, gives this Reason why the Baptism of Infants should not be deferr'd (in Danger of Death) to the eighth Day; that it is our duty, so far as in Us lies, to take Care, that no Soul be destroy'd.

lecu-

r See Wall. Hist. of Inf. Bapt. Part. I. c. iv. p. 23.

Bingham XI. 4. 10. p. 212.

5 Cæterum omnis dies Domini est, omnis Hora, omne Tempus

habile Baptismo, c. xix. p. 232.

q Si qui Pondus intelligant Baptismi, magis timebunt Confecutionem quam Dilationem: Fides integra secura est de Salute, c.xviii. P. 232.

Universi judicavimus, nulli Homini nato Misericordiam Dei & Gratiam denegandam: Nam cum Dominus in Evangelio suo dicat, Filius Hominis non wenit animas Hominum perdere, sed salvare; quantum in nobis est, si sieri potest, nulla Anima perdenda est. Coprian Epist. LIX. Ad Fidum, p. 98. Edit. Bened.

It is plain from hence, that He thought there was, ordinarily, no fuffification previous to Baptisim, the appointed Channel of Conveyance, the Fountain Head of the Spiritual Life: For such was Cyprian's Opinion of it, as appears thro' all his Writings ". Not only so, but He expressly mentions fusfification as one of the Graces conferr'd in it w.

I pass on to the next Century; where We find the elder Cyril declaring, that a Person comes to Baptism bearing His Sins, dead in Sins (therefore not yet justified) but that He comes out quickned in Righteousness's; which is the same as to say, justified.

BASIL, of the same Century, expresses Himself fully to our Purpose, in these Words:

- "Whence are We CHRISTIANS? By Faith, "will Every One fay. But after what man-
- " ner are We faved? By being regenerated thro
- " the Grace which is conferr'd in Baptism .-
- "For, if Baptism is to Me the Beginning of Vol. II. X 2 "Life,
- ⁿ Cyprian Epist. I. p. 2. Epist. XXIII. p. 32. Ep. LXXII. p. 128. Epist. LXXIV. p. 140. Epist. LXXVI. p. 155, 157. De Habit. Virgin. p. 180. Testimon. L. III. c. xxv. p. 314. De Orat. Domin. p. 205.

w Quomodo Tales justificare & fanctificare baptizatos possunt, qui Hostes Sacerdotum, & c. Epist. LXXVI. p. 155.

* Καθερη μεν γαρ εἰς τὸ υδωρ Φορων τὰς αμαεδίας άλλ ἡ τῆς χάρριος ἐπίκλησις σΦραγίσασα την ψυχην, ἐ συγχωρεῖ λοιπὸν ὑπὸ τε Φοθερε καθαποθήναι διάκινος. νεκρὸς ἐν αμαεδίαις καθαβάς, ἀναθαίτεις ζωοποιηθεὶς ἐν δικαιωσύνη. Cyril Hierofol. Catech. ΗΙ. p. 45. Edit. Bened. Conf. Cateches. xvii. p. 282.

"Life, and That Regeneration-Day is the first " of Days; then it is manifest That Voice is " of all the most precious which is founded " forth upon the Grace of Adoption"." Babtism is here supposed to be, as it were, the first Delivery of God's Grant of Adoption, and confequently of Justification, which is much the fame Thing. Faith goes before, as the Hand stretch'd out, ready to receive: But it cannot be received before it is given: Neither is it ordinarily first given but in Baptism; nor continued afterwards but in Virtue of it, due Qualifications supposed all the while. In another Chapter The same Father says, "Faith and " Baptism are two Means of Salvation, near " aking to each other, and inseparable. For, " Faith is perfected by Baptism, and Baptism is " grounded in Faith, and Both are compleated by " the same [divine] Names2."

HILARIUS Diaconus, some Years before BASIL, taught the same Doctrine; interpreting St. PAUL'S Quotation from the PSAL-panai. Bafil. ibid. c. xii. p. 23.

MIST

² Πιςις δὲ κὸ βάπλισμα, δύο τρόποι τῆς σωληρίας, συμφυεῖς ἀλλήλοις, κὰ ἀδιαίρελοι. ἀςςς μὲν γκὸρ τελειεται διὰ Βαπλισμάλος Βάπλισμα δὲ Εκμελίεται διὰ τῆς σίς εως, καὶ διὰ τῷν ἀυτῶν ὀνρκάτων ἐκάτερα ἀλην.

Υ Χριςιανοί σύθεν ήμεῖς; διὰ τῆς σίς εως σᾶς τις ἄν εἴποι σωζόμεθα δὲ, τίνα τρόπον; Αναγεινηθέθες, δηλονότι, διὰ τῆς ἐν τῷ Βαπθίσματι Χαρίδος. — εἰ γὰρ ἀρχὴ μοὶ ζωῆς τὸ Βάπθισμα, κὴ σρώτη ήμερῶν ἐκείνη ἡ τῆς σαλιγίενεσίας ἡμέρα, δήλον ὅτι κὴ Φωνὴ τιμιωθάτη σασῶν ἡ ἐν τη χάριτι τῆς ὑιοθεσίας ἐκφωιηθεῖσα. Βαρίλ. de Spirit. Sanct. c. x. p. 21, 22. Edit. Bened.

MIST (which the Apostle applies to the Purpose of Justification, Rom. iv. 6, 7, 8,) of What is done in Baptism, of the Justification conferred in that holy Solemnity a: From whence it is evident, that He understood Baptism to be the ordinary standing Mean, or Instrument of Conveyance.

I shall shut up this Detail of Fathers with the Words of St. Austin; who, undertaking to explain the four Things mention'd by the Apostle (Rom. viii. 30.) predestinate, called, justified, and glorified, says of the Third, thus: "Behold, Persons are baptized, all their Sins "are forgiven, They are justified from their "Sinsb." He repeats the fame Doctrine foon after in Words still more express. It would be endless to quote Passages from the same FATHER X 3

² Propheta autem Tempus felix prævidens in Salvatoris Adventu, beatos nuncupat, quibus fine Labore vel aliquo Opere per Lavacrum remittuntur, & teguntur, & non imputantur Peccata. Apostolus tamen propter Plenitudinem Temporum, & quia plus Gratiæ in Apostolis est quam fuit in Prophetis, majora protestatur quæ ex Dono Baptismatis consequimur; Quia non solum Remissionem Peccatorum accipere nos, sed justificari & Filios Dei fieri profitetur, ut Beatitudo hæc perfectam habeat & Securitatem & Gloriam. Hilar. Diac. in Rom. iv. 8. inter Op. Ambrof. Tom. II.

p. 49.

b Ecce enim baptizati funt Homines, omnia illis Peccata dimissa sunt, justificati sunt a Peccatis. Augustin. Serm. CLVIII. De Verb. Apostol. Rom. viii. 762. Tom. V.

Unusquisque vestrum jam ipsa Justificatione constitutus, accepta scilicet Remissione Peccatorum per Lavacrum Regenerationis, accepto Spiritu Sancto, proficiens de Die in Diem, &c. Augustin. ib. p. 763. Conf. Chrysostom in Rom. viii. 30. Hom. xv. p. 595. Tom. IX. Ed. Bened. Damascen. in eund. Loc. Op. Tom. II. p. 33. FATHER to prove that, in his Account, there is no Justification, ordinarily, before, or without Baptism. It was a fix'd Principle with Him, that Justification ordinarily commenced with Baptism, and not otherwise.

From hence (as I may note by the Way) We may easily understand what St. Austin meant by his famed Maxim, which Many have often perverted to a very wrong Sense; namely, that good Works follow after Justification, and do not precede it d. In Reality, He meant no more than that Men must be incorporated in CHRIST, must be Christians, and good Christians (for Such only are justified) before They could practife Christian Works, or Righteousness, strictly so called e: For such Works only have an eminent Right and Title to the Name of good Works; as they only are falutary within the Covenant, and have a Claim upon Promise. Works before Justification, that is, before Salutary Baptism, d Sciat se quisque per Fidem posse justificari, etiamsi Legis Opera non præcesserint: Sequuntur enim justificatum non præcedunt justificandum. Augustin. de Fid. & Oper c. xiv. p. 177. Tom. VI. Justificationem Opera non præcedunt. Augustin. de Spirit. & Litera, c. xxvi. 109. Tom. X. Bona Opera subsequuntur Gratiam, non præcedunt — Op. impers. contr. Jusian. L. I. c. cxli. p. 956. Tom. X. Cons. Tom. II. p. 717, 720, & Tom. VI. p.89.

Mandata ejus sancta & bona sibi tribuebant; quæ ut possit Homo sacere, Deus operatur in Homine per Fidem Jesu Christiqui Finis est ad justiciam omni Credenti: Id est, cui per Spiritum incorporatus, sactusque Membrum ejus potest quisque, illo Incrementum intrinsecus dante, operari justiciam. Augustin. de Spiritu & Lit. c. xxix. p. 113. Cons. c. xxxiv. p. 119. Tom. VI.

Baptism, are not, in his Account f, within the Promise; but are excluded rather, according to the ordinary Rule laid down in John iii. 5, and diverse other Texts before cited. But I return.

Enough hath been faid to shew, that Baptism is, by divine Appointment, the ordinary Instrument for conveying the Grace of Justification. Scripture and Antiquity are clear in this Matter: And so likewise are our Church-Forms; particularly our Baptismal offices, Catechism, and Confirmation.

have prefumed to teach, that the first Justification in Adults, is antecedent to Baptism, and that Baptism rather seals and confirms it, than conveys it: But I see no sufficient Ground for That Doctrine, either in Scripture, or Antiquity, or in the publick Offices of our Church; but much the contrary: And it seems, that the Mistake in this Matter first arose, either from the confounding the first preparatory Renewings of the Grace of the Spirit, with the Grace of Justification; or from a misinterpreting of St. Paul's Doctrine relating to justifying Faith, as if the Apostle in mentioning

h Bucer. Script. Anglican. p. 730.

f Vid. Augustin. de divers. Quæst. ad Simplic. L. I. p. 89. Tom. VI. Item, de Spirit. &. Lit, c. xxxiv. p. 119. Tom. VI. B. Publ. Bapt. of Inf. And Private Bapt. And Bapt. of Those of riper Years.

one Instrument of Justification, had thereby excluded every Instrument besides, which He does not. It might as well be pleaded (as I before hinted) that the Apostle had thereby excluded the Work of the Father, or Son, or Spirit from the Office of Justification; as that He excluded the visible Means, Rites, or Sacraments, in and by which They jointly operate. St. PAUL's Phrases, or exclusive Terms infer no fuch Thing; neither is his Faith opposed to Baptism, but it takes it in, ordinarily, and is neither falutary, nor lively Faith, till plighted in That Ordinance i.

5. From the Instrument of Conveyance on God's Part, We may next proceed to the Instrument of Reception on Man's; which I take to be Faith, as I have more than once intimated, and must now explain.

I am fenfible that some very eminent Men k have express'd a Dislike of the Phrase of the

Instru-

Hammond, Catech. Op. Vol. I. p. 36.

¹ This Article was maintained, against Cartavright, by Whitgift first, and afterwards by Hooker. (See Hooker, B. V. No. 60. p. 276.) Field, after Both, vindicates the Protestants on that Head, against the Reproaches of their Popish Adversaries, as follows:

[&]quot; Stapleton faith, that a Threefold Fraud of the Protestants, "touching Remission of Sins, is to be avoided: First, in that "They make our Juftification to confift in the fole Remission of " Sins by Faith, that the Sacraments confer nothing to our Justi-" fication. But This is untrue; for They teach no fuch Thing; " but that Baptism and Repentance are necessarily required in "Them that are to be first justified. Field on the Church, B. III. 46 Append. p 298."

Instrumentality of Faith; and have also justly rejected the Thing, according to the false Notion which Some had conceived of it. It cannot with any tolerable Sense or Propriety be look'd upon as an Instrument of Conveyance in the Hand of the efficient or principal Cause: But it may justly and properly be look'd upon as the Instrument of Reception in the Hand of the Recipient. It is not the Mean by which the Grace is wrought, effected, or conferr'd: But it may be, and is, the Mean by which it is accepted, or received 1: or, to express it a little differently, it is not the Instrument of Justification in the active Sense of the Word; but it is in the passive Sense of it.

It cannot be for Nothing that St. PAUL fo often, and so emphatically speaks of Man's being justified by Faith m, or through Faith in CHRIST'S Tillot fon, Posth. Serm. Vol. II. p. 480, 486. Bull. Op. Latin. p. 418, 512, 555, 655, 657, 658.

Gul. Forbes, confid. Modest. p. 24. Conf. p. 38, edit. nova, A. D. 1704.

Truman. great Propit. p. 194, 195.

1 Quod per Fidem, tanquam Organum, Gratiam justificationis accipi vel apprehendi dicunt Protestantes, næ illi Romanensesnimium morofi Cenfores funt, quibus ista loquendi Forma improbatur; præsertim propter Verbum apprehendendi: Eodem enim Modo loquuntur etiam multi doctiffimi Romanenses. Pererius in Rom. v. 2.— Maldonat. in Joh. vi. 29. videatur & Estius in Rom. iii. 28. Claudius Espencæus in 1 Tim. vi. 12. ubi horum novorum Criticorum Temeritatem recte castigat.

m Rom. i. 17. iii. 22, 28, 30. v. 2. ix. 32. Gal. ii. 16. iii. 8, 11, 14, 22, 24, 26, v. 5. Phil. iii. 9,

CHRIST'S Blood n; and that He particularly notes it of ABRAHAM, that He believed, and that his Faith was counted to Him for Justification o; when He might as eafily have faid, had He so meant, that Man is justified by Faith and Works, or that ABRAHAM, to whom the Gospel was preached p, was justified by Gospel-Faith and Obedience. Besides, it is certain, and is on all Hands allowed, that, tho' St. PAUL did not directly and expresly oppose Faith to evangelical Works, yet He comprehended the Works of the moral Law under those Works which He excluded from the Office of justifying, in his Sense of Justifying, in those Passages: And farther, He used such Arguments as appear to extend to all Kinds of Works: For, ABRAHAM's Works were really evangelical Works, and yet they were excluded. Add to This, that if Justification could come even by evangelical Works, without taking in Faith in the meritorious Sufferings and Satisfaction of a Mediator; then might we have whereof to glory 9, as needing no Pardon; and then might it be justly said, that CHRIST died in vain . I must further own, that it is n Rom. iii. 25. Gal. ii. 20. Phil. iii. 10.

Rom. iv. 3. Gal. iii. 6.

P Gal. iii. 8.

A See Rom. iv. 2.

F See Gal. ii. 21.

of great Weight with Me, that so early and fo confiderable a Writer as CLEMENS of Rome, an Apostolical Man, should so interpret the Doctrine of justifying Faith, as to oppose it plainly even to evangelical Works however exalted. It runs thus: "They (the ancient " PATRIARCHS) were All therefore greatly " glorified and magnified; not for their own " Sake, or for their own Works, or for the " Righteousness which They Themselves "wrought, but thro' His good Pleasure. " And we also being called thro' His good " Pleasure in CHRIST JESUS, are not justi-" fied by Our Selves, neither by our own " Wisdom, or Knowledge, or Piety, or the " Works which We have done in Holiness of " Heart, but by That Faith by which Al-" mighty God justified All from the Begin-" ning "." Here it is observable, that the Word Faith does not stand for the whole System of Christianity, or for Christian Belief at large, but for some particular felf-denying Principle by which good Men, even under the patriarchal and legal Dispensations, laid hold καὶ ἡμεῖς ἔν διὰ θελήμαθ» αὐτὰ ἐν Χριςῷ Ἰησᾶ κληθέθες, ἐ δι' ἐαυθῶν δικαιέμεθα, ἐδὲ διὰ τῆς ἡμετέρας ζοφίας, ἢ ζυνέσεως, ἢ εὐσεζείας, ἢ ἔργων ὧν καθειργασάμεθα ἐν ὁσιότηθι καρδίας ἀλλὰ διὰ τῆς πίςεως, δι' ῆς πάθας τὰς ἀπ' αἰῶν» ὁ πανθοκράτωρ Θεὸς ἐδικαίωσεν.

Clem. Rom. Ep. i. c. 32.

hold on the Mercy and Promises of God, referring all, not to Themselves or their own Deservings, but to Divine Goodness, in and thro a Mediator. It is true, CLEMENS elsewhere, and St. PAUL almost every where, insists upon true Holiness of Heart, and Obedience of Life, as indispensable Conditions of Salvation, or Justification; and of That, One would think there could be no Question among Men of any Judgment or Probity: But the Question about Conditions is very distinct from the other Question about Instruments; and therefore both Parts may be true, viz. that Faith and Obedience are equally Conditions, and equally indispensable where Opportunities permit; and yet Faith over and above is emphatically the Instrument both of receiving and holding Justification, or a Title to Salvation t.

To explain this Matter more distinctly, let it be remembred, that God may be consider-

ed

t A learned Foreigner illustrates this Matter by the Case of Marriage, as every good Person is conceived to be married to Christ, and to become one Flesh with Him. Ephes. v. 31, 32. Now there are many Qualifications, Conditions, Capacitics requisite to a valid Marriage: But still Consent, or Contrast, with due Solemnities, is what formally makes the matrimonial Bond, and what gives it its Sanction. Respect, Obedience, Love, do not properly esset it; but Consent does. So Faith binds the Contract, consummates the Marriage-Covenant with Christ, while the rest are considered as Qualifications, or Conditions of the Stipulation, not as the formal Stipulation it self. Vid. Wesself Dissertat. Academ. pol 47, &c. 281.

ed (as I before noted) either as a Party contracting with Man, on very gracious Terms us or as a Judge to pronounce Judgment upon Him.

Man's first coming into Covenant (suppofing Him adult) is by assenting to it, and accepting of it, to have and to hold it on such Kind of Tenure as God proposes: That is to say, upon a self-denying Tenure, considering Himself as a guilty Man, standing in Need of Pardon, and of borrowed Merits, and at length resting upon Mercy w. So here, the previous Question is, whether a Person shall consent to hold a Privilege upon this submissive Kind of Tenure, or not? Such Assenting which St.

PAUL

w Summa hue redit, quod is [Christus] Peccata Generis Humani, in se susceptible survey acque expiavit, ac pro iisdem justitiæ Divinæ satisfecit, eo cum Effectu ut Qui in ipsum credunt, seu in ejustem Merito & Satisfactione omnem suam Fiduciam reponunt, ejus intuitu Gratiam Dei quærunt, Peccatorum Remissionem, solidam & coram Tribunali divino subsistentem Justitiam, cum aliis Beneficiis quæ cum Deo reconciliatos comitantur, & demum Vitam externam consequantur. Pusendorf, ibid. §. 48. p. 166.

[&]quot;Neque enim Hoc Foedus Naturam habet Emptionis, Venditionis, aut Locationis, Conductionis, aut alicujus Contractûs innominati, do ut facias, facio ut facias, ubi eorum quæ invicem præstantur æqualitas requiritur: Sed habet aliquam convenientiam cum contractu feudali, ubi una Pars ex Gratia Quid in alterum confert, quæ autem altera vicissim præstat, non Retributionis sed tantum Recognitionis Vim habent, grati, sidelis, ac devota Animi Testem. Pusendorf, sus Fecial. Divin. §. 54. p. 191. Conf. §. 51. p. 172.

PAUL and St. CLEMENS call Faith x: And This previous and general Question, is the Question which Both of Them determine against any proud Claimants Who would hold by a more felf-admiring Tenure.

Or, if We next confider God as fitting in Judgment, and Man before the Tribunal, going to plead his Cause; here the Question is, what Kind of Plea shall a Man resolve to trust his Salvation upon? Shall He stand upon his Innocence, and rest upon strict Law; or shall He plead guilty, and rest in an Act of Grace? If He chuses the Former, He is proud, and fure to be cast: If He chuses the Latter, He is fafe to far, in throwing Himfelf upon an Ast of Grace. Now, This Question also, which St. PAUL has decided, is previous to the Queftion, what Conditions even the Act of Grace it felf finally infifts upon? A Question which St. JAMES in particular, and the general Tenour of the whole Scripture has abundantly fatisfied; and which could never have been made a Question by any confiderate, or impartial Christian. But of that I may fay more under another Article. What I am at present concern'd with, is to observe, that Faith is emphatically the Instrument by which an Adult accepts the Covenant of Grace, consenting to hold by that Kind of Tenure, to be justified in that Way, and to rest in that kind of Plea, putting his Salvation on that only Issue.

^{*} Quia Fœdus ac Divina Beneficia per eandem [Fidem] acceptantur; cum invitis & reluctantibus ista impingere nolit Deus, neque id citra Extinctionem Moralitatis fieri possit. Ibid. § 51. p. 172. Ex Parte Hominum ordinavit Medium Anniluzov, seu per quod istud acceptatur, Fidem; quam etiam Hominibus offert, sed morali, non physico aut mechanico Modo. Ibid § 78. p. 319. Conf. § 85. p. 349.

It appears to be a just Observation, which Dr. Whithy makes (Pres. to the Epist. to Galat. p. 300) that Abraham had Faith (Hebr. xi. 8.) before what was said of his Justification in Gen. xv. 16; and afterwards more abundantly, when He offer'd up his Son Isaac; but yet neither of those Instances was pitch'd upon by the Apostle, as sit for his Purpose, because in Both Obedience was join'd with Faith: Whereas here was a pure Ast of Faith without Works, and of This Ast of Faith it is said, it was imputed to Him for Righteousness.

The Sum is, none of our Works are good enough to stand by Themselves before Him, who is of purer Eyes than to behold Iniquity. Christ only is pure enough for it at first Hand, and They that are Christ's at second Hand, in and thro' Him. Now, because it is by Faith that We thus interpose, as it were,

CHRIST between God and Us, in Order to gain Acceptance by Him; therefore Faith is emphatically the Instrument whereby we receive the Grant of Justification. Obedience is equally a Condition, or Qualification, but not an Instrument, not being that Act of the Mind whereby we look up to God and Christ, and whereby we embrace the Promises.

Faith, by St. PAUL's Account of it, is The Substance of Things hoped for, as making the Things subsist, as it were, with certain Effect, in the Mind. It is the Evidence of Things not feen y, being, as it were, the Eye of the Mind, looking to the Blood of CHRIST, and thereby inwardly warming the Affections to a firm Reliance upon it, and Acquiescence in it z. This is to be understood of a firm and vigorous Faith, and at the same time well grounded .-Faith is faid to embrace (falute, welcome) the Things promised of God 2, as Things present to View, or near at Hand. There is no other Faculty, Virtue, Act, or Exercise of the Mind, which fo properly does it, as Faith does: Therefore Faith particularly is represented as That by which the Gentile Converts laid hold on Justification b, and brought it home to Themselves. And as Faith is said to have healed Severale, in a Bodily Sense; so may it be also said to heal Men in a Spiritual Way, that is, to justify, being immediately instrumental in the Reception of That Grace, more than any other Virtues are. For as, when Persons were bealed by looking on the Brazen Serpent d, their Eyes were particularly instrumental to their Cure, more than the whole Body; fo Faith, the Eye of the Mind, is particularly instrumental in this Affair, more than the whole Body of Graces, with which it is accompanied: Not for any fuper-eminent Excellency of Faith above every other Virtue (for Charity is greater e) but for its particular Aptness, in the very Nature of it, to make Things distant become near, and to admit them into close Embraces. The Homilies of our Church describe and limit the Doctrine thus: " Faith doth not shut "out Repentance, Hope, Love, Dread, and the " Fear of God to be joined with Faith in every " Man that is justified; but it shutteth them VOL. II. " out

012

b Rom. ix. 30, 31, 32.

c Matt. ix. 22. Luke vii. 50. viii. 48. xvii. 19. xviii. 42.

Mark v. 34. x. 52.

d Numb. xxi. 8, 9. Comp. Ifa. xlv. 22. Joh. iii. 14. Conf. Gul. Forbes, Confid. Modest. p. 28, 29. Grabe in Notis ad Bulli, Harmon. p. 450, 451.

^{. * 1} Cor. xiii. 13.

"out from the Office of justifying f;" that is to fay, from the Office of accepting or receiving it: For, as to the Office of justifying in the active Sense, That belongs to God only, as the fame Homily elsewhere declares g. The Doctrine is there further explain'd thus: " Because " Faith doth directly fend us to CHRIST for " Remission of our Sins, and that by Faith given " us of God we embrace the Promise of God's "Mercy, and of the Remission of our Sins " (which Thing none other of our Virtues or "Works properly doth) therefore the Scripture " useth to say, that Faith without Works doth " justify h: Not that This is to be understood of

Homily of Salvation, Part I. p. 22.

Homily of Salvation, Part II. p. 25, 26. and Part III. p. 28. Among the later Homilies, see on the Passion, p. 452, 454. And concerning the Sacrament, Part I. p. 472, 574. Conf. Nowelli Catech. p. 41. Gul. Forbes, Confid Modest. p. 23, 24, 38. Hooker, Disc. on Justific. p. 509. Tyndal 45, 187, 225, 330, 331. Field, 298, 323. Conf. Augustan, Art. XX. p. 18, 19. Spanheim, Tom. III. p. 141, 159, 761, 834. Le Blanc, p. 126, Homily of Salvation, Part III. p. 28.

N. B. In the 28th Article of our Church, we are taught, that THE MEAN whereby the Body of Christ is RECEIVED and eaten in the Supper, is FAITH. Comp. Jewell's Defence, &c. p. 234. And my Review, p. 141, 142, 195, 212, 241, 244, 539. No One can doubt but that Charity is as necessarily requir'd to a worthy Reception of the Eucharift, or to a real Reception of the Body and the Graces thereon depending, as Faith can be: They are Both of them equally Conditions: But Faith particularly is the Mean, or Instrument; which Charity in this Case is not. Charity is excluded here from ferving as a Mean, from the Office of being an Instrument, of a Man's being confident of his own Election, his own Justification, or his own Salvation in particular (which is quite another Question, and to be determin'd by other Rules) but of his confiding solely upon the Covenant of Grace in Christ (not upon his own Deservings) with full Assurance that so, and so only, He is safe as long as He behaves accordingly.

The Covenant of Grace has Conditions annex'd to it, which I am next to confider.

6. The Conditions of Justification are of great Weight; for, without Them, no Instruments can avail. Those Conditions are Faith and Obedience; as St. JAMES hath particularly maintain'd i. St. PAUL had before determin'd the general and previous Question, as to the Tenure whereby We are to hold, or the Plea by which We ought to abide; namely, by Grace, in Opposition to Claims: And when some Libertines had perverted (as is probable) St. PAUL's Doctrine very widely and strangely, and made an ill Use of it; then St. JAMES shewed that That very Faith, which was to rest in a Co-VOL. II. Y 2 venant and no body takes Offence at it: Why should they therefore in the other Sacrament, the Sacrament of the first Justification, when the Cases are parallel? Our Church is constant and uniform in Both; and so are the ancient Churches likewise, upon Reasons grounded in the very Nature of Faith, as an Act or Habit specifically different from Charity.

i Jam. ii. 14,-26.

venant of Grace, supposed a Conformity to the Terms of it; otherwise it would be found but a Dead Faith, no Christian Faith at all: For, a Cordial Belief of the divine Promises, and a Cordial Acquiescence in God's Covenant, implies and includes a Cordial Submission to the Terms and Conditions of it; otherwise, it is Nothing but empty Ceremony.

Upon the Whole, The perfect Agreement between St. PAUL and St. JAMES, in the Article of Justification, appears very clear, and certain. St. PAUL declares, that, in Order to come at Justification, it is necessary to stand upon Grace, not upon Merit; which St. JAMES does not deny, but confirms rather in what He fays of the perfect Law of Liberty, Jam. i. 25. ii. 12. St. PAUL makes Faith the Instrument of receiving That Grace; which St. JAMES does not dispute, but approves by what He says of ABRAHAM, (ii. 23.) only He maintains also, that, in the conditionate Sense, Justification depends equally upon Faith and good Works: which St. PAUL also teaches and inculcates in Effect, or in other Words, thro' all his Writtings. If St. PAUL had had precifely the same Question before Him which St. JAMES happen'd to have, He would have decided just as St. JAMES did: And if St. JAMES had had preprecisely cifely the fame Question before Him which St. PAUL had, He would have determin'd just as St. PAUL did. Their Principles were exactly the fame, but the Questions were diverse, and They had different Adversaries to deal with, and opposite Extremes to encounter, which is a common Case.

It may be noted, that That Faith which I here call a Condition, is of much wider Compass than That particular Kind of Faith which is precifely the Instrument of Justification. For, Faith, as a Condition, means the whole Complex of Christian Belief as express'd in the Creeds; while Faith, as an Instrument, means only the laying hold on Grace, and resting in CHRIST's Merits, in Opposition to our own Deservings: Tho' This also, if it is a vital and operative Principle (and if it is not, it is nothing worth) must of course presuppose, carry with it, and draw after it an hearty Submission to, and Observance of, all the necessary Conditions of that Covenant of Grace, wherein We repose our whole Trust and Confidence. So that St. PAUL might well fay, Do We then make void the Law (the Moral Law) thro' Faith? God forbid: Yea we establish the Law k. We exempt no Man from religious Duties; which are Duties still, tho' they do not

k Rom. iii. 31. See Norris Pract. Disc. Vol. III. Disc. 3.

not merit, nor are practicable to such a Degree as to be above the Need of Pardon: They are necessary Conditions, in their Measure, of Justification; tho' not sufficient in themselves to justify, nor perfect enough to stand before God, or to abide Trial: Therefore Christ's Merits must be taken in to supply their Defects; and so our resting in Christ's Attonement, by an humble, self-denying Faith, is our last Resort, our Anchor of Salvation both sure and stedsast, after we have otherwise done our utmost towards the suffilling of God's Sacred Laws, towards the performing all the Conditions required.

That good Works, internal and external, are according as Opportunities offer, and Circum-flances permit, Conditions properly so called, is clear from the whole Tenour of Scripture, as hath been often and abundantly proved by our own

Coram Deo Nihil valet quam Filius ejus charissimus, Jesus Christus: Ad illum ubicunque est, respicit; in illo complacuit: Hic totus sanctus & purus est coram illo. Filius autem non per Opera, sed per Fidem in corde absque omni Opere, apprehenditur. Charitas & Opera nec sunt nec esse possunt Filius Dei, aut justicia quae coram Deo pura & sancta sit, ut est Filius. Itaque per se non consistunt coram Deo ut justicia pura, qualis est Filius. Quod vero justa & sancta vocentur, ex Gratia sit, non ex jure: Neque illa aque respicit Deus ut Filium, sed tantum propter Filium ea tolerat, & sert illorum Impuritatem: imo coronat ea & Præmiis assicit, sed id omne propter Filium, qui in Corde habitat per Fidem. Luther. in Seckendors. Lib. III. p. 357. A. D. 1541.

own Divines m, and is admitted by the most judicious among the foreign Reformed n.

Yet Some have been very fcrupulous as to this innocent Name, even while They allow the absolute Necessity of good Works, as indispensable Qualifications for future Blessedness. Why not Conditions therefore, as well as Qualifications? Perhaps, Because That Name might appear to strike at absolute Predestination, or unconditional Election; and there may lie the Scruple: Otherwise, the Difference appears to lie rather in Words than in Things.

Some will have them called not Conditions, but Fruits or Consequents of Justification. If they mean, by Justification, the same as the Grace of the Holy Spirit, and the first Grace of Faith springing from it; they say true °:

Y 4 and

m Bull. Op. Latin. p. 412, 414, 415, 430, 434, 514, 516, 544, 583, 645, 668. Edit. ult.

Stilling fleet's Works, Vol. III. p. 367, 380, 393, 398. Tillot son Posth. Serm. Vol. II. p. 484, 487.

" Vossius de Bonis Operibus, Thes. x. p. 370. Op. Tom. VI. Frid. Spanhem. fil. Op. Tom. III. p. 141, 159.

Conf. Gul. Forbes, Confid. Modest. p. 195, &c.

O Nemo computet bona Opera ante Fidem; ubi Fides non erat, bonum Opus non erat: Bonum enim Opus Intentio facit; intentionem Fides dirigit. Augustin. in Pfal.xxxi. p.172. Tom.IV.

Crede in Eum qui justificat Impium, ut possint & bona opera tua esse opera bona: Nam nec bona illa appellaverim, quamdiu non de Radice bona procedunt. Ibid. p. 174.

N. B. St. Auftin is not constant in his Notion of good Works, but He uses the Phrase in a twofold Sense, larger or stricter. Sometimes He means by good Works, Works flowing from Grace and then there is nothing more in it than an . improper Use of the Word Justification, excepting that from Abuse of Words very frequently. arises some Corruption of Doctrine.

If They mean only, that outward Acts of Righteousness are Fruits of inward Habits or Dispositions; That also is undoubtedly true: But That is no Reason why internal Acts, Virtues, Graces (good Works of the Mind) should not be called Conditions of the Primary Justification; or why the outward Acts should not be justly thought Conditions of preserving it.

But if They mean that Justification is ordinarily given to Adults, without any preparative or previous Conditions of Faith and Repentance, That indeed is very new Doctrine and dangerous, and opens a wide Door to carnal Security, and to all Ungodliness. But enough of This Matter.

The Sum of what has been offered under the present Head is, That we are justified by God the Father, confider'd as Principal, and first Mover; and by God the Son, as meritorious Purchaser; and by God the Holy-Ghost, as immediate Grace and Faith whether before or after Baptism; as He does here: And sometimes He means Works strictly christian, fubsequent to the Incorporation in Baptism, that is, subsequent to Justification. The Want of observing this his twofold Use of the Phrase, has led some uncautious Readers into Mistakes.

mediate Efficient; and by Baptism, as the ordinary Instrument of Conveyance; and by Faith of fuch a Kind, as the ordinary Instrument of Reception; and lastly, by Faith and Holiness, as the necessary Qualifications and Conditions in Adults, both for the first receiving, and for the perpetual preserving it p. Such, and so many are

P The Order of Justification is thus expressed in K. Edward's Catechism, written by Peynet, A. D. 1553, countenanced by the other Bishops and Clergy, and publish'd by the King's Authority.

" 1. The first and principal, and most proper Cause of our " Justification and Salvation, is the Goodness and Love of God,

" whereby He chose us before the World.

" 2. After That, God granteth us to be called by the preach-" ing of the Gospel of Jesus Christ; when the pirit of the " Lord is poured upon us: By whose Guiding and Governance " we be led to fettle our Trust in God, and hope for the Perfor-" mance of his Promise.

" 3. With this Choice is joined, as Companion, the mortifying

" of the Old Man, that is, of our Affections and Lufts.

" 4. From the same Spirit also cometh our Sanctification, the " Love of God and of our Neighbour; Justice and Uprightness " of Life.

" 5. Finally, to fay all in Sum, whatever is in us, or may be " done of us, honest, pure, true, and good; That altogether " fpringeth out of this pleasant Rock. The Goodness, Love,. " Choice, and unchangeable Purpose of God, He is the Cause;

" the rest are the Fruits and Effects.

" 6. Yet are also the Choice and Spirit of God and Christ " Himself Causes conjoined and coupled with each other: which " may be reckon'd amongst the principal Causes of Salvation.

" 7. As oft therefore as we use to say, that we are made " righteous and faved by Faith only, it is meant thereby, that " Faith, or rather Trust alone doth lay hard upon ", understand, are the concurring Causes, operating, in their Order and Degree, towards Man's first, or final Justification. It would be altogether wrong to separate them, or to set them one against another, or to advance any one, or more, to the Exclusion of the rest.

" and perceive our righteous-making to be given us of God free-" ly; That is to say, by no Deserts of our own, but by the "Free Grace of the Almighty Father.

I may observe further, for the preventing. any Mistake or Misconception, that I might have consider'd Baptism as an external Instrument of Reception, in the Hand of Man, as Man bears a Part in that Sacrament; and fo. there would be two Instruments of Reception, external and internal, Baptism and Faith: And if any one chuses so to state the Case, I shall not object to it. But having mention'd Baptisin before, as the Instrument of Conveyance on God's Part, which is most considerable, I thought it of less Moment to bring it up again under [&]quot; 8. Moreover Faith doth ingender in us Love of our Neigh-" bour, and fuch Works as God is pleased withal: For, if it be " a lively and true Faith, quickned by the Holy Ghoft, She is the Mother of all good faying and doing. By This short Tale, it is evident by what Means we attain to be righteous. " For, not by the Worthiness of our own Deservings were we " heretofore chosen, or long ago faved, but by the only Mercy of "God, and pure Grace of Christ our Lord; whereby we were " in Him made to do those good Works that God had appoint-" ed for us to walk in. And altho' good Works cannot deferve " to make us righteous before God, yet do they so cleave unto "Faith, that neither Faith can be found avithout them, nor good Works be any where found avithout Faith." Fol. 68. in Heylin Quinquartic. Contr. p. 105.

under a different View, because That would be understood of Course.

I cannot dismiss this Head without throwing in a Word or two of the wise Provisions made by our Church, in bringing Children to Baptism, that They may be both regenerated and justified from the first. It is right and safe for the Children Themselves: And not only so; but the very doing it is further of Use to prevent, or remove the Perplexities raised by contentious Men on the Subject of Justification.

Some will tell you that good Works are not. Conditions of Justification: It is certainly true in the Case of Infants (which is the common Case with us) for neither Works, nor Faith, are Conditions required of Them: They are justified without either, by the free Mercy of God, thro' the alone Merits of Christ.

Some will plead, that Man is utterly unable to do good Works before He is justified and regenerated: They should rather say, before He receives Grace; for That is the real, and the full Truth. But what Occasion or Need is there, for disturbing common Christians at all with Points of this Nature now? Are we not All of Us, or nearly All, (Ten thousand to One) baptized in Infancy; and therefore regenerated and justified of Course, and thereby prepared pared for good Works, as foon as capable of them by our Years? Good Works must, in this Case at least (which is our Case) follow after Justification and Regeneration, if they are at all: And therefore how impertinent and frivolous is it, if not hurtful rather, to amuse the Ignorant with fuch Notions, which, in our Circumstances, may much better be spared? Our Church has fo well provided for that Case, by Infant Baptism, that We need not so much as enquire whether good Works precede, or follow Justification in the Case of Adults, since it is not our Case. We are very sure that, in our Circumstances, good Works do not precede, but follow Justification, because they come after Battism, if they come at all. The Truth, and the whole Truth of this Matter feems to lie in the following Particulars.

i. Infants are justified in Baptism, without either Faith, or Works; and, if They grow up in Faith and Obedience, the Privilege is continued to Them: If not, it is taken away from Them, till They repent.

2. Adults, coming fitly prepared, are immediately justified in Baptism, by Faith, without any outward Works, without a good Life, while They have not Time for it; But if a good Life does not ensue afterwards, when Time and Opportunities

portunities are given; They forfeit the Privilege

received, till They repent.

3. Adults, coming to Baptism in Hypocrify or Impenitency (like SIMON MAGUS) are not justified, whatever their Faith be; because They want the necessary and essential Qualifications, or Conditions: But, if They afterwards turn to God with true Faith and Repentance; then They enter into a justified State, and so continue all along, unless They relapse.

4. Neither Faith nor Works are required in Infants: Both Faith and inward Works (a Change of Heart) are required in All Adults: Faith and Works (inward and outward) are indispensably required in all Adults who survive their Baptism, in Proportion to their Opportunities, Capacities, or Abilities. But enough of This.

V.

Having hitherto endeavour'd to explain the Nature, and to fet forth the Caufes and Instruments of Justification, in as clear a Manner as I could; I proceed now, lastly, to point out some Extremes, which Many have been found to run into, on the right Hand, or on the lest: So hard a Thing is it to observe a middle Course, and to pursue the safe and even Road. Those Extremes or Deviations are many, but are reducible to two; one of which, for distinction

stinction sake, I may call the Proud Extreme, as disdaining to accept the Grace of God, or the Merits of CHRIST; the other may be called the Libertine Extreme, as abusing the Doctrines of Grace and Satisfaction, to serve the Ends of Licentiousness.

1. I shall begin with the Proud Extreme. The Pagans, formerly, were so proud of their good Morals, that They conceived They had no Need of CHRIST, either to make Them better, or to secure the Divine Acceptance; and therefore They would not so much as listen to the Terms of Christianity 9.

The Pharifaical JEWS were as proud, or prouder, in their Way, claiming, as it were, Justification as a Debt r, rather than a Favour, as if They had no need of Grace, or were too exalted to accept of Pardon. This high Conceit of Themselves and their own Persections. made Them averse to CHRIST, and kept Them

Rom. iv. 4. xi. 6. Compare Truman. Great Propitiation,

p. 184, 300

⁹ Multi enim gloriantur de Operibus, & invenis multos Paganos propterea nolle sieri Christianos, quia quasi sufficiunt sibi de bona Vita sua. Bene vivere Opus est, ait: Quid mihi præcepturus est Christus? Ut bene vivam? jam bene vivo: Quid Mihi neceffarius est Christus? Nullum Homicidium, nullum Furtum, nullam Rapinam facio, Res alienas non concupisco, nullo Adulterio contaminor: Nam inveniatur aliquid in Vita mea quod reprebendatur, & Qui reprehenderit, faciat Christianum. Augustin. in Pfal xxx. Enarr. ii. p. 171. Tom. IV.

Them from submitting to the Gospel-Way of Justification, or Salvation.

The Pelagians, of the fifth Century, by over-magnifying Free-will and natural Abilities, at the same Time depreciating, or slighting Divine Grace, unwarily fell into the Proud Extreme; tho' not so grievously as the Jews and Pagans had done before. St. Austin, however, very justly made Use of the same Way of Reasoning against Them, which St. Paul had made Use of against Jews and Pagans; because the same general Reasons concluded equally against Alls.

The Schoolmen of later Days, and the Romanists still later, one by setting up a Kind of Merit of Congruity t as to Works preceding Justification, and the other by maintaining a

Merit

Against Merit of Congruity, See the XIIIth Article of our Church,

^{*} Hoc possumus dicere quod de Lege dicit Apostolus, si per Naturam Justitia, ergo Christus gratis mortuns est. — Qui suis Meritis Præmia tamquam debita expectant, nec ipsa Merita Dei Gratiæ tribuunt, sed viribus propriæ voluntatis, sicut dictum est de carnali Israel, persequentes Legem Justitiæ, in Legem Justitiæ non perveniunt. Quare? Quia non ex Fide, sed tamquam ex Operibus. Rom. ix. 31, 32. Ipsa est enim Justitia ex Fide, quam Gentes apprehenderunt, de quibus dictum est. Rom. ix. 30.—
Ipsa est Justitia ex Fide, qua credimus nos justificari, hoc est, justos sieri, Gratia Dei per Jesum Christum Dominum nostrum—Quæ ex Deo Justitia in Fide, in Fide utique est, qua credimus nobis Justitiam Divinitus dari, non a Nobis, in Nobis, nossris Viribus sieri. Augustin. Paulino Epist. CLXXXVI. p. 664, 666.
Tom. II.

Merit of Condignity u with respect to Works following, and by admitting Works of Supererogation w, have apparently run too far into the Proud Extreme; only differently modified, or under a Form, somewhat different from That of the felf-affuming Claimants of older Times. Wherefore the First Reformers, finding that the same general Reasons, which St. PAUL had made Use of in another Case, might be justly applicable in this Case also; They laid hold of them, and urged them with irrefistible Force, against all Kinds of human Merit, or pretended Merit, however disguis'd, or however fet off with Art, or Subtilty. Thus came the Doctrine of Justification by Faith alone x, that is to fay, by the alone Merits and Cross of Christ (as Bishop Jewel interprets ity) to be a distinguishing Principle of the Reformation.

The Socinians, by rejecting Christ's Satisfaction, and of Course standing upon their own Works as available to Salvation, independent of it, have only chosen another Way of committing the same Fault, and of running into the Proud Extreme.

The

n Concil. Trident. Seff. VI. Can. 32. Bellarmin. de Justificat. L. V. c. 17.

w Against which, See the XIVth Article of our Church.

★ See the XIth Article of our Church.

y Jewel, Def. of Apology, p. 66.

The Deists, who boast of Their Morality z, in Opposition to Gospel-Faith and Gospel-Obedience, are, in this Respect, so nearly allied to the Pagan Philosophers Who lived in Christian Times, that They may be said to fall under the same Predicament with Them; excepting only the additional Aggravation of Their Apostasy from the Faith whereunto They had been baptized.

Those Enthusiasts, Who sear not to boast even of a sinless Perfection in this Life; They, (whatever Their Pretences are) are remarkably peccant in the Proud Extreme, even to a Degree of Madness, and stand condemn'd by many express Passages both of Old Testament and

New.

Lastly, If there be any amongst Us, as probably there may, who, tho' knowing Themselves to be Sinners, yet think that the good Works of Alms, or other the like bounden Duties, will satisfy for their Sins; and who there-Vol. II. Z upon-

² Their main Principle is thus express'd in a Latin Distich.

Haud crucient Animum quæ circa Religionem Vexantur Lites; Sit modo Vita proba. Baro. Herbert. See my Discourse on Fundamentals, p. 57, 58, 59.

Near akin to These, are Such as magnify moral Virtues, Pagan Virtues, as acceptable in themselves, and needing no Atonement, nor Sacrament, to recommend them to the Divine Acceptance. See The Nature, Obligation, and Efficacy of the Christian Sacraments, p. 56, 57, 65. And Supplement, p. 40, 41, & c. 52, 53, 54.

upon conceive that God would do Them Wrong, if He should not, for Their good Deeds, pardon Their evil Deeds; Such also may be said to err in the Proud Extreme, not considering that all Their good Deeds are only so many strict Dues, and that the paying off a Debt in Part entitles no Man to a Discharge for the Remainder. God, for Christ's Sake a, may give a Discharge for the whole, to every penitent Offender, after His sincerely performing some Part of His Duty: But a Man's own good Works, be they ever so many, or so great, cannot in themselves be pleaded pleaded by Way of proper Atonement for His Sins.

² Non patitur enim justum Dei Judicium, ut justum censeat Aliquem qui Justitiam non habeat: Non habet vero Justitiam ullam Peccator nisi in Christo, & per mysticam arctissimamque illam Unionem cum Christo. Jerem. xxiii. 6. - 2 Cor. v. 21. 1 Cor. i. 30. Quæque ideo tantopere inculcatur in N. T. ubi Fideles sexcentis in Locis dicuntur esse in Christo. Et celebratur pariter in V. T. in Pfal. xlv. Cantico Canticorum toto. Ifa. liv. 5. Hof. ii. 18, 19. Quia scilicet in ca est Fundamentum Justificationis Peccatoris coram Deo. Vinculum vero hujus Unionis præcipuum. absque quo Unio hæc nullatenus consistit, est Fides actualis in Christum, moriturum olim, nunc mortuum, in Adultis; vel Spiritus Fidei in Infantibus electis. Weffelius, Differt. Academ. p. 148. Tum tandem justificari Peccatorem coram Deo sola Fide, qua dextram dat Sponso ac Sponsori, ejusque dextram tenet, & qua sola connubium stabile cum ipso contrahens, Justitia vicaria ejus imputatur illi ut sua, & Jus accipit ad omnia ejus Bona.-Bona Opera postea imponuntur justificatæ (Reginæ) ut in quibus non est Causa regnandi, sed Via tantum ad Regnum Gloriæ. Omnes ergo externe vocati (quibus Rex Messias Sponsor Fæderis, cum Justitia vicaria, omnique Gratia ejus quotidie offertur in Evangelio, Quibusque ipse dextram suam conjugalem blande porrigit) Temetipsos diligenter & serio examinare debent, num huic Regina, Sou Ecclesia veræ, ut ejus Membra genuina, accenseri queant. Ibid. p. 281.

Having thus briefly enumerated the most, or the most common Mistakes or Miscarriages in the Matter of Justification, on the assuming Side, derogating from the Honour of God's free Grace, and from the Merits of Christ, which are the valuable Consideration upon which, or for the sake of which only, God justifies as Many as He does justify; I shall now proceed to observe something of the common Mistakes in the other Extreme, which concerns the necessary, essential Conditions, or Qualifications required in every Adult whom God shall accept.

2. It is a dangerous and fatal Extreme so to magnify, or to pretend to magnify Grace, or Faith, as thereby to exclude, sink, or any Way lessen the Necessity of true and sincere, and (so far as Human Infirmities permit) universal Obedience b. There is the greater Need of the utmost Caution and Circumspection in this Particular, because corrupt Nature is very prone to listen to, and to fall in with any appearing Arguments, any Pretexts, Colours, Handles for Relaxation of Duty, and for reconciling Their Hopes and Their Lusts together. St. PAUL was aware, that Some of ill Minds might be apt to pervert His found Doctrine of Justification by Faith, to the Purposes of Licentiousness; But Truth was not to be suppress'd for Fear Some should abuse it (For what is there which Some or Other may not make an ill Use of?) Neither would it have been right to let one Extreme go uncorrected, only for the preventing the possible, or even probable Danger from weak, or evil-minded Men, Who might take the Handle to run into another. St. PAUL therefore was content fo to correct an Errour on the right Hand, as, at the same Time, to guard against a greater on the left c.

Notwithstanding all his Guards, Some there were (as He supposed there would be) who even in the Apostolical Age did pervert the Doctrine of Grace, to serve the Ends of Licentiousness: And Some or Other, probably, have done the like, designedly or undesignedly, in every Age fince.

fince. St. PAUL had taught, that none of our Works are pure, or perfect enough to abide the Divine Scrutiny, or to claim Justification as a Debtd, or a Matter of Right; which is undoubtedly true: But Libertines changed that true and found Proposition into this very unfound one; that good Works are not so much as necessary Conditions or Qualifications for Justification. St. PAUL had also taught, that Faith, or an humble Reliance upon the Grace of God thro' the Merits of CHRIST, in Opposition to Self-boafting e, or standing upon the Perfection of our own Performances, was our only safe Plea before God, our only sure Way to be justified, after doing the best We could for performing our bounden Duties: This true and important Proposition Some turn'd into quite another, contradictory to the whole Tenour of the Gofpel; Viz. That Faith alone, a dead Faith, separate from evangelical Obedience, is the only Condition of Salvation. Against such Dogmatizers, and against such loose Principles St. JAMES engaged, reproving and confuting the Men and their Errors in few, but very strong Wordsf. St. PETER also and St. JOHN. Z 3 d Rom. iv. 4. xl. 6.

Rom. iii. 27. 1 Cor. i. 29, 31. Ephef. ii. 9. Rom. iv. 22.
James ii. 14—26.

tho' more obscurely, combated the same Errour g.

That Some or Other, in after-Ages, were very prone to run into the Extreme of Licentiousness, taking an Handle from the Doctrine of Grace; as Others were apt to run into the Proud Extreme, from the Doctrine of the Value and Necessity of a good Life; may be judged from what a Father of the Vth Century fays in Opposition to Both h.

It is certain that the Antinomian and Solifidian Doctrines, as taught by Some in later Times, have deviated into a Wild Extreme, and have done infinite Mischief to practical Christianity. I have not Room to enumerate, much less to confute, the many erroneous and dangerous Tenets which have come from That Quarter: Neither would I be forward to expose them again to publick View. They have been

² Pet. i. 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10. 1 John iii. 7, 8, 9, 10.

h Si se Homo justificaverit, & de Justitia sua præsumserit, cadie: Si confiderans & cogitans Infirmitatem suam, & præsumens de Misericordia Dei, neglexerit Vitam suam mundare a Peccatis suis, & se omni Gurgite Flagitiorum demerserit, & ipse cadit. Præ-sumtio de Justitia quasi dextera est: Cogitatio de Impunitate Peccatorum, quasi finistra est. Audiamus Vocem Dei dicentem Nobis, ne declines in dexteram aut sinistram, Prov. iv. 27. Ne præsumas ad Regnum de Justitia tua: Ne præsumas ad peccandum de Misericordia Dei. Ab utroque Te revocat Præceptum divinum, & ab illa Altitudine, & ab ista Profunditate : Illuc si afcenderis, præcipitaberis; hac si lapsus fueris, demergêris, Augustia. in Pfal. xxxi. p. 171. Tom. IV.

been often considered, and often confuted. Let them rather be buried in Oblivion, and never rife up again to bring Reproach upon the Christian Name. But take We due Care so to maintain the Doctrine of Faith, as not to exclude the Necessity of good Works; and so to maintain good Works, as not to exclude the Necessity of CHRIST's Atonement, or the Free Grace of God. Take We Care to perform all evangelical Duties to the utmost of our Power, aided by God's Spirit; and when we have so done, say, that we are unprofitable Servants, having no strict Claim to a Reward, but yet looking for one, and accepting it as a Favour, not challenging it as due in any Right of our own; due only upon free Promise, and that Promise made not in Consideration of any Deserts of ours, but in and thro' the alone Merits, active and paffive, of CHRIST JESUS our Lord.

, A

Danie of Jothania .

Temps of the contract of the c wer's Am and grade to Suggest the We to product with the principal Charle of the United States . เกร็จ ระบบส่งมนุ้งให้ ภัย น ถูงเรือกาก ก็กร o sugar, not rost indulation in a site Confidence in them it is not closed in

AN

ENQUIRY

Concerning the

ANTIQUITY

OF THE

PRACTICE

O F

INFANT-COMMUNION,

As founded on the Notion of its STRICT NECESSITY.

As founded on the Movien of the

STREET PROCESSING

AN

ENQUIRY, &c.

HE Article of Infant-Communion, tho' not much thought of amongst us (as we have not had much Occasion) is a Part of the general Subject of the Eucharist, and may deserve some Consideration at this Time; if it be only for the Sake of clearing up a Point of Doctrine in some Degree, and for the obviating such Scruples as have been raised about it.

Some have censured it, as Ancient Practice built upon erroneous Principles, aggravating every Circumstance after an invidious Manner, in Order to raise a general Prejudice against the Ancients, as of slight Authority.

Others

^a Dallæus de Usu Patrum, L. I. c. viii. p. 175. L. II. c. iv. p. 293. De Cult. Relig. L. V. c. 3, 4, 20. Clericus, Animadv. in Op. Augustini, p. 521. Whithy, Stricturæ Patrum, p. 212, &c.

Others have laid hold on the same Topick, for sinking the Credit of the Fathers with respect to one particular Point; namely, That of Infant-Baptism: For, say They, if the Ancients were so widely mistaken in regard to Infant-Communion; what great stress can be laid, either upon Their Judgment, or Their Practice, in the Article of Infant-Baptism^b?

Others, lastly (tho' very Few in these Parts of the World) have declared their Approbation of Infant-Communion, and have seriously pleaded for a Revival of it. Dr. Bedell, of the last Century (Bishop of Kilmore in Ireland) seems to have been in those Sentiments: And now lately, a pretty large Essay has been published, on Purpose to recommend The Ancient Practice (as it is supposed) of Infant-Communion d.

These Things considered, The Question appears to be worth the looking into: And so my present Design is to offer some Thoughts upon it, in Order to set that Matter, so far as I may, in a just Light, for the removing Scruples, or for the rectifying Misconceptions.

It feems to be a Mistake to imagine, that Infant-Communion (if we understand it of mere Infants)

b See Dr. Wall. Hist. of Inf. Bapt. Part II. c. 9. § 17. Vol.II. p. 447. Ed. 3.

c Bishop Bedell, in User's Letters, No 163. p. 442; 445.
d An Essay in Favour of the ancient Practice of giving the Encharist to Children. By James Peirce of Exon, A. D. 1728.

Infants) was the Ancient Practice of the Church. There is no Appearance of any Thing of that Kind before the Middle of the Third Century, the Time of CYPRIAN; and That in the African Churches only: And all that can be proved from CYPRIAN, is, that Children (Boys and Girls, not mere Infants) were then and there brought to Communion. Neither is there any clear Proof, that They were brought thither under a Notion of any strict Necessity: For it might be done upon fuch prudential Reasons as move Us to bring Children to Church at this Day, training Them up in the Way that They should go; or, if it was founded upon stronger Reasons, they might be such as refolved only into the then present Expediency, or into a fuper-abundant Caution; as I shall endeavour to make out more at large in the Sequel.

From the Middle of the Third Century, down to the Beginning of the Fifth, we hear little or Nothing of the Practice. We must take a large Stride, from St. Cyprian, down as low as to St. Austin, before We come at any Thing which does but look that Way. In St. Austin's Works, from the Time of the Pelagian Controversy (which began about A. D. 410.) there are some Passages which have been thought uncontestable Evidences of the Practice of Infant-Communion in His Time, as likewise of its being founded upon a Notion of strict Necessity, as taught in John the vith.

been

I.

St. Austin hath been supposed to maintain, that Infant-Communion is as necessary to Life Eternal, as Infant-Baptism; and that baptized Infants have as much Need of the Eucharist, as the unbaptized have of the other Sacrament; Both Sacraments being alike necessary to the Salvation of all Persons.

But St. Austin hath never directly and in Terms said, that Baptized Infants cannot be faved without the Eucharist: It is no express Doctrine of That great Man, but a Consequence only, drawn from his Words; and not by any considerable Writers of His Time, or near it (so far as appears) but by Some who came long after Him, and in Contradiction to Those who lived in the Ages next to Him. Whether the Consequence, so drawn and fix'd upon Him in later Ages, be really just; and whether His Meaning was truly such as hath been pretended, is now the Point of Enquiry: And I shall proceed to examine into it with some Care.

First.—If St. Austin's other most avowed, and often repeated Principles are a standing Contradiction to the supposed Necessity of Infant-Communion; That will afford a strong Presumption against what He has been charged with, and such as cannot, or in Reason ought not, to be over-ruled, but by Something stronger. This being premised, as a safe general Ground to rest upon, and abide by, I now go on to the Enquiry.

St. Austin's Doctrine of the compleat Sufficiency of Baptism to the Salvation of Infants, is so fully express'd many Ways, and so frequently inculcated in his Works; that it is scarce conceivable, how He could imagine The Eucharist to be necessary over and above; unless we could suppose Him the most inconsistent, self-destroying Writer in the World. To come to Particulars.

1. In the first Place, His constant, standing Doctrine is, that Baptism confers perfect Remission of all Sin e: Which was also the known Doctrine of the whole Church before His Time, and after f. Now, as Salvation must of Course follow

e Qui regenerantur in Christo, Remissionem accipiunt prorsus omnium Peccatorum. Augustin. de Nupt. & Concupiscent. L. I. c. xxvi. p. 294. Tom. X. Ed. Bened. Conf. p. 299, 423, 424, 458, 540. Tom. X.

f See my Review, &c. c. x. p. 353, &c. And Bingham, B. XI. c. i. § 2.—B. XIX. c. i. § 2.

follow upon perfect Remission so long as it abides (and abide it must in Infants Baptized, 'till guilty of actual Sin) with what Sense or Confistency could St. Austin teach, that Infants once baptized could have any present Need of the Eucharift, to bring Them into a State of Salvation?

2. Another standing Principle with St. Au-STIN, was, that Baptism, fingly, gives a prefent, certain Title to Life eternal g. How then could the same Father confishently say or mean, that They could not be faved without the Eucharift h?

3. It was likewise an avowed Principle with St. AUSTIN, and the whole Church, that Infants, by their Baptism, were constituted Fideles, were of the Number of the Faithfuli; which

3 Simul Justitiæ, Vitæque æternæ Secundi Hominis Sociati renascuntur in Baptismo. Augustin. de Peccat. Merit. L. I. c. xvi. p. 12. Absit ut Causam Parvulorum sic relinquamus, ut esse Nobis dicamus incertum, utrum in Christo regenerati, si moriantur parvuli, transeant in æternam Salutem. De Don. Perseverant. c. xii. p. 837. Tom. X. Conf. p. 273, 274, 279, 291, 292, 318, 328, 449, 450, 482, 536, 680, 686, 899, 902, 1023, 1074, Tom. X. item p. 942. Tom. V. & 1190, T. V.

Quicunque negat Parvulos per Baptismum Christi a Perditione liberari, & Salutem percipere sempiternam, Anathema sit. Concil. Carthag. in Augustin. Epist. CLXXV. p. 620, Tom. II.

Conf. p. 266, 268, 511, 585. h Conf. Wall's Hist. of Infant-Baptism, Part I. c. xv. § 5.

Vol. I. p. 202.

i Parvulum, etsi nondum Fides illa, quæ in Credentium Voluntate consistit, jam tamen ipsius Fidei Sacramentum Fidelem facit.

which was as High and Honourable a Name as could be given to actual Communicants, to true and good Christians. If therefore Infants were already, by Their Baptism, intituled to the Name and Privileges of Communicants, for the Time being, They could not want the outward Sacrament of the Eucharist, to make Them more so.

- 4. Another noted Principle of St. Austin was, that The Grace of a Mediator was the one Thing necessary to the Salvation of Infants, and that fuch Grace was given Them, in and by Baptism k: Therefore again, by His Accounts, the partaking of the outward Sacrament of the Eucharist could not be necessary to the Salvation of baptized Infants.
- 5. It was St. Austin's fettled Persuasion, that Baptized Infants could never afterwards forfeit the falutary Grace once given at the Font, till They should become guilty of actual Sins 1.

VOL. II. From

-Fidelis vocatur, non Rem ipsa Mente annuendo, sed ipsius Rei Sacramentum percipiendo. Augustin. Ad Bonifac. Ep. XCVIII. (alias XXIII.) p. 268.

Ubi ergo Parvulos ponimus baptizatos, nisi inter Fideles, ficut universæ ubique Ecclesiæ clamat Auctoritas? Augustin. De Peccat. Merit. L.I. c. xxxiii. p. 35. Conf. c. xxv. p. 20. Item Serm. CCXCIV. p. 1119, 1190, 1192. T.V.

k Vid. Augustin. Epist. CLXVI. p. 585, 591, 592. De Peccat.

Merit. Lib. I. c. xxii, xxv.

1 Respondeo, tantam illius Sacramenti, Hoc est, Baptismi Salutaris, esse Virtutem in sancta Compage Corporis Christi, ut, semel generatus per Aliorum Carnalem Voluptatem, cum semel regeneratus suerit per Aliorum Spiritualem Voluntatem, deinceps From whence it plainly follows, that They could not forfeit it by Their not receiving the Eucharist during Their Non-Age.

6. St. AUSTIN further teaches, that Infants, by Their Baptism, are made the Temple of the Holy Spirit, and thereby sealed, and insured to everlasting Salvation m. How could This be, if Baptism still wanted to be rendred salutary by the Other Sacrament, by the outward Eucharist?

7. Elsewhere He expressly maintains, that Spiritual Regeneration (by which He means Baptism of Water, and of the Spirit) is alone sufficient to deliver an Infant from the Power of Darkness, and to translate Him into the Kingdom of Christ; and to secure Him, if He dies in that State, against all Manner of Pains or Perils in a World to come n. Could He consistently non possit Vinculo alienæ Iniquitatis obstringi, cui nulla sui Voluntate consentit.——Semel perceptam Parvulus Gratiam non amittit nisi propria Impietate, & c. Epist. XCVIII. (alias XXIII.) p.263, 264.

ni Dicimus ergo, in baptizatis Parvulis, quamvis id nesciant, babitare Spiritum Sanctum, Ep. CLXXXVII. c. viii. p. 686. Templum Dei suturus es, cum Baptismum acceperis. De Fid. &

Op. c. xii. p. 175. Tom. VI.

n Tanta est Dei Miserciordia— Ut etiam prima Hominis Ætas, id est, Infantia, si Sacramenta Mediatoris acceperit, etiamsi hanc in eis Vitam siniat, translata scilicet a Potestate Tenebrarum in Regnum Christi, non solum Pœnis non præparetun æternis, sed ne ulla quidem post Mortem purgatoria Tormenta patiatur. Sufficit enim sola spiritualis Regeneratio, ne post Mortem obsit quod Carnalis Generatio cum Morte contraxit. De Civit. Dei, L. XXI. e. xvi. p. 636, Tom. VIII. Cons. De Peccat. Merit. L. I. c. xv. XVI.

fistently say This; had He thought that Both Sacraments were as necessary, as Baptism alone?

8. Another Principle of St. Austin's, confonant with Those before mention'd, is, that Baptism makes an Infant a Member of Christ: not merely a Member of the outward Church; but a vital or living Member of Christ's Body.

9. Another noted Doctrine of St. Austin, near akin to the former, is, that the Sacrament of Baptisin amounts to a compleat Ingraffment; or Incorporation in Christ, and that such Incorporation or Ingraffment is a principal End and Use of Baptisin, being a necessary Qualification for, or Introduction to Eternal Life: Which He collects from our Lord's Doctrine laid down in John vi. From all which we may reason-Vol. II. A a 2

N. B. The He fays Sacramenta in the plural, He means only Baptism; as is plain by what follows. It is very common with the Fathers to express a fingle Sacrament in that plural Way; as is well known to the Learned, with the Reasons of it. Daille has often noted it; and has manifested the same by great Variety of Evidences, in his Book De Confirmatione.

Nec quigierenni piff per Spiritualem Conner

O Nec viveremus, nist per Spiritualem Connexionem Membra hujus essemus: Ideo Nobis Opus suit nasci, & renasci, Epist. CLXXXVII. p. 688. Membrum Christi suturus es, cum acceperis Baptismum. De Fid. & Op. c. xii. p. 175. Tom. VI. Omnes qui renascuntur, Membra ipsius siunt.—Si vis ascendere, esto in Corpore Christi: Si vis ascendere, esto Membrum Christi, Serm. CCXCIV. p. 1188. Tom. V.

P Nihil agitur aliud cum Parvuli baptizantur, nifi ut incorporentur Ecclesiæ, id est, Christi Corpori Membrisque socientur,— Nonne Veritas sine ulla Ambiguitate proclamat, non solum in Regnum Dei non baptizatos Parvulos intrare non posse, sed nec Vitam æternam posse habere, præter Christi Corpus, cui ut incorporentur, Sacramento Baptismatis imbuuntur? Augustin. De Pes-ably draw the following Inferences: 1. That, fince Baptism amounts to a compleat Incorporation, for the Time being, it could not want the Other Sacrament to make it more so. 2. That, fince Baptismal Incorporation is a Pledge of eternal Life by it self, it could not need the Eucharist to make it salutary. 3. That, since St. Austin drew This Doctrine chiefly from folm vi, He must have understood the Incorporation there spoken of, as a Privilege common to Both Sacraments. But of That Particular I shall say more in its proper Place.

cat. Merit. L. III. c. iv. p. 74, 75.

only suppose that a baptized Infant has Part in the Body of Christ; but that He is, by his Baptism, dipped, as it were, in the Blood of Christ: For He teaches that Baptism, or the Baptismal Water, is red (so He figuratively expresses it) with the Blood of Christ, as consecrated in it, or by it. Other Fathers of the Church expressthe same Thing in still plainer and stronger Terms: And it was the prevailing Doctrine of Antiquity, that all the spiritual Graces of the Eucharist were conveyed in Baptism, as well as in the Eucharist; and that as Many as were duly baptized, were, in Effect, thereby made ⁴ Significabat Mare rubrum Baptismum Christi. Unde rubet Baptismus Christi; nisi Christi Sanguine consecratus? In Joann. Tract. XI. p. 377. Tom. III. Cons. p. 942. Tom. V.

Partakers of the Body and Blood of Christ : Such being the high Notions of the Sufficiency of Baptism, universally prevailing in those Times, what Room could there then be for the Doctrine of the strict Necessity of Infant-Communion?

11. Another Doctrine of St. Austin, is, that All Those, who are really Members of Christ, true and living Members, do, ipso Facto, in Virtue of such their Membership, continually eat his Flesh, and drink his Blood's. Hence it follows, that Infants baptized, having thereby been made true and living Members of Christ, and having never yet forfeited Their Privilege by any actual Sin, must of Course be supposed, in Virtue of That Their Membership, continually to eat Christ's Flesh, and to drink his Blood, in fuch a Sense as St. Austin there speaks of; and therefore could not be by Him supposed to lie under any Necessity of having That by Trun Aa 3

The Testimonies are collected into one View by Albertinus De Eucharist. p. 448, 564. And by Bingham, XI. 10, 4. XV.

^{4, 7.}S Qui ergo est in ejus Corporis Unitate, id est, in Christianorum compage Membrorum (cujus Corporis Sacramentum Fideles, communicantes de Altari, sumere consuverun) Ipse vere dicendus est manducare Corpus Christi, & bibere Sanguinem Christi. De Civit. Dei. L. XXI. p. 646. N. B. St. Austin allows this to be true, provided such Membership has not been forseited by some voluntary Transgressions; and therefore He must be presumed to allow the Fact with Regard to baptized Insants not yet capable of actual Sin.

Two Sacraments, which was effectually supplied by One.

12. I must further take Notice of Another Principle of St. Austin's, which may appear fomewhat refined and uncommon; but was a favourite Notion, and what He much dwelt upon: It was This; that Baptism makes a Perfon to be that very Thing which is mystically represented and participated in the Eucharist. He grounds the Notion on St. PAUL's Words: We being Many are one Bread, and one Body, &c. Therefore Christians are Themselves the Body fignified, or represented by the Bread of the Eucharist: Therefore every true Christian makes a Part of what That Bread fignifies, and of what the Communicants partake of. Whether the Notion be strictly just, is not now the Question: It was St. Austin's Notion, and That is sufficient for our present Purpose. For, t Si bene accepistis, Vos estis quod accepistis: Apostolus enim dicit, unus Panis unum Corpus Multi sumus.— Vos ante, jejunii Humiliatione, & exorcismi Sacramento, quasi molebamini: Accessit Baptismus, & Aqua quasi conspersi estis, ut ad Formam Panis veniretis.——Accedit Spiritus Sanctus, post Aquam Ignis, & efficimini Panis, quod est Corpus Christi Serm. CCXXVII: p. 973. Tom. V. Conf. Serm. CCXXIX. p. 976.

Ad Aquam venistis & conspersi estis, & Unum facti estis: Accedente Ferwore Spiritus Sancti cotti estis, & Panis Dominicus facti estis. Ecce quod accepistis. Serm. CCXXIX. p. 976. Conf. Serm. CCLXXII. p. 1103. Tom. V. Contr. Faust. L. XII. c. viii. N. B. The losing this Notion, has been the chief Occasion of missing St. Austin's true Sense: The reviving it will make every Thing clear.

if Baptized Infants, being of the Number of the Faithful, and fo making a Part of Christ's Body the Church, were, in Consequence, a Part also of the Body signified and participated in the Eucharift; They could not need the outward Eucharist to bind Them closer to the Body of Christ, or to make Them Partakers of it. This Argument is well urged by Fulgen-TIUS", to the very fame Purpose for which I now urge it; namely, to shew that Baptism, during Infancy, was in St. Austin's Account, equivalent to Both Sacraments; and in fuch Case, either virtually supplied, or fully superfeded the external Eucharist. I have now enumerated 12 feveral Articles of Doctrine, All maintained by St. Austin, and All feeming to contradict (directly or indirectly) the supposed Necessity of Infant-Communion. Wherefore, it appears not reasonable to conceive, that He really espoused any such Necessity, in Contradiction to his own standing Principles: Much less probable is it, that He should go on in it, Time after Time, for near 20 Years together, never suspecting any Inconsistency in it (so far as appears) never charged by his Adversaries, the Pelagians, with it. Such is our Argument a priori, that St. Austin could not teach, could not intend to teach the strict Necessity of Infant-Communion: He could not do it with any Sense or Consistency; because He constantly maintained, many Ways, the compleat Sufficiency of Baptism to the Salvation of all Infants, during such their Infant-State.

Aa4

120t

a Fulgent. ad Ferrand. p. 226.

Secondly -- But, befides what has been thus urged a priori, to shew that He could not teach fuch Necessity; there are yet other Considerations a posteriori, to be taken in, which may persuade us that He did not.

1. He did not ordinarily interpret John vith of the outward Sacrament of the Eucharist, but of the inward Grace fignified by it, or exhibited in it. There is this very observable Difference between John iii. 5. and John vi. 53. that the former Text teaches the Necessity both of the outward Sacrament, and of the inward Grace; while the latter teaches only the Necessity of the inward Grace, abstracted from the outward Had the Eucharist been as plainly Signs. pointed out in John the vith, as Baptism is in John the iiid, Both must have been allowed to be equally necessary: But it is worth observing, that the former teaches the Necessity of spiritual Regeneration and Incorporation, as confined to one particular Form, or outward Instrument; the latter teaches the same Necessity of spiritual spiritual Incorporation, at large, not mentioning any particular Form, not restraining the Privilege or Benefit to the Eucharist only.

St. Austin feems to have been well aware of This Distinction, by His so frequently interpreting John vi, not directly of the outward Eucharist, but of the inward Graces only, fignified by it. Sometimes He interprets the Feeding, there mention'd, to mean only The partaking of the Body of Christ, or of being incorporated in Christ w: Sometimes, He makes it the fame with abiding, or dwelling in Christ x, or with being Members of Christy, or with being the Temple of Christ z: All which Privileges He look'd upon as common to Both Sacraments, and not confined to the Eucharist only;

Re vera Christi Corpus manducare, & ejus Sanguinem bibere; hoc est, in Christo manere, ut in Illo maneat & Christus. De y Ut simus in ejus Corpore, sub ipso Capite in Membris. In Johan. Tract. XXVII. p. 502. Manemus autem in Illo, cum sumus Membra ejus, p. 504. Nec Isti ergo dicendi sunt manducare Corpus Christi, quoniam nec in Membris computandi sunt Christi. De Civit. Dei, L. XXI. c. xxv. p. 646.

Civit. Dei. L. XXI. c. xxv. p. 647.

² Manet autem Ipse in Nobis, cum sumus Templum ejus. Johan. Tract. XXVII. p. 504. Signum quia manducat & bibit, Hoc est, si manet & manetur, si habitat & inhabitatur, ib. 502.

W Nisi manducaverint Homines Carnem ejus: Hoc est, Participes facti fuerint Corporis ejus. De Peccat. Merit. L. III. c. iv. Vis ergo vivere de Spiritu Christi? In Corpore esto Christi.---Accedat, credat, incorporetur, ut vivificetur. In Joann. Tract. XXVI. p. 499. Tom. III. Conf. De Civit. Dei. L. XXI. c. xxv. p. 646. x Manducare illam Escam, & illum bibere Potum, est in Christo manere, & Illum manentem in Se habere. In Johann. Tract. II. 501. Conf. 504.

only; as may sufficiently appear from what I have before noted in Relation to the Sufficiency of Baptism, as taught by the same Father. Therefore, by His Accounts, Infants must have been supposed to enjoy, in and by Virtue of Their Baptism, all that John the vith directly speaks of as necessary to Life; and therefore This Father did not so interpret that Chapter as to make it favour the supposed Necessity of Infant-Communion.

Sometimes He interprets The Meat mention'd in St. John, of an Alliance, or Union with Christa, and sometimes of the Grace sent from above; which, by His Accounts, is common to Baptism with the Eucharist: And therefore again, baptiz'd Infants, as such, must have been by Him supposed to feed spiritually upon Christ, in such a Sense as our Lord there speaks of, and could not want the outward Eucharist to make Them Partakers of the spiritual Banquet: Wherefore St. Austin scruples not to say, that while a Person is regenerated, or born again (meaning in Baptism) He feeds upon Christ, is feasted, is satiated with that Heavenly Food: Such plainly is His Meaning.

2. To

^a Hunc Cibum & Potum Societatem vult intelligi Corporis & Membrorum suorum. In Johan. Tract. XXVII. p. 502.

b Nemo autem implet Legem, nist quam adjuverit Gratia; id est, Panis qui de Cœlo descendit. In Johan. Tract. XXVI. p. 494.
c Qui credit, manducat: invisibiliter faginatur, quia invisibiliter renascitur: Infans natus est novus intus est. Ubi novellatur, ibi satiatur. In Johan, Tract. XXVI. p. 494.

2. To confirm This farther, it may be noted, that St. Austin makes the putting on of Christ (which is done in Baptism) to be tantamount in Sense, and equivalent in Virtue or Efficacy for the obtaining eternal Life, with the feeding upon Him d: Indeed, all that He meant to prove against the Pelagians, by quoting John vi, was only This; that Infants must have Christ, must have Part in Christ, in Order to eternal Life; and could not be faved, could not have Life, in or by their natural, unregenerate Statee, as the Pelagians pretended. He had no Occation to fay, or to conceive, baptized Infants could not be faved without the Eucharift; neither does He once say it: But What He was concern'd to prove, was, that unbaptized Infants, ordinarily,

d Non autem habere Parvulos Vitam, nisi habeant Christum, quem procul dubio habere non possunt, nisi induerint Eum eo modo quo Scriptum est; Quotquot in Christo baptizati estis, Christum induistis: Non ergo habere Vitam, nisi habeant Christum, Johannes Evangelista testatur dicens, Qui habet Filium, habet Vitam: Qui non habet Filium Vitam non habet. Contr. Julian L.VI. c. xxvii. p. 677.

c Quid enim apertius tot tantisque Testimoniis Divinorum Eloquiorum, quibus dilucidissime apparet, nec præter Christi Societatem ad Vitam Salutemque æternam posse quemquam Hominem pervenire.—Nonne Veritas sine ulla Ambiguitate proclamat, non solum in Regnum Dei, non baptizatos Parvulos intrare non posse, sed nec Vitam æternam posse habere præter Christi Corpus, cui ut incorporentur, Sacramento Baptismatis imbuuntur. De Peccat. Merit. L. III. c. iv. p. 74, 75.

ordinarily, could not come at Life eternals: And He proves it by this Medium; that Infants could have no Life without partaking of Christ, whom They could not partake of without being incorporate in Christ, and That by Baptism. That such Incorporation, once made in Baptism, wants to be compleated, improved, or renewed, by the Eucharist during Infancy, He no where teaches: But in a Multitude of Places (as hath been shewn) He either directly or indirectly teaches, that, during the State of mere Infancy, it does not: Because Baptism alone, for the Time being, is fufficient, to all Intents and Purposes, and is, in effect, feeding upon the Body and Blood of Christ.

3. To confirm this still farther, We may note, that St. Austin entertained fo high an Opinion of the Virtue and Efficacy of Baptism to Salvation, from the Beginning to the End of the spiritual Life; that He look'd upon all other religious Offices as deriving, in a great Measure, their Use and Force from it. He supposes not only the first Remission at the Font, but all Remission f Hoc Testimonium adhibitum est Evangelicum, ne Parvuli non-baptizati vitam posse habere credantur. Epist. ad Paulin.

^{186.} N° 28. p. 673. Si autem cedunt Domino Apostolorum, qui dicit non habituros Vitam in semetipsis, nisi manducaverint Carnem Filii Hominis & biberint Sanguinem (quod nisi baptizati non utique possunt) nempe aliquando fatebuntur Parvulos non-baptizatos Vitam habero non posse. Ibid No 29. p. 673.

Remission upon Prayer or Repentance afterwards, to look back to Baptisin, and to stand in it, or to be as Nothing without it g. Even Euchariftical Remission, and Eucharistical Graces, by the fame Principle, can be only Baptisinal Remission and Baptismal Graces continued, or reiterated. He calls the Lord's Prayer a quotidian Baptism h, while He considered it as an Instrument of Pardon, and as offered up in and with the Eucharist ; which amounts to calling the Eucharist it felf a kind of quotidian Baptism. Now, if St. Austin believed, that Baptism had its federal Effect during the whole spiritual Life, and that it operated in all other religious Offices, or Services, deriving, as it were, its own Virtue and Efficacy upon them; it is obvious to conceive how, in His Account,

an

g Augustin. De Nupt. & Concupisc. L. I. p. 298.

Hesychius well expresses his Sense in sew Words: Virtus præcedentis Baptismatis operatur & in ea quæ possea asta suerit Pænitentia. In Levit. L. II. p. 118. Compare my Review, &c. p. 329.

h Kemissio Peccatorum non est in sola Ablutione facri Baptismatis, sed etiam in Oratione Dominica quotidiana.—In illa invenietis quasi quotidianum Baptismum vestrum. Serm. CCXIII. c. viii. Conf. De Fid. & Op. c. xxvi. p. 191. Enchirid. c. lxxi. p. 223. De Symbol. ad Catech. c. vii. p. 555. Tom. VI.

1 Constitut Deus in Ecclesia, Tempore, Misericordia proroganda stutistica Misericordia proroganda superiore.

i Constituit Deus in Ecclesia, Tempore, Misericordiæ prorogandæ, Quotidianam Medicinam, ut dicamus dimitte nobis debita nostra, &c. ut his Verbis lota facie, ad Altare accedamus, & his Verbis lota facie, Corpore Christi & Sanguine communicamus. Serm. De Scriptur. p. 96. Tom. VI. Conf. p. 869. Eucharist called quotidiana Medicina. Epist. LIV. (alias CXVIII) p. 125.

an Infant already baptized, and having hitherto done Nothing to forfeit the Graces or Benefits of it, might be justly said to partake even of the Lord's Table, as partaking of That Sacrament, which virtually carried in it all the Life and Spirit of the Other; and which was originally, primarily, eminently, All that the Other is in a secondary Way, or in Consequence of Baptism.

4. I shall only add farther (to shew that St. Austin had no Notion of any fuch strict Necessity of the Eucharist to All Persons baptized, as He had of the Necessity of Baptism to the Unbaptized) that, when a Cafe was put to Him, concerning the Salvation of the Thief upon the Cross k, as dying unbaptized, He appeared to be very much perplexed with it, and not willing to admit the Fact; conceiving that, probably, the Thief had received Baptism, or however that the negative could not be proved. He esteem'd that Solution to be the fafest, to evade the whole Difficulty. All the while, tho' He was well aware, or might certainly know, that the fame Thief died without ever receiving the Holy Communion; vet He was in no Pain about it, so far as ap= pears, nor look'd upon it, as any Difficulty at all:

k Augustin. de Orig. Animæ, Lib. I. c. ix. p. 343. Lib. III. c. ix. p. 379.

all: A plain Sign, that He had no fuch Opinion of the strict Necessity of the Eucharist to Salvation, as He had of the Necessity of Baptism.

Having thus endeavoured to shew, many Ways, that St. Austin consistently could not, yea and that He did not teach the Necessity of Infant-Communion; what hinders that We may not now safely and justly reject the contrary Supposition, as a vulgar Errour, or as an injurious Charge upon a very great and good Man, One of the ablest Divines of his Time? It will be pleaded, notwithstanding, that the same Father has, in several Places of his Works, laid down this Principle; that Infants, without Baptism, and without partaking of the Lord's Body and Blood!, or without partaking of the Lord's Table m, cannot enter into Life:

¹ Beatæ Memoriæ Innocentius Papa, fine Baptismo Christi, & fine Participatione Corporis & Sanguinis Christi vitam non habere Parvulos, dixit. Augustin. ad Bonisac. contr. 2 Epist. Pelag. L. II. c. iv. p. 436. Tom. X.

Si ergo, ut tot & tanta Testimonia concinunt, nec Salus, nec Vita æterna sine Baptismo, & Corpore & Sanguine Domini cuiquam speranda est, frustra sine his promittitur Parvulis. De Peccator. Merit. L. I. c. xxiv. p. 20.

Nullus qui se meminit Catholicæ Fidei Christianum, negat aut dubitat, Parvulos non accepta Gratia Regenerationis in Christo, sine Cibo Carnis ejus & Sanguinis Potu, non habere in se Vitam. Ad Paulin. Epist. 185. (alias 106.) p. 673.

m Ecclesiæ Christi insitum tenent præter Baptismum & Parti-

m Ecclesse Christi insitum tenent præter Baptismum & Participationem Mensæ Dominicæ, non solum ad Regnum Dei, sed nec ad Salutem & Vitam æternam posse Quemquam Hominem pervenire

And further, He has fometimes interpreted, as it feems, John vi. 53. directly of the Lord's Table n. But, is it any where expressly or directly faid, that baptized Infants cannot have Life without the Eucharist? No: not once, in all This Father's Writings. And yet, if That were really his Meaning, it is very strange and unaccountable that He should never once declare it in plain or broad Terms. Why did He never argue against the Pelagians (as the Objection supposes He should) in some such Form as This, viz. That it is so far from being true, that unbaptized Infants can have Life; that even Infants baptized can have no Life without the Eucharist over and above Their Baptism? This would have been arguing a Fortiori, and in a very clear and affecting Way; fuch as could not have escaped so acute a Wit, had That been really His Meaning, or fuch His Principle: But He has never done it; which alone is nire. De Peccator. Merit. L. I. c. xxiv. p. 19. Infantes sunt, sed Mensæ ejus participes siunt, ut habeant in se Vitam. Serm. CLXXIV. p. 834. Tom. V. But compare p. 973.

p. 834. Tom. V. But compare p. 973. Cur ministratur Sanguis (qui de fimilitudine Peccati in Remisfionem fusus est Peccatorum) quem bibat parvulus ut habere possit Vitam, si de nullius Peccati Origine venit in Mortem. Opus imperfect. contr. Julian. L. II. c. xxx. p. 967.

'n Dominum audiamus, inquam, non quidem Hoc de Sacramento lawacri dicentem, sed de Sacramento Mensa sua, quo Nemo ritè nisi baptizatus accedit: Niss manducaveritis, &c. non habebitis Vitam in Vobis. Quid ultra quærimus? De Peccator. Merit. L. I. c. xx. p. 15.

is a good prefumptive Argument, that He never meant it. But in Order to give a just Solution of the objected Difficulties arifing from fome few Passages, seemingly repugnant to the whole Tenour of His standing Doctrines; We ought to attend carefully to His other most avowed Tenets, and to His customary Train of Ideas. Infants cannot be faved without Baptism, and without partaking of the Body and Blood of Christ. Right: They cannot be faved without the outward washing, and the inward Grace superadded: They cannot be faved without Baptism, and what Baptism constantly carries with ito, where no Bar or Obstacle interferes; as there is none in that case. But what is it which Baptism carries with it? St. AUSTIN has before told us: Infants are thereby cleansed from all Defilement, purged from all Sin, for the Time being: They are become regenerate by the Holy Spirit, are of the Number of the Faithful, are the Children of God, VOL. II.

o Chrysostom's Account of Baptism, comprized in a beautiful Climax, may be worth the Inferting, to be compared with St. Austin's.

[&]quot;You are herein made not only Free but Holy; not only Ho-" ly, but just likewise; not barely just, but Children also; not Children only, but Heirs; nor merely Heirs, but Brethren of Christ; nor Brethren only, but Co-heirs; nor Co-heirs on-

[&]quot;Iy, but Members also; nor Members only, but his Temple; nor "Temple only, but Organs of the Holy Spirit." Chrysoft. Ho-mil ad Neophyt.

Vid. Wall. Inf. B. Part I. c. xiv. §. 3

have Part in Christ, and His Passion, and the falutary Influences of it; are the Temple of the Holy Ghost, and of Christ, are Members of Christ's Body, are incorporate with Him, abiding in Him, inhabited by Him: They have put on Christ, have been dipp'd in His Blood, feasted and satiated with it; yea, They are Partakers of His Body, and are Themselves a Part of what is fignified, and of what is participated in the Eucharift. What can They want more, during Their Infant-State, to make Them Partakers of Christ's Body and Blood, or Partakers of the Lord's Table? It may be faid perhaps, They are not actually, not literally, Communicants: They have not eaten the eucharistical Bread, nor drank the confecrated Wine: Very true: But yet They are Partakers of the Spiritual Feast, and have a Part in the mystical Banquet; and therefore are, in Effect, and in just Construction of Gospel-Law, Companions at the Lord's Table. They are Fideles, that is, Communicants, in just Account (being neither Catechumens, nor Penitents) and therefore virtually, or interpretatively, Partakers of the Altar P. They have all their Christian Privileges

P Daille Himself allows that the Ancients, in some Cases, conceived a virtual Confirmation, to amount to the same with askual. By Parity of Reason, a virtual Communion must have been look'd upon as tantamount to real. His Words are, entire, have never forfeited any of them. If indeed, They had any new Sins to answer for; or if They had absented from the Communion through any Contempt, or wilful Neglect; They might then be thought to have impaired Their first Privileges, or in some Degree to have remounced them: But such is not Their Case. Baptism made Them Commensales at once, as Admission into a Corporation makes a Man free of that Corporation, and of all the Franchises of it, 'till forfeited by culpable Neglect. Therefore baptized Infants, during Their Minority, are Communicants in Right, as true Christians, Vol. II. Bb 2 and Justi autem, eodemque Sensu Sancti, item Fideles apud Veteres dicebantur Christiani, qui omni Ecclesiæ communione fruebantur, adeoque, quod summum erat, Eucharistiæ Participes ad Mensam Domini accumbebant: Qui partim Catechumenis, partim Pænitentibus opponebantur, ex quibus jus istius communionis Illi quidem nondum erant adepti, Hi vero crimine suo amiserant.—

Apparet Patres (Eliberitanòs) Eum qui in Fide qua vinctus erat, sed sine Manus Impositione decesserat, eodem Numero ac Nomine censeri, quo suisset si Vivus Manus Impositionem accessisset. Dallæus de Consirmat. p.162. Cons. De Cult.Relig. p.267.

He had faid before:

Non invitus concefferim Eliberitani Concilli Temporibus & lequentibus obtinuisse, ut nisi Qui Manus Impositionem accepis-

sent, Nulli ad Eucharistiam admitterentur. P. 161.

These Things laid together, it appears by the Consession even of Daille Himself, that those Ancient Fathers understood Insants Baptized to be in Church-Account Justi, Sancii, Fideles, or in one Word Communicants, tho' They lived not to partake either of the Eucharist, or the Chrism: There were but three Orders in all; Communicants, Catechumens, Penitents: Now it is plain that Insants baptized were neither Catechumens, nor Penitents; therefore They must have been Communicants in Church-Account; not literally, but wirtually, or interpretatively such.

and as Denizens of the City of God; and They are also Communicants in Effect, and in real Enjoyment, as really partaking of the Christian Banquet.

It may still be objected, that St. Austin has never explained His Meaning in the Way which I have here done. I allow that He has not directly done it: But He has, here and there, dropp'd Intimations more than fufficient to enable Us to do it for Him, and to warrant Us in the doing it. He had no Occasion Himfelf to clear up the Difficulty in fuch a Way, fince no One had objected it to Him. Probably it was no Difficulty at all in those Days, while the ancient Principles of the Church were better understood, than they have been in later Times. However, it is allowable to make Use of any reasonable Supposition, by which fo eminent an Author may turn out confiftent with Himself, and may stand clear of the invidious Charge of Self-Contradiction in a momentous Article. It is no more than doing Justice to His great and admired Name. and to the Church of God in His Time, as well as to an important Doctrine of practical Christianity.

I had almost forgot to take Notice, how, and why St. Austin was led to make Use of John Fohn the vith. 53. (which He supposed to concern chiefly the Sacrament of the Eucharist) in Order to prove the Necessity of Baptism to Life eternal. He would have had no Occasion for that Text at all, had it not been for the refined Subtilties of the Pelagians in evading other Texts. John iii. 5. was express, that without Baptism no One could enter into the Kingdom of God; and That might have sufficed with fair or reasonable Disputants: But the Pelagians eluded it, by contriving an odd Distinction between God's Kingdom, and Life eternal; pretending that unbaptized Infants, tho' They could not enter into the Kingdom of God; properly fo called, yet might however be admitted to a State of Life and Blis in a World to come 9. Now, St. Austin, observing such Their perverse Subtilty, had Recourse to John vi. 53. in order to defeat and frustrate it. For there, when our Lord again speaks of an Incorporation in Christ, as renewed in the Eucha-

Bb 3 rift,

Habent quo confugiant, atque ubi delitescant, quia non ait Dominus, Si quis non renatus suerit ex Aqua & Spiritu, non habebit Vitam, Sed, ait, non intrabit in Regnum Dei: Nam si illud dixisset, nulla hinc Dubitatio possit oboriri. Auseratur ergo Dubitatio —— Dominum audiamus, inquam, non quidem Hoc de Sacramento Lavacri dicentem, sed de Sacramento Mense sue quo Nemo rite nisi Baptizatus accedit: Nist manducaveritis, &c. Augustin. de Peccat. Merit. L. I. c. xx. p. 15. Cons. Serm. CCXCIV. p. 1183. Tom. V. De Origin. Animæ, L. III. c. xiii, p. 382. Tom. X.

rift, the Style runs, that without That you have no Life in you: Therefore it is plain, that any Person who has no Part in Christ, who has Nothing but His natural State to trust to, is not only thut out from the Kingdom of God, but also from eternal Life. Neither could it be of Moment to urge, that what our Lord has here faid in John vi. related more immediately to the Sacrament of the Eucharist, than to the other Sacrament of Baptism, upon which the Debate turn'd: For, the Eucharifical Incorporation depends entirely upon the Baptismal one; owes all its Force and Virtue to it, and is but the same Thing renewed (and renewed it cannot be, if it never commenced): Therefore Baptism, the initiating Sacrament, the Foundation of our Union with Christ, and the very Soul and Spirit of All the Graces of the Eucharist, must be necessary to Life; which was the Thing to be proved. Such appears to be the Turn and Process of St. Austin's Reasoning on this Head : And being so understood.

nonne

^{*} Dilucidissime apparet nec præter Christi Societatem ad Vitam Salutemque æternam posse quemquam Hominum pervenire ----Nihil agitur aliud, cum Parvuli baptizantur, nisi ut incorporentur Ecclesia, id est, Christi Corpori Membrisque socientur - nunquid & illud ambiguum est, nist quis renatus fuerit, &c. - nunquid & illud, quia nisi manducaverint Homines Carnem ejus, Hoc est, Participes facti fuerint Corporis ejus, non habebunt Vitam? His atque ejusmodi aliis, quæ nunc prætereo, Testimoniis, -- derstood, it proves what He intended to prove, and no more. It proves the Necessity of Baptism to Life; because the Incorporation in Christ, upon which Life depends, cannot so much as commence without it. It does not prove the like Necessity of the Eucharist; because the Incorporation required subsists before it, and without it, and, while not impaired, does not want to be renewed, or refresh'd by it: Besides, that while a Person, by Virtue of One Sacrament, is as compleatly Partaker of Christ and the Holy Spirit, as He could be, in His Circumstances, by Both; He is supposed, in true and just Construction, to have Both Sacraments in One.

To be short, St. Austin did not cite John vi. in Order to prove that Infants must literally partake of the Eucharist; but to prove that They must really have that Incorporation which is common to Both Sacraments, and which, when once given in Baptism, and not Bb 4 impaired nonne Veritas sine ulla Ambiguitate proclamat, non solum in Regnum Dei non baptizatos Parvulos intrare non posse, sed nec Vitam æternam posse habere præter Christi Corpus, cui ut incorporentur, Sacramento Baptismatis imbuuntur? De Peccat. Merit. L. III. c. 4. N. B. He here resolves the Salvation or eternal Life of Baptiz'd Infants into Their-Incorporation (not into Their participating of the Eucharist) even when He quotes John vi. among other Texts, to prove it: And He, in the same Breath, fully and expressy maintains, that Infants, in and by Baptism, singly, obtain that Incorporation to which eternal Life is annex'd.

impaired by any subsequent Sins, makes Them, to all real and salutary Purposes, as much Partakers of the Lord's Table, and of all the Benefits of it, as the participating of the outward Eucharist could do. Literally They have not Faith; and yet They are of the Number of the Faithful: Literally They exert no Repentance; and yet They are considered as Repenting's. Even so, and for the like Reason, tho literally They are not Communicants; yet They are considered as Such, and really are so in sull Virtue, and beneficial Effects. This Principle St. Austin bare in Mind, and constantly supposed, where He did not directly say it.

II.

Having thus far cleared, as I conceive, St. Austin, the principal Man, there will be the less Need of saying any Thing of Those Who followed Him in the same Argument; because They are All of Them to be interpreted by the same Rule, and must stand or fall with Him. But because Pope Innocent I, Marius Mercator, Faustus Reiensis, Pope Gelasius I, and particularly Fulgentius, All within less than fourscore fourscore Years of St. Austin, have dropp'd some Things to the like Purpose, and may be of some Use for farther Illustration, or Confirmation of the same Thing; I shall now proceed to consider Them also, and in the same Order as I have named Them.

Vid. Augustin, de Peccator. Merit, L. I. c. xix,

Pope Innocent I, in the Year 417 (five Years after St. Austin's first engaging the Pelagians in such Manner as has been mention'd) gives His Thoughts upon this Article, in a Letter fent to the Council of Milevis then fitting upon the Question. He, I say, in that Letter, after quoting John vi. 53. to prove that Infants can have no Life without Baptism, proceeds thus: "They Who maintain that "Infants have Life without Regeneration, " feem to Me to be disposed to make void " even Baptism it self, by Their afferting that " fuch Infants have That, which it is believ-" ed They cannot have conferr'd upon Them " any other Way than by Baptism. If there-" fore their Meaning is, that the Want of " Regeneration is no Disadvantage, They must " of Confequence fay, that the Sacred Waters " of Regeneration are of no Advantage"." We may

t Illud vero quod eos vestra Fraternitas asserit prædicare, Parvulos æternæ Vitæ Præmiis sine Baptismatis Gratia posse donari, persatuum est: Niss enim manducaverint Carnem Filii Hominis, may observe from this Paragraph, that the Life. spoken of in John vi. (whatever Sacrament inay there be referred, or alluded to) is exprefly declared to be conferred in or by Baptism. Suppose it to be given in the Eucharist; yet it is first given in Baptism, yea and in the Eucharift by virtue of Baptism: The Argument turns upon that very Supposition: From whence it is manifest, that our Author conceived the Euchariffical Incorporation to be Nothing more than the Baptismal one continued, or renewed: Consequently, if the Baptismal one remained entire; and unimpaired (as in Infants it must) there could be no Need of the Eucharist to Them; because Their Baptism hitherto superseded it, or rather, virtually and eminently contain'd it.

For, as Baptism alone was both Faith and Repentance to fuch Infants, according to the Principles of that Ageu; fo was it likewise the Eucharist to Them, for the same Reason, and in the same Way of favourable and natural Construction.

As

[&]amp; biberint Sanguinem ejus, non habebunt Vitam in Semetipsis. Qui autem Hanc [i. e. Vitam] eis fine Regeneratione defendunt, videntur mihi ipsum Baptismum velle cassare, cum prædicant Hos habere quod in Eos creditur non nisi Baptismate conferendum. ergo nihil volunt of cere non renasci, fateantur necesse est nec Regenerationis Sacra Fluenta prodesse. Innocent. Epist. apud Augustin. Vid. Augustin. de Peccat. Merit. L. I. c. 19, 27.

As Austin and Innocent Both hit upon the fame Thought, and held a Correspondence with each Other; it has been made a Question, Which of Them first suggested it, or Which gave the first Hint: But perhaps Both might have borrowed it from St. CYPRIAN, Who had made use of the same 150 Years before w. CYPRIAN at that Time was aware, that John vi, did not so properly teach the Necessity of the outward Eucharist, as the Necessity of that inward Incorporation with Christ, signified and exhibited in the Eucharist: Which, being begun in Baptism, looked back to it, and resolved into it, and still rested in it, as in its proper Seat: Therefore, whatever is said in John vi. of the Necessity of having Part in Christ, in order to Life, does, at the same Time, proclaim the absolute Necessity of having it in the first Instance, viz. in Baptism, without which there can be no second. Wherefore BEDE (Who was a knowing Divine) understands John vi. 57. of what is common to Both Sacraments *.

Qur

W Ad Regnum Dei nisi baptizatus & renatus suerit, pervenire non posse. In Evangelio cata Johannem: Nisi quis renatus suerit, &c. nisi ederitis Carnem Filii Hominis & biberitis Sanguinem ejus, non habebitis Vitam in wobis. Cyprian. Testimon. L. III. e. xxv. p. 314.

Bed. in Genes, L. I.

Our next Author to INNOCENT, is MARI-US MERCATOR, Contemporary with Him, and join'd in the same common Cause against the Pelagians. He speaks highly of the Graces and Privileges of Baptism, as amounting to Salvation, Redemption, and Renovation. Afterwards, quoting John vi. 53. which He appears to understand as belonging, or alluding, to the Eucharist, He takes notice, that without Baptism, no One uses that Other Sacrament, nor is Partaker of ity: Where He feems to distinguish between using that Sacrament, and partaking of it. Most certainly, no One comes to the Eucharist 'till He has been baptized, neither does He favingly partake of it (directly or indirectly, literally or interpretatively) without being first regenerate by Baptilm: Therefore, without all Controversy, and beyond all Pretence or Evafion, an unbaptized Infant partakes not of that Sacrament in any Sense, nor feeds upon the Body or Blood

of

Videamus Baptisma ipsum, cujus Virtutis sit, quotve & quantas habeat Vires, & effectuum causas. Dicit de illo Paulus Apostolus: Qui Nos redemit, salvos scit per Lavacrum Regenerationis & Renovationis. Ergo, & Salus, & Redemptio, & Renovatio est. Nullane ergo Pena erit non-baptizatis Parvulis, non habere Salutem, Redemptionem, Renovationem?———— Non manducare Carnem Domini, & bibere Sanguinem ejus? De quo Sacramento Vox Salvatoris est, nist manducaveritis, &c. Quod certè, sine ulla Tergiversatione, sine Baptismo Nullus usurpat, nec sit illius Particeps Sacramenti. Mercat. Subnotat. c. viii. p. 53.

of Christ. Thus far was supposed clear and unquestionable; and it was sufficient to silence the Pelagians, with whom the Author was concern'd, and fo He proceeded no farther. But had the Question been put, whether a Baptized Infant, as Such, might be look'd upon as a Partaker of the Eucharist, virtually or in Effect, being Partaker of Salvation and Redemption in Christ; The Author has left Room enough for resolving the Question in the Affirmative; yea He has, by Intimation and Implication, fo refolved it. Nestorius, in the fame MERCATOR, does it more plainly and directly: For He afferts, that the Body and Blood of Christ, do, by Baptism (N. B.) loose the penal Sentences, which stand in Force against All the Unregenerate z. What is This, but faying that Infants, in and by Baptism, are Partakers of Christ's Body and Blood, and so, in effect, are Communicants without literally. receiving the outward Communion?

The Hypognosticon, which has fometimes been ascribed to St. Austin, is now believed by the best Criticks, to belong to our Mercator. There we are told, that Infants, z — Auferet enim secum Unusquisque (Catechumenus) parnales Sententias adversum Naturam prolatas. Non enim sactus est Particeps Corporis ejus & Sanguinis, qui per Baptismum has Sententias solvit, &c. Mar. Mer. p. 77.

born under Defilement, are cleansed, in Baptifm, by the Blood of Christa: Consequently, They are Partakers of the Blood of Christ, in and by Baptism. The same Author, after quoting John vi. 53. to prove, against the Pelagians; that Infants could not be faved without Baptism; asks; How They could have the Life of the Kingdom of Heaven, without being born again of Water and of the Spirit; being neither fed with the Flesh of Christ, nor made to drink of His Blood shed for Remission of Sins b? Had He intended This of their literally partaking of Both Sacraments. He must have denied the Sufficiency of Baptism alone to Remillion; which would be flatly contradictory to his express Doctrine in the Passage before cited, and other Places also of the same Treatisec: Therefore He must mean, that Baptism alone supplies all the Uses of the other Sacrament, making the Person, for the Time being;

De Quomodo igitur Vitam Regni Cælorum promittitis Parvulis non renatis ex Aqua & Spiritu Sancto, non cibatis Carne, neque potatis Sanguine Christi, qui susus est in Remissionem Peccato-rum ? Ibid. Lib. V. c. v. p. 40.

² Hoc Como Peccati, quo nascuntur Squalidi, ut in Regnum Coelorum ingrediantur immaculati, immaculato, per Baptimum, Sanguine Christi mundantur. Hypognost. L. V. c. ii. p. 37. Augustin. Opp. Tom. X.

c Omnino in Remissionem Peccatorum baptizantur & Parvuli: Alioquin non habebunt in Regno Coelorum Vitam. Dimittitur enimeis Regeneratione Spiritali quod traxerunt; ut sepe dixi, ex Adam generatione carnali. C. viii. p. 42.

ing, a Partaker of the Body and of the Blood of Christ: And indeed, He almost says it in Terms, when He says of such Infants, that They are baptized in the Blood of Christ, and at the same Time calls Baptism their Drink.

FAUSTUS REIENSIS, supposed to be the Author that goes under the Name of EUSEBIUS EMISENUS, argues against the Pelagians from John vi. 53. much after the same Way, and is to be interpreted by the same Rules e. As I have Nothing very particular to observe from Him, it may suffice just to have mention'd Him in his Turn. He flourish'd about A.D. 472.

Pope Gelasius flourish'd in the Close of the same Century, about A.D. 492. He reinforces the same Argument for the Necessity of Infant-Baptism, drawn from John vi. 53: insisting upon it, that Infants cannot have Life without eating Christ's Flesh, and drinking His

Blood;

d Attende Edictui ejus: Non Opus eft sanis Medicus, sed male habentibus. Et adversus eum falsum de Parvulis dicere conticesce, qui Eis Potum, non sanis, sed ægrotantibus Baptismum in suo Sanguine procuravit. Ibid. c. viii. p. 42.

e Niss manducaveritis, &c. Quod Testimonium contra Pelagii Blasphemias evidentissimum atque validissimum est, qui asserere arrepta Impietate præsumit, non prapter Vitam, sed propter Regnum Cælorum Baptismum Parvulis conferendum. Sub his enim Dei Verbis, quibus Evangelista pronuntiat, non habebitis Vitam in vobis, aperte intelligenda est omnis Anima munére Baptismi yacua, non solum Gloria carere, sed Vita. Faust. Regiens. in Pasch. Hom. V. p. 267.

Blood; nor so eat and drink, unless baptized. He may be understood of spiritual Feeding, abstracted from the Eucharist. For He does not fay, that They must so eat and drink in the Eucharist: But He afferts, that Infants obtain Life by Their Baptism, and that They are translated to God's right Hand by Sacred Regeneration f. This is too much for Him to have faid, had He thought that the actual Use of Both Sacraments had been as necessary as One: But if the Prime Sacrament, in fuch a Case, was thought to be Equivalent to Both, or eminently to contain Both, then all is rational and right.

We may now come down to Fulgentius, at the Head of the next Century. He indeed was the first Man who spake clearly, fully, and distinctly to the Point now in Hand, having a particular Occasion for so doing. The Difficulty

f Quia propria non habent ulla Peccata, constat eis sola prorsus Originalia relaxari. Itaque omnibus, etiam folis, remissis, Vitam per Baptismum consequentur æternam, &c. - Unde & Dominus ait (quod utique nisi baptizatis convenit) Qui non manducaverit, &c. De Vita autem æterna Hoc dictum Nullus addubitat, quoniam Multi non manducantes hoc Sacramentum Vitam habere videantur præsentem. Nihil est ergo quod dicant quod non renati Infantes tantummodo in Regnum Calorum ire non valeant: - dum fine Baptismate Corpus & Sanguinem Christi nec edere valeant, nec potare, fine autem hoc Vitam in semetipsis habere non possint. - Baptizatos finant ad dextram salutarem sacra Regeneratione transferri. Gelas. apud Harduin. Concil. Tom. II. p. 890.

Difficulty had not been started before: Or there had appeared no Difficulty in it, among Such as understood the prevailing Principles of former Times. However, in Fulgentius's Days, Ferrandus, One of his Deacons, had proposed a Scruple to Fulgentius, about the Necessity or Use of the Eucharist to Those who had been baptized; desiring to know whether, if Any died immediately after Baptism, and before They could receive the Eucharist, They incurred any Damage, or none; and if any, how much, or what.

FULGENTIUS, without the least Scruple or Hesitation, immediately solved his Doubt, by telling Him, that from the Moment any Person was baptized, He was ipso facto a Communicant, a Partaker of the Bread of the Eucharist, as He was a Member of the Body signified in it, and as He was Himself a Part of That very Body, and of That very Sacrifice there offered; meaning the collective Body of true Christians. This He declares to be the Doctrine of the Holy Fathers before Him, which They had believed and taught as an unquestion-Vol. II.

⁸ Petimus ut veloci Responsione Nos instruas, utrum noceat, quantum noceat, an omnino nibil noceat, si Quis baptizatus in Nomine Sanctæ Trinitatis, sacro Cibo Potuque fraudetur. Ferrand. ad Fulgent. p. 215.

able Verity h. He goes on to confirm the same from a whole Sermon of St. Austin Himfelf i. From hence We may clearly perceive how to reconcile the more obscure Passages of St. Austin, or other Fathers, so as to make Their standing Doctrine of the Sufficiency of Baptism perfectly confiftent with what They have been thought to teach of the Necessity of Infant-Communion. They did not mean (as indeed They did never fay) that baptized Infants must prefently be admitted to the Lord's Table, or must receive the consecrated Bread, or Wine: All They really meant was, that unbaptized Infants must have Baptism, must have Regeneration, in Order to incorporate Them into Christ's Body, and to make Them truly Partakers of His Flesh and Blood. Being once so regenerate, and so incorporate, They were Communicants of Course, in Construction of Gospel-law, and in Churchmodum luculentum, &c. Fulgent. ad Ferrand. p. 226.

i Vid. Augustin. Serm. CCLXXII. p. 1103. Tom. V. Edit.
Bened. Conf. Serm. CCXXVII. p. 973. & Serm. CCXXIX.

P. 977.

h Tunc incipit Unusquisque Particeps esse illius unius Panis, quando cœperit Membrum esse illius unius Corporis, quod in singulis Membris, quando in Baptismo Capiti Christo subjungitur, tunc jam Deo viva Hostia veraciter immolatur. Illo enim Nativitatis Munere sic sit Sacrificium sicut sit & Templum. Qui ergo Membrum Corporis Christi sit, quomodo non accipit quod Ipse sit, quando utique illius sit verum Corporis Membrum, cujus Corporis est in Sacrissicio Sacramentum? Hoc ergo sit Ille Regeneratione Sancti Baptismatis, quod est de Sacrissicio sumpturus Altaris. Quod etiam Sanctos Patres indubitanter credidisse docuisse cognoscimus. Beatus etiam Augustinus de hac Re Sermonem secit admodum luculentum, & c. Fulgent. ad Ferrand. p. 226.

Church-Account, as much as if They had literally received the Holy-Communion.

FULGENTIUS therefore concludes His Epiftle with these excellent Words: " No One " ought to entertain any the least Doubt, but " that Every One of the Faithful is then made "a Partaker of the Lord's Body and Blood, " when He is made a Member of Christ's Body " in Baptisin. Neither can He be thought no " Sharer in the [Sacramental] Bread and Cup, "tho' He should depart this Life before He " eats of that Bread, or drinks of that Cup : " provided only that He retains his Union with "Christ's Body: For, He is not without a " Partnership in that Sacrament, or without "the Benefit of it, so long as He is Himself "That very Thing which The Sacrament im-" ports k."

This Resolution of FULGENTIUS may be sufficient to end all Dispute on this Head; confidering how clear, and how peremptory it is, and given in the Name of the Holy Father bek Nec Cuiquam esse aliquatenus ambigendum tunc Unumquemque Fidelium Corporis Sanguinisque Dominici Participem sieri quando in Baptismate Membrum Corporis Christi essicitur: Nec alienari ab illo Panis Calicisve Consortio, etiamsi antequam Panem illum comedat, & Calicem bibat, de hoc sæculo, in unitate Corporis Christi constitutus, abscedat. Sacramenti quippe illius Participatione & Beneficio non privatur, quando Ipse Hoc quod illud Sacramentum signiscat, invenitur, Fulgent. ibid. p. 227, 228.

fore Him; confidering likewife, how knowing, and how eminent a Personage He was, how near to St. Austin's Days, and how great an Admirer of Him and His Writings; an African, also, and the Mouth, as it were, of all the African Churches in His Time.

I am aware that Endeavours have been used to elude the Force of His Testimony 1. But the Pretences are flight and trivial, mostly built upon Misconception and Misrepresentation m, as every discerning Reader will perceive upon the flightest Examination: And therefore I shall spare my self the Trouble of confuting, or reciting Them n.

TII.

1 Whitby, Strictur. Patr. p. 214.

Bingbam, xv. 4, 7.

It is strangely mistaking Him, to say He resolved the Case into the Necessity of it, or unavoidable Impediment (fuch as in which the Ancients judged favourably of the want, even of Baptism it self) when He so plainly resolves it into quite another Principle, viz. That Infants baptized, are by Their Baptism Communicants in just Construction, and real Effect, as therein partaking of Christ, of His Body and Blood, yea and of His Table.

n Bede's Construction of John vi. 53. may give some Light to Fulgentius. Nemo absque hujus [Sacramenti] Consortio, Vitae Consors possit esse perennis: Nist enim manducaveritis, &c. Bed. in Genes. L. III. in Gen. xiv. 18, 19, 20. No one can have Part in eternal Life, without bawing Part in That Sacrament. So far is certain. But then it is to be considered, that every baptized Person, who has not forseited, nor impaired His Baptisin, continually has Part in, or partakes of the Lord's Table: He is a Communicant in Right, and in real Effect, without any Thing more. He is a Gueff of that Table, in the same Sense as He is a Citizen of Heaven.

III.

I have now purfued this Matter down from the Beginning of the Fifth Century, to the Beginning of the Sixth: So it rested, as I apprehend, till the Dark Ages came on; till the Close of the Eighth Century, or the Opening of the Ninth. Then began fome Variation in This Matter; when the ancient Principles might easily be forgotten, or else be misunderstood. From That Time, we may date the first Rise of the Doctrine of the Strict Necessity of Infant-Communion. About the Year 704, there are some Appearances of such a Notion's beginning to prevail o: But in the Century next following, it made great Advances; when it came to be a Rule, that a Presbyter should have the Eucharist always ready, to give to Infants, either as foon as baptized, or when in Danger of Death p; and that if a Bishop were not present to confirm a Child immediately upon Baptism, The offici-Cc 3 ating o Vid. Caroli M. Capit. prolix. de non adorand. Imagin.

L. II. c. xxvii. A. D. 757.

P Semper Eucharistiam Presbyter habeat paratam ut quando Quis infirmatus fuerit, aut Parvulus ægrotaverit, statim Eum communicet, ne fine viatico moriatur. Walt. Aurelian. c. vii. p. 461. Harduin. Concil. Tom. V. Conf. Regino. L. I. c. lxix. p. 57. Ivon. Decret. Part. II. c. xx. Burchard. L. V. c. x. Vid. etiam Martene De Antiq. Eccl. Rit. Tom. I. p. 160, 162. Tom. III. p. 548. Baluz. Not. ad Reginon. p. 551. Bingham, XV. 4, 7.

ating Priest should not wait, but should directly give Him the Communion q. These, and the like Rules, were plain Indications of fuch a Notion's prevailing in the Latin Churches of those Times. And One may draw a good prefumptive Argument from thence, that no fuch Principle had obtain'd in the earlier Ages, because no such Rules were then thought on, fo far as appears. One may observe, by the Reasons given in the oth Century, and after, for Infant-Communion, that the Advocates for it were far gone off from the antient Principles of the Church, and particularly from Those of St. Austin. For Instance, Jesse, Bishop of Amiens, about A.D. 814, insists upon Communion, that the Infant may become a Member of Christ's: And RABANUS MAURUS, A. D. 847. requires the fame, that 9 Postea-vestiatur Infans Vestimentis suis. Si vero Episcopus adest, statim confirmari Eum oportet Chrismate, & postea communicare : Et si Episcopus deest, communicetur a Presbytero. Pseud. Alcuin. Offic. de Sabbat. Pasch. p. 259. Conf. Martene, Tom. I. p. 192, 195, 197.

Ut Christi Membrum esse possit. Jesse Ambianens. apud Baluz. in Not, ad Regin. p. 552.

So far from it, that the Antients made no Provision for the Eucharift (like as for Baptism) in extreme Cases; never allowed any Deacon, much less a Laic, to administer. They suffered Many to die without Confirmation, in Country Villages, and fo of Course without the Eucharist (to which Confirmation ought to be prewious) apprehending no Danger to the Salvation of Infants by those Neglects. Vid. Hieron. Dialog. contr. Lucifer. c. iv. Conf. Concil. Eliberit. Can. LXXVII.

the Child may thereby become the Temple of God t: Both which Effects were fufficiently provided for by Baptism alone, according to St. Austin, and All the antient Fathers. No wonder therefore, if a wrong Practice came in, when once Men had forgotten the old and right Principles. How long, or how far the Doctrine of the Necessity of Infant-Communion prevailed in the West, does not certainly appear u. Archbishop L'ANFRANC, of the XIth Century, A. D. 1073, disowned it, declaring it no Doctrine of the English, or foreign Churches: And He scrupled not to argue against it from Scripture, and Reason, and likewise from St. Austin's Principles w.

The Greeks had not yet come into the Notion of the Strict Necessity of Infant-Communion; if we may judge by the Rule of CHRIST. ODULUS, Patriarch of Alexandria in the XIth. Century, A. D. 1048; which was, that, ordinarily, Communion should be administred to Infants along with Baptism; but that, in Cases of Extremity, Baptism only should be Cc 4 given, Ut Deum habere mereatur in se Habitatorem. Raban. Maur. De Instit. Cleric. c. 28.

It is thought to have continued in some Churches to the XIIth or XIIIth Century. See Bingham XV. 4, 7. Calveer. Ritual. Eccles. Tom. I. p. 306.

Lanfranc, Epist. ad Donat. p. 361.

given, without the Eucharist x: From which we may reasonably infer, that The Greeks of That Time did not think (whatever Others may have thought fince) that Baptism and the Eucharist were of equal Necessity: For, had They so conceived, They would have contrived, some Way or other, to administer Both together to every dying Infant. The more modern Greeks of the XIVth Century, and downwards, have pleaded warmly for Infant-Communion, and the Necessity of it, in their Disputes with the Latins y; grounding their Doctrine upon John vi. 53. rigorously interpreted: And yet They know very well how to explain That Text to a virtual, not literal Communion, as often as They have a Mind to prove from the same Text, that Saints departed were Communicants of the Altarz. I shall say Nothing of the present Practice of the Greek or Oriental Churches; because it would lead me too far, to do it distinctly; and a confused general

^{*} Quando Infanti Baptismus administratur, jejunus erit, & c. neque absque Communione licet Baptismum administrare. Hac autem intelligenda sunt juxta alios Canones multos, nempe si Periculum mortis non urgeat: Tunc enim, non modo licet, sed præcipitur administrare Baptismum absque Eucharistia. Renaudot. Histor. Patriarch. Alex. p. 423.

y Vid. Arcudius, p. 45—50, 324. z Vid. Nicol. Cabafilas Exposit. Liturgiæ. c. xlii. p. 253. in Biblioth. Patr. Tom. II. Ed. Paris. And compare Arcudius.

neral Account would be of no Use. Enough has been said to shew, that the Necessity of Infant-Communion has not the Countenance of Antiquity: The Rest is of small Moment, in comparison.

IV.

I intend not, however, by any Thing which I have here faid, to deny that the Antients admitted Persons much younger to Communion, than is now commonly done in these Western Parts of the World. All I insist upon is, that They gave not the Communion to mere Infants, but to Children, perhaps 5, 6, 7, or 10 Years old; and That under a Notion of prudent Caution, rather than of strict Necessity, so far as appears.

CYPRIAN (about A. D. 250) speaks of a young Girl's receiving the Eucharista: But learned Men b observe, that She might be, or probably was, 4 or 5 Years old: Others dispute the Probability, thinking she was not so old, but a mere Infant c: Whatever the Case was, it was a single Instance, so far as appears, and of one particular Church, the Church of Carthage;

Opusc. Sacr. Tom. I. p. 735.

• Peirce. Essay on Infant-Communion, p. 38, &c.

² Cyprian De Lapsis, p. 132. ^b Wall. Hist. of Inf. Bapt. Part II. c. ix. n. 15. Zornius Douse, Sacr. Tom. I. p. 735.

Carthage; and it is not faid upon what Principle such Practice was founded.

The Constitutions, called Apostolical, twice make mention of Children, as receiving the Communion d. They were Children, was sia, not mere Infants, not viπτοι. They might be 7 or 10 years old, or older: From whence an Argument may be drawn, that the Infants did not communicate; fince They are not fo much as named in this particular Recital.

TIMOTHY, Bishop of Alexandria, in his Canonical Answers, about A.D. 380, puts the Case of a Lad of seven years old, a Catechumen, being present at the Oblation, and eating of it thro' Ignorance; and He determines, that fuch Lad, fo receiving, should immediately be baptized. One may reasonably from thence conjecture, that feven Years of Age was then thought an Age proper for receiving. For how could fuch a Lad steal in and receive, if other Lads of His Size or Years did not then come to the Lord's Table? One may farther perhaps infer, that That was the lowest Age then and there approved of for the Communion: For otherwise, why should He so particularly have mention'd That Age, or why should He not have made the same Rule for Lads of 4, 5, or 6 Years

d Corstit. Apostol. L. VIII. c. xii. p. 403. c. xiii. p. 409. c. xiii. p. 409. c. xiii. p. 409.

6 Years old, had Any come to Communion for young in That Church?

Pope LEO (about A.D. 440) speaks of communicating Infants: But by His Account of Them, They were old enough to make Their Responses, to say Amen, if not more f.

DIONYSIUS fo called (probably Petrus Fullog, who lived about A. D. 480) is supposed to fpeak of the Communion as given to Children*: But, an attentive Reader will fee Reafon to believe, that the whole Passage is to be understood of Baptism only h.

GENNADIUS MASSILIENSIS mentions Children as admitted to Communion, after returning from Heretical Assemblies to the Church: And He would have Others answer for Them with Respect to Their Faith. He lays down the same Rule for Adults in that Case, if flow of Understanding i. So that the Parvuli, the Children, of whom He speaks, might be 7, or 10 Years old, if not more: For Boys at That Age might not be capable of giving any rational, fatisfactory Account of their Faith, in disputed Articles.

GREGORY

Leo. Epist. 49. p. 518. Tom, I. Edit. Quenell. Vid. Lequien. Dissertat. Damascen. p. 43.

^{*} Dionysiaster. Eccles. Hierarch. c. vii. n 11. p. 417. De Conf. Pseudo-justin. Quæstion. ad. Orthodox. 375, 376. And Vasquez. Tom. III. p. 337.

Gennadius Mosfil. Dogmat, c. xxil.

124. An Enquiry concerning

GREGORY of Tours (about A.D. 573) tells us a Story of an Infant-Jew who happen'd to receive the Eucharist among the Christian Children, Communicants to The Story perhaps is fabulous: But His Manner of telling it is an Argument of the Practice of His own Time. However, That Child which He speaks of was supposed to be old enough to make a Report of what had been done, and therefore was not a mere Infant.

The XIth Council of Toledo (A. D. 673) has been sometimes cited in Favour of the Practice of Infant-Communion; where, in Mitigation of a former Canon (which had laid the Cenfure of Excommunication upon Those who did not eat and drink the Elements, when administred) They provided a Salvo or Exception for Persons under Sickness, or under a State of Infancy: But I leave it to the Learned to confider whether the Words may not rather be understood of Adult Persons, who might happen to be speechless thro' some Disease, and so not able to give Account of Themselves, during That Exigency: For, it would be strange to imagine, or suspect that any mere Infants shou'd be excommunicated.

BEDE,

^{*} Gregor. Turon. p. 732. Ed. Bened. Niceph. L. XVII. c. xxv.

BEDE, in the Year 734, speaks of Boys and Girls coming to Communion, and both approves and advises it! But He says not a word of mere Infants: Which yet He could not well have omitted on That Occasion, had it been the Practice of His Time, or had He entertain'd any Notion of the strict Necessity of Infant-Communion.

The Gregorian Sacramentary does indeed speak very plainly of Infant-Communion m: And so likewise does the Ordo Romanus n: But Both those Offices, considered as interpolated, and according to the State they now appear in, may reasonably be judged to bear Date no earlier than the Decline of the VIIIth Century, or Beginning of the IXth, if so early o. By That Time, it is granted Infant-Communion had crept in, and under a Persuasion of its Necessity, sounded upon John vi, taken together with some Passages of the Antients misunderstood.

The

¹ Beda Epist. ad Ecgbert. p. 311. Edit. Cant.

^m Pontifex redit in Sacrarium, expectans ut cum vestiti fuerint
Infantes, confirmet Eos, Qui etiam non prohibentur lactari ante Sacram Communionem. Gregor. Sacram. L. I. c. xx.

n Illud autem de Parvulis providendum est, ut postquam baptizati suerint, nullum Cibum accipiant, nec lassentur antequam communicent Sacramenta Corporis Christi. Ordo. Rom. I. p 28. in Mabillon. Mus. Ital. Tom. II. Cons. Martene de Antiq. Eccl.

Rit. Tom. I. p. 177, 179, 180, 181, 198.

See Dodwell, of Incensing, n. 55. p. 218.

Dallaus, De Confirmat. p. 377.

Oudin, Tom. I. p. 1818.

The Sum is, that the early Ages did give the Communion, not to mere Infants, but to Children of ten years old, or perhaps seven; scarcely to Any younger; unless we may except the fingle Instance reported by CYPRIAN. I mention Ten years old; because That was the Age pitch'd upon as the most likely for Children, ordinarily, to become guilty of actual Sin, or for Sin to be imputed P. I mention seven; because some Children (of better Education, or riper Capacity) might even at that Age be thought capable of Sin: Or That Age might be pitch'd upon for the greater Caution and Security: Such feems to have been the Rule formerly in the Church of Alexandria; as I have before hinted, and of some Latins in later Times 9: And fuch is the Rule of the Muscovites at This Day'; derived, very probably, from ancient Tradition. For, tho' the Ancients constantly maintain'd the Sufficiency of Baptism to the Salvation of Infants; yet They extended it not beyond the Time of Their Infancy, or Non-age; conceiving it to hold certainly while fuch Children should be incapable of actual

P Vid. Timoth. Alex. Canonic. Respons. Conf. Martene, De Antiq. Eccl. Rit. Tom. I. p. 431. 9 Vid. Martene, Anecdot. Tom. IV. p. 712, 1082. Apostol. Const. L. VII. c. xxv. p. 374. F Harris's Voyages, Vol. II. p. 182, 238. Brerewood, p. 167.

Sin, or grievous Sin, and no longer's: So that as foon as a Child should arrive to the Age atwhich Sins are imputable, They might think the use of the other Sacrament necessary, or at least expedient and safe. The Doctrine of our Church is; that it is certain by God's Word, that Children which are baptized, dying before They commit actual Sin, are undoubtedly saved:: In which Words the undoubted Sufficiency of Baptism is extended no farther, than to the Time of committing actual Sin. The Sufficiency of Baptism, while it excludes the Necessity of Infant-Communion, is no Argument by it felf against a more early Communion than is now in Practice amongst us: So that the Antients were very confistent in not admitting Infant-Communion properly fo called, but withal admitting Children of 6, 7, or 10 Years of Age to the Lord's Table.

However,

the same in Sense with what it first was.

See St. Austin above, p. 8, 10.

The fame Principle obtain'd down to the IXth Century, as appears from Strabo, De Reb. Eccl. c. vi.

Rubrick at the End of the Office of Publick Baptism of Infants. N. B. This Rubrick in King Edward's First Book ran thus: And that no Man shall think, that any Detriment shall come to Children by differring of Their Confirmation, He shall know for Truth, that it is certain by God's Word, that Children being baptized (if They depart out of this Life in Their Insancy) are undoubtedly saved. In King Edward's Second Book, it ran thus It is certain by God's Word, that Children being baptized have all Things necessary for Their Salvation, and be undoubtedly saved. At the Restoration it was altered to what it now is, amounting to

128 An Enquiry concerning

However, it is certain that They did not, could not proceed upon John vi, in such Their Practice: For, had They founded it upon Verse 53d, rigorously interpreted, They must have given the Communion even to mere Infants, as the Greeks of late Times have done u. The Ancients seem to have founded Their Practice upon prudential Reasons, or general Reafons of Edification, pursuant to Christian Principles. They knew that Children were safe in Their Baptism, while guilty of no actual Sins: They knew not so certainly whether They were fecure after committing Sins, without Repentance and the Eucharist besides: They chose what They thought was fafest and best: Upon that Principle, probably (for I have no clear and certain Authorities for it) They gave the Communion to Children, at such an Age as I have before mention'd.

V.

Now, if it should be ask'd, whether We at this Day may not be obliged to do the same? I take leave to answer as follows.

1. Scripture

Nic. Cabafilas of the XIVth Century, Simeon Thessalonicensis of the XVth, and Others of the XVIth are cited in Arcudius de Concord. Eccl. p. 45, &c. 324, &c. Compare Gabriel Sionita in Leo Allatius, p. 1667.

Smith's Account of the Greek Church, p. 161.

Simon's Crit. Hist. p. 5, 6, 13.

Covel, p. 186.

1. Scripture hath not precifely determined. at what Age a Person should first be admitted to Communion. 2. There is no Example of admitting young Children to it, till the Time of CYPRIAN, the Middle of the Third Century: And it might be much later, before the Practice became general. 3. If the Practice was founded (as probably it was) upon This Principle; that as foon as Baptism became impaired, the Use of the Eucharist ought to come in as fubfidiary, or supplemental to it; it was a Principle of Weight, but not certain enough to create any strict Obligation: For, fince Baptism hath its federal Effect all along; who can prefume to fay, that the Baptism preceding, and the Repentance subsequent, may not be sufficient for Remission, till such Time as Children grow up to riper Age, fo as to be better qualified for Self-Examination, and for discerning the Lord's Body in the Holy Communion? 4. Since the Question seems to turn chiefly upon the Expediency of the Thing, and fince Expediency is known to vary with Times and Circumstances; it feems to be mostly left to the Wisdom and Integrity of Church-Governors, to determine, in every Church, what shall be judged, VOL. II. Dd upon upon the whole, most for the Honour of God, and the Interests of true Religion, and the Good of Souls. Much may be pleaded, on the Foot of Expediency, for the ancient Practice w: Much also may be pleaded, on the fame Foot of Expediency, for the Modern Ufage x. A Multitude of Circumstances must be taken into Account, in Order to form a clear Judgment upon the whole: And therefore, as I before hinted, it feems to be a Matter properly lodged with the Church-Governors; whose Directions therein are the safest Rule for private Christians to be guided by, and to fubmit to without Hesitation or Scruple. The Antients express'd Their Reverence for the Sacrament in a Way fuitable, perhaps, to Their Circumstances: The Moderns may express no less Reverence for the same Sacrament in a Way somewhat different, as Circumstances are also different. It is sufficient to have shewn, that the Antients did not practise Infant-Communion.

See Bishop Taylor's Worthy Communicant, Ch. iii. §. 2. p. 142, &c. Peirce's Effay, Part IV. p. 171, &c. * See Bishop Taylor, ibid. p. 147. Suicer. Thesaur. Tom. II. p. 1139. Bingham, XV. 4. 7. Arcudius, de Concord. Eccl. p. 44. Tower fon on the Sacraments, p. 282.

fant-Communion, properly so called, at all; nor give the Communion to Children under a Notion of such strict Necessity as hath been pretended. They had Their prudential Reasons for Their Practice in Their Times; and We also have the like prudential Reasons for a different Practice in Ours.

VI.

Before I take Leave of the Subject, it may not be improper to take fome Notice of the Conduct of the Romanists with relation to the Charge made against the Antients; as likewise of the Conduct of the Protestants in relation to the same Charge: Because, as I conceive, Neither of Them have been so careful to do the Antients Justice in This Article, as might have been expected, or desired.

The Romanists, for the Sake of Two great Popes, INNOCENT and GELASIUS, and for the Honour of the Trent-Council, are obliged, in a Manner, to acquit the Antients of teaching the Necessity of Infant-Communion: And therefore several very learned Writersy amongst Vol. II. Dd 2 y Arcudius de Sacram. Euchar. L. iii. c. xlv. p. 344, &c. Bona de Reb. Liturg. L. ii. c. xix. p. 711. Noris Vindic. Augustin. c. iv. p. 71. item p. 167.

Natalis

Them have particularly laboured in This Article, to take off the injurious Imputation. Nevertheless, They appear but faint or lame Advocates in This Cause; not maintaining it to Advantage, or not upon right Principles; because They are perplex'd with Another Cause, wherein They think it concerns Them to extol the Eucharist very highly, derogating as much from the Other Sacrament. cannot bear to be told, that Baptism carries in it all the Spiritual Graces and Privileges which the Eucharist can be supposed to do; or that it is as properly a Sacrifice as the Eucharist is; or that it makes a Person Partaker of the Body and Blood of Christ, for the Time being, as much as the Eucharist does. These are all true and found Principles; and upon Thefe Principles, the Antients maintain'd the Sufficiency of Baptism, in Opposition to any supposed Necessity of Infant-Communion: But as the prefent Romanists cannot go so far, without risquing the Credit of Transubstantiation, which They are strangely fond of; They cannot make Natalis Alexand. Tom. III. Sec. ii. Differt. XVI. p. 549. item Tom. V. p. 129.

Vafquez. in 3 Thom. Difp. 214. c. iv. S. 35, 36.

The Benedictine Editors of St. Auftin, Tom. X. Theol. Lovaniens. Augustin. Opp. 'Tom. VII. p. 189. in An-

make fo clear, or open, or full Defence of the Fathers in This Article, as might be wish'd. MALDONATE z, for His Part, was content to give Them up in This Point, for the Sake of establishing His own Construction of John vi. And a late zealous Defender of Transubstantiation, finding that the high Notions of the Efficacy of Baptism stood in His Way, has been pleased to infinuate, that what the Antients have fo frequently inculcated in Favour of One Sacrament, was to be understood of Both Sacraments in Conjunctiona; and thus He hoped to get clear of the plain and full Testimonies pleaded by the learned and judicious ALBER-TINUSb. This new Turn may indeed ferve the Romish Cause, in One Branch of Controverfy; but it is betraying it in Another, wherein the Credit of Pope INNOCENT, and of Pope GELASIUS, and of the Decrees of the Trent-Council appear nearly concern'd: For, unless the Fathers really taught the Sufficiency of Baptism alone, to such Purposes as have been mention'd, there is no effectual Way of clearing the Fathers from the Charge of maintaining the Necessity of Infant-Communion; tho' the Maldonat. in Johan. vi. 53. p. 1486, 1487, 1488.

 Touttæi Dissertat. præv. in Cyrill. Hieros. p. 192, 206, 208. b Albertin. de Eucharist.

the Trent-Council hath affirm'd that They stand clear of it.

As to Protestants, I cannot fay that They have conducted always unexceptionably in This Article: For tho', in the Controversy about the Eucharist, They have constantly pleaded the Authority of the Antients, as to making Baptism equivalent to the Eucharist in all Refpects, or in fome Respects more considerable, which is fo far right; yet, for the Sake of overthrowing Papal Infallibility, They have fometimes been too willing to give up Inno-CENT and GELASIUS, (and with Them St. Austin also, and other Antients c) with respect to the Necessity of Infant-Communion: Which, in Effect, feems to be pulling down with one Hand, what They build with the other. Either let the Antients be allowed to fpeak fully up to the Sufficiency of Baptism; and then They add much Weight to the Protestant Cause in the Controversy about the Eucharist: Or, if They were weak enough to affert the Necessity of Infant-Communion; let Them not be called in to prove that Baptism amounted e So Dr. Wall. Hist. of Inf. Bapt. Part II. c. 9. And Bingham XV. 4, 7. But Thorndike thought more justly of the Fathers in This Article, Epilog. p. 176. De jur. finiend. Controv. p. 285.

amounted to Spiritual Sacrifice, or that it was the same Thing, in Effect, with Feeding upon the Body and Blood of Christ. There is no maintaining both Parts, no reconciling both Ends of a Contradiction. One of the Positions, as they confront each other, must be given up: And I am willing to hope, enough hath been said to determine impartial Judges, which to give up, and which to retain.

FINIS.

BOOKS printed for W. INNYS at the West-End of St. Paul's, and Sold by R. MANBY, over-against the Old-Bailey on Ludgate-Hill.

A Review of the Doctrine of the Eucharist, as laid down in Scripture and Antiquity. By Daniel Waterland, D. D. Chaplain in Ordinary to his Majesty.

The Christian Sacrifice explain'd: In a Charge deliver'd to the Middlefex Clergy at St. Clement-Danes, April 20, 1738. To which is added an Appendix. By Daniel Waterland, D. D. Archdeacon of Middlefex, and Chaplain in Ordinary to his Majesty.

The Sacramental Part of the Eucharist explain'd: In a Charge deliver'd in part to the Clergy of Middlesex, at the Easter-Visitation 1739. By Daniel Waterland, D. D. 8vo.

Distinctions of Sacrifice: Set forth in a Charge deliver'd in part to the Clergy of Middlesex, at the Easter-Visitation 1740. By Daniel Waterland, D. D. 8vo.

Regeneration stated and explained according to Scripture and Antiquity, in a Discourse on Tit. iii. 4, 5, 6. By Daniel Waterland, D. D. 8vo.

Scripture Vindicated: In Answer to a Book, entituled, Christianity as Old as the Creation. Part I. The Third Edition. To which is prefix'd a general Preface.

N. B. The Preface may be had separate.

Animadversions upon a late Pamphlet, entituled, Christian Liberty afferted, and the Scripture-Doctrine of the Trinity vindicated. By a Clergyman in the Country.

The Church of England vindicated, in requiring Subfcription from the Clergy to the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion. In Answer to the Objections and Calumnies of a late Writer. 8vo.

The Plain Account of the Nature and End of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper, not drawn from, or founded on Scripture. In two Parts. 8vo.

